FIELD NARROWS IN G. O. P. RACE FOR GOVERNOR

White Label Pinned on Custer by Drys.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Going into the final week before the April 12 primaries, both the Republican and Democratic state campaigns have just reached the formative stage.

In this respect, as well as in most others, politicians consider this year's battles as extraordinary. For weeks and months they have lagged. In each instance there is an unusually large number of candidates for the governorship and other offices.

There are five major candidates for the Republican nomination for governor, and three for the Democratic. Everybody has been campaigning in his own way with few clearly defined issues.

A Process of Concentration.

The result up to this time has been confusion in the minds of even the candidates themselves. Now observers say the tendency is toward concentration on a smaller number of candidates on the Republican side, while on the Democratic there is said to be a general swing in favor of the regular organization ticket.

One of the impelling forces toward the elimination of some Republican candidates from the calculations of the leaders was the appearance yesterday of the final printed recommendations of the Anti-Saloon league. Candidates favored by this organization in the past have been able to dodge the actual label of the league, but the indorsements this year actually pin the white ribbon on Omer Custer, the state administration candidate.

Custer Desertions in City.

His name led all the rest in the league's message to its constituents and followers. That Custer did not persuade the drys not to label him was accepted by the leaders as proof that he desired the open indorsement for the good it might do him in the rural sections of the state. But the moment that this last word was said by the drys the Galesburg man's support from the wet Chicago ward committeemen mustered into his organization by state patronage began to shift around and prepare to throw their support to Attorney General Carlstrom or to Edward J. Brundage, two of the three candidates who have declared for repeal.

So far as could be discovered there was no inclination among these ex-Custerites to turn to William H. Malone, the "taxpayers' candidate," who has been making an active individual campaign but has failed to receive the O. K. of any substantial Republican organization unit.

Carlstrom or Brundage?

What most of the ward committeemen were trying to do was to determine whether Carlstrom or Brundage will be the stronger at the polls a week from Tuesday. Most of them said that Len Small, also a candidate, cannot win because he was badly defeated four years ago when he had both the city and the state machines with him, and because he is running as a dry downstate while his Chicago followers try to picture him as a wet.

This effort to select between Carlstrom and Brundage was seen reflected also in a report of the Crusaders, a militant wet politically operating organization which deferred action on the Republican governorship contest.

Custer Listed as Dry.

"All of the Republican candidates who have a chance in the primary election with the exception of Omer N. Custer, the candidate of Gov. Emmerson, the Anti-Saloon league and the W. C. T. U.," read the report, "are in favor of some measure of prohibition reform.

"At this time we are making no recommendations other than that which will accomplish the defeat of Mr. Custer, who, without question, if nominated, will take with him to the Republican national convention in June a dry state delegation who will vote for a dry plank in the Republican platform and also for the nomination of a dry candidate for President."

For United States senator the Crusaders recommended Senator Otis F. Glenn to the Republicans and Congressman William H. Dieterich to the Democrats.

Democrats Favor Reform.

"The Democratic candidates who have any prospect of nomination," read the part of the report dealing with the Democratic governorship contest, "are all for prohibition reform. We have no recommendations to make as to the choice of candidates."

The Democratic organization leaders admit that the prohibition issue

TAX SPENDERS 200 MILLIONS 'IN RED' THIS YEAR

Citizens Call for Budget Slashing.

As evidence of the need for economy in the operation of the local governments the citizens' committee on public expenditures yesterday gave out figures showing that the obligations of ten of the major tax spending agencies in Cook county, exclusive of operating expenses, are at least $200,000,000 in excess of their anticipated revenues for 1932.

In view of this vast difference between expected revenue and obligations the committee stressed the vital necessity of cutting all budgets to eliminate every possible item of expense during the current year. It appealed to citizens to demand that every conceivable expense that can be avoided be cut from the budgets.

The committee is headed by Fred W. Sargent, president of the Chicago and North Western railway. It was formed early in March to help reduce the costs of the local governments and at the same time maintain their services on an efficient basis. Its membership includes many prominent citizens and business men.

Total Debt $322,111,654.

In its statement the committee totaled the obligations of the ten tax spending agencies, exclusive of funded indebtedness, at $322,111,654. To that figure it added $57,874,056 as due during the current year for bond maturities and interest, making a grand total of $379,985,710.

As to the amount which will become available for payment of the obligations during 1932, the committee declared there is no method of accurately forecasting this. The tax collections transmitted to the ten tax spending bodies during 1931 totaled only $146,452,356, the committee said.

"It will be seen," said the committee's statement, "that the total obligations of the tax spending bodies named to be paid in 1932 are at least $200,000,000 in excess of anticipated revenues, and this is based on the most optimistic view that can be taken as to anticipated revenues.

"In addition moneys must be raised in some way to pay for current operating expenses."

The Roll of Obligations.

The obligations listed by the committee as are follows:

	Liabilities [exclusive of funded debt].	1932 Maturities of bonds and interest.
Cook county	$ 34,254,399	$ 4,355,910
Forest preserves	1,466,441	2,601,500
Sanitary district	19,968,378	12,152,507
City	100,157,267	25,163,536
Library	2,605,681	....
T. B. sanitarium	3,713,577	....
Schools	136,165,783	2,846,375
South parks	10,787,731	6,985,680
West parks	8,664,796	1,283,568
Lincoln park	4,387,701	2,485,580
Totals	$322,111,654	$56,874,056

"These figures," the committee said, "illustrate beyond peradventure the absolute necessity of eliminating every possible item of expense during the current year. Government costs must be cut to the bone. Any public official who would not join enthusiastically in a program to eliminate every item of expense that can possibly be avoided in a time like this is not loyal either to his city, his state, or his nation.

Cutting Budgets First Job.

"The committee on public expenditures has been assured of the cooperation of most of the tax spending bodies named. Most of the officials we believe to be acting in good faith and looking for a way to help pull the city out of its present financial debacle. The immediate and most vital thing is to cut all budgets everywhere.

"Chicago cannot revive its building industry and labor will not be able to secure employment through the building industries or industries generally until the tax burden has been reduced.

"The small home owner cannot afford to own a home and pay the taxes now assessed against his property. The committee on public expenditures appeals to every right thinking man and woman to become aroused over this situation and to demand of those who are making appropriations and fixing budgets and spending the taxpayers' money that every conceivable expense that can be avoided be cut from the budget and from the appropriations.

Can't Go On Piling Up Debts.

"We cannot go on piling up these obligations, for the investing public will not buy the city's securities unless and until all are satisfied that those in charge of public expenditures are in the utmost good faith, using

Fire Sweeps Home; Traps Family in Beds

Four persons were burned to death or suffocated by fire which early this morning swept the interior of the two story home of Walter W. Sneathen Sr., at 3635 Grand boulevard, Brookfield. A sixth person saved his life by leaping from an upper window.

THE DEAD:

W. W. Sneathen, 73 years old, retired manager of the American Express company.

Miss Louise Sneathen, 23 years old.

Buddy Hepburn, 5 years old.

Goldie Hepburn, 7 years old.

The Injured:

Leighton Hepburn, 46, stepson of Mr. Sneathen.

Mrs. Bess Hepburn, wife of Leighton.

The Sneathen home is in one of the finest residential sections of Brookfield, and only a block away from the downtown section.

The fire broke out shortly after 2 o'clock, supposedly from an overheated furnace or crossed wires, and spread rapidly upward. Clouds of smoke filled the frame dwelling. Within five minutes flames had licked upward to the first floor, and the smoke had filled the upper bed rooms. The smoke overcame the four victims as they slept.

Falls from Second Floor.

Hepburn, asleep on the second floor, was the only one aroused. He awoke dazed and in a stupor.

"Fire, fire," he cried. His voice was weak and he staggered to the nearest window to repeat his alarm to summon outside help. At the same time he stepped out, believing he would land upon the roof of the porch. However, in his dazed condition he had walked to the wrong window. When he stepped out he fell to the ground.

He still called for help. Three young men, returning home, heard his cries. They notified the fire department. In two minutes apparatus arrived under direction of Chief Fred McDonald. The firemen were followed by a squad of police headed by Police Chief E. J. O'Connor.

Carry Victims to Street.

By this time neighbors had reached the scene. With firemen and policemen they rushed into the flames and smoke, and carried out Sneathen, Miss Sneathen, the Hepburn children, and Mrs. Hepburn. Among the rescuers were Fred M. Walker, president of the Morton High school.

Telephone calls brought inhalator squads from adjoining suburbs. Crews were sent by River Forest, Riverside, Hinsdale, the Western United Gas and Electric company, and the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois. Each squad worked on one victim each. After an hour's work, Sneathen was pronounced dead.

The children and Miss Sneathen were also pronounced dead, but not until another half hour a resuscitation was attempted. For three hours it was undetermined whether or not Mrs. Hepburn was dead. A report was turned in to the coroner's office listing her as dead, but subsequent reports stated she was still alive.

Sneathen was an old time resident of Brookfield. For many years he was in charge of the American Express company's interests in the suburb. Hepburn is employed by the village of Brookfield. Miss Sneathen is said to be a milliner.

Elect Hitler! Crown Prince Tells Germany

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, April 2.—Frederick Wilhelm, former crown prince of Germany, today urged his countrymen to follow his example and vote for Adolf Hitler, National Socialist [Fascist] leader, in the final presidential election next Sunday.

Thus, the scion of the Hohenzollerns broke his word of honor to republican authorities who allowed him to return to Germany from exile only on a definite promise that he would abstain from politics. The prince issued a statement from his Castle Oels, near Breslau, warning his countrymen not to refrain from voting.

"I consider a united national front an absolute necessity for Germany," he said, "and therefore I shall vote for Hitler."

Other Notables Back Hitler.

The duke of Coburg and other notables, among them such old comrades of President von Hindenburg as Gen. von Buelow, issued similar appeals for Hitler. The United Patriotic league and the Landbund, a political farmers' organization, which at the first election on March 13 backed Theodore Duesterberg, Nationalist candidate, also went on record for Hitler.

Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, leader of the Nationalists who put Duesterberg up in the first election, will stay out of the campaign, although he was largely responsible for the necessity of holding a second election. He issued a statement leaving it to his followers to vote for whom they like. He will concentrate on the Prussian elections, which follow closely the presidential election, plunging Germany for the next three weeks into a turmoil of political agitation.

The political "Easter truce" ends tomorrow noon, when the campaign for the final election will be resumed full steam. During the week the republican reichsbanner organization will hold a total of 60,000 meetings in all parts of Germany for President von Hindenburg. The Hitlerites will go the same pace for Hitler.

Hitlerites "Beat the Gun."

The Hitlerites have won the first publicity skirmish in Berlin. They put up their posters throughout the city two days earlier than they were permitted under the Easter truce. The police wanted to tear down the posters, but tearing down the posters is punishable by law so they were permitted to remain.

TELLS WIFE OF YEARS OF STEALING; THEN HE DIES A SUICIDE

A husband killed himself by poison in a north side hotel room yesterday because he could bear neither to take his wife with him on the road to disgrace, nor to confess to her that for several years he had supported her "with the fruits of thievery."

He was Thomas E. Humphrey, 40 years old, of 1201 Chase avenue, Rogers Park, advertising manager for the Drying Systems, Inc., 1800 Foster avenue, makers of drying equipment. His body was found in an apartment hotel at 944 Montrose avenue. A bottle supposedly containing poison was beside him. On the desk lay a three page letter, addressed to his wife and two small children, Phyllis and Thomas Jr.

In the farewell note, Humphrey wrote: "I love you too much to make you go along with me on the path of disgrace, dishonor and poverty."

"By the time you get this letter you will know how I betrayed the company and Charley," continued the missive. "I have been rotten to the core, and the price of rottenness is death. I have not the nerve to face you and confess. I am a thief, and I have supported you for almost three years on the fruits of thievery."

Open Hospital in Capitol as Strain Grows

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 2.—[Special.]—The number of house members who have become ill as a result of the strain of battling over the tax bill and other legislation had mounted close to a score today and Dr. George W. Calver, house physician, set up a hospital in the capitol and increased his staff.

Only a few days ago Dr. Culver warned the legislators that they must find some way to lessen the strain which he characterized as "unparalleled in the experience of the older membership of the house."

One member, Albert Vestal of Indiana, Republican whip, died of a heart attack of a nature that results from overwork and prolonged nerve strain. Since then each day has brought additions to the list of ill members.

Ruth Bryan Owen [Dem., Fla.], daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, went to Atlantic City on advice of her physician to recuperate from an attack of influenza. Charles R. Crisp [Dem., Ga.] of the ways and means committee, who has borne much of the brunt of the tax battle, was ordered to the same city for a week's rest.

Bertrand H. Snell of New York, Republican floor leader, dropped out because of a severe cold. John Q. Tilson, former floor leader, of Connecticut, became ill while on an Easter trip. James M. Beck [Rep., Pa.] also has been forced by illness to take a respite.

JOHNSON BARES CAPONE 'DEAL' IN INCOME CASE

Defends Wilkerson at Hearing.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 2.—[Special.]—Judge James H. Wilkerson, properly and in his judicial capacity, knew of the legal discussions between District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson and attorneys for Al Capone by which Capone was to plead guilty and receive in return a recommendation for a two and a half year sentence.

But Judge Wilkerson did not bind himself to follow the recommendation of the district attorney. And when he refused to promise a light sentence he broke no faith.

Neither did he break faith when he sentenced Capone to 10 years in a federal prison and one year in the Cook county jail.

This was the story that District Attorney Johnson told the senate judiciary subcommittee on his trip to Washington to testify on behalf of Judge Wilkerson's elevation to the Circuit Court of Appeals. The official testimony before the committee headed by Senator Borah [radical Rep., Idaho] was made public today.

Could Not "Bind Himself."

"Judge Wilkerson approved of the making of the recommendation," Mr. Johnson told the senators, but he also reminded them that no judge can bind himself.

"The judge did not at any time say that he would follow the recommendation?" demanded Senator Robinson [Rep., Ind.].

"Senator, no judge could do that," replied Mr. Johnson.

"I know that," Senator Robinson came back, "but I am asking you for a definite statement that he did not at any time."

"In expressed words?" asked the district attorney.

"Yes."

"No sir, he did not," answered Mr. Johnson.

No Mystery, He Explains.

There was no mystery about the matter, he declared. What made Judge Wilkerson take the position he did, of announcing from the bench that he would be bound by no agreement, was the "unbelievable arrogance" of Al Capone.

"The defendant," said Mr. Johnson, "is a man of unbelievable arrogance. Under this plea of guilty, which he knew involved a penitentiary sentence, the first thing that happened, to my utter astonishment, was this—I had never stated publicly what this recommendation would be, nor had any of my assistants or the agents of the government, who were very trustworthy, and I am sure they observed this confidence.

Recommendation Published.

"On the very afternoon that the pleas of guilty were entered an afternoon newspaper published in headlines, not what the district attorney's recommendations would be, but what the judgment of the court would be. And that brought comment from all over the country.

"Then the defendant set out upon this course. The Derby came about that time at the Washington Park race track and Al Capone has a manner of dressing in vivid colors that attracts attention to himself. He is a fellow with a big, hulking figure and a flaming scar on his cheek, and everybody recognizes him. He had a box out in front where everybody could see and that was heralded in the newspapers."

Tells of Capone's Actions.

Mr. Johnson told how Capone had disported himself at Benton Harbor, how his bodyguard walked about openly, hands thrust in their coat pockets, and how Capone ordered a new suit every other day, specifying that the right hand coat pocket be extra large and double lined.

Capone himself, said the district attorney, had given out the information that the recommendation of leniency would be for two and a half years. Judge Wilkerson, he said, had consulted with him about jailing Capone in order to stop the spectacle he was making of himself and the indirect affront to the court that his conduct afforded.

In effect, the Johnson testimony showed, the announcement of Judge Wilkerson in open court that he would not be bound by any agreement was forced on him by Capone himself in order to protect the integrity of the court.

In order to give the committee

SENATORS HEAR STORY OF "BARGAIN" WITH AL CAPONE

background of the Capone case District Attorney Johnson went back into Chicago's gang history.

He told how he had come into office at the height of the gangsters' power, how some of them posed as political leaders, and went to banquets and mingled with public men.

He recounted the details of the feud between Al Capone and Hymie Weiss, who "scorned the Capone crowd because they were engaged in prostitution, particularly Ralph Capone, Al's brother." His story took in Weiss' "blasting" of the Hawthorne hotel at Cicero with machine gun fire and then Weiss' murder and the wounding of his lawyer, W. W. O'Brien, in front of Holy Name cathedral.

Capone Becomes "Supreme."

"That rather ended the big gang's opposition to Capone," said Mr. Johnson. "Capone became supreme. They organized themselves in Cicero, and there we found that they would have their places, and sometimes in some of their places they had steel doors with rifle slits in them, also revolving floors, floors that would tip up and that they could hide under, and things that read like fiction."

He told the committee how, late in 1927, he had enlisted the aid of Washington, but that undercover agents were discovered and the government officials forced to withdraw them for fear of their lives.

"The investigation did not get far," the district attorney said, "but it resulted in this—there was one gang headed by Ald. Titus Haffa, member of the city council. Their racket was bootlegging and gambling. They operated stills. They were all convicted and received two sentences in the penitentiary."

Suggests Tax Attack.

Again he came to Washington, said Mr. Johnson, and suggested that the income tax laws might be used against the gangsters.

Under this program Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake were convicted.

Ralph Capone's indictment followed, and then that of Lawrence O'Brien and of Gene Oliver. Demurrers were filed in all these cases, said Mr. Johnson. They were argued before Judge Wilkerson, who sustained the government in all of them.

Every case, said the district attorney, has since resulted in a conviction, with the Ralph Capone and Oliver cases furnishing the key cases.

Witnesses Are Slain.

Mr. Johnson told how Ralph Capone's bank account was investigated, and how gangsters threatened the government's witnesses.

"Generally, in dealing with these cases," he declared, "we encountered terrific violence."

He would give the committee, District Attorney Johnson said, an example of the conditions under which convictions had to be sought, and he described a case in which there were 21 defendants. Of that number, he said, six were murdered before the case came to trial. And eight of their associates, including government witnesses, also were murdered, making fourteen in all.

[This part of Mr. Johnson's testimony referred to the indictment in 1925 of 31 Chicago Heights bootleggers headed by Philip Piazza, operator of the Milana café. This was before Mr. Johnson took office, and when the case was ordered disposed of, about the first of 1928, investigation disclosed that six defendants had been murdered, including Piazza. In addition, eight associates of the booze ring, including prospective defendants or witnesses, had been murdered, making the total fourteen. Besides Piazza, those slain were Guardierri Pulgini, Harry Fuller, Joseph Cagiando, Joseph Fasso, Victor De Frank, James Lamberta, Mrs. Crystal Barrier, Frank Camera, Joseph Salvo, Joseph Catanda, Giuseppe Nerone, Francisco Capello, and Anthony De Steffano.]

Witnesses Fear "Rides."

In the case of Phil Colinger, one of the Capone gang, said Mr. Johnson, two witnesses were murdered. The stock reply of witnesses brought before the grand jury was, "If you want to send me to prison, all right, but I will not talk because you know I will be taken for a ride."

"I had a rather painful experience where we convicted a man by the name of Basile," said the district attorney. "He was about to go to prison. He had been associated with the Juliano mob. They had 62 murders there in Chicago Heights in five years, and Basile gave evidence he had been a partner of Juliano, that he quarreled with him, and Juliano had paid $5,000 to a gunman by the name of Schemer Drucci to kill Basile, and Drucci was shot and killed by a policeman before he could execute the murder.

Murdered That Night.

"He gave evidence which was very helpful to the government, and just before Christmas in 1929 I took him before the grand jury and talked to him till about 11 o'clock and we were getting ready to return an indictment, but that night he was murdered before nine o'clock."

Bringing his testimony up to the Al Capone case, Mr. Johnson told the committee that they had first ascertained who Capone's partners were.

"There was a very dangerous underworld character by the name of Jack Guzik," he said, "who established himself in a very nice home just around the corner from me in the quiet neighborhood in which I live. Strange to say, nearly all the gangsters are married and bring up families.

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, who sentenced Capone to 11 years, and whose nomination to Appellate court is being debated.

"Jack Guzik is the conniver and the corrupter of this crowd. Al Capone represents the force and spectacular leadership.

Ralph Capone Convicted.

"We had discovered these partners. First we convicted Ralph Capone, then Frank Nitti, who was a partner in these gambling enterprises. Ralph Capone's work was in prostitution and beer selling and gambling; Nitti was on the alcohol side of the racket."

The turnover of Guzik, Ralph Capone, and Nitti was very large, Mr. Johnson said, nearly 370 million dollars having been traced to them.

"Of course," he added, "it is the money which gives these people power."

The district attorney then outlined the convictions of members of the Capone gang, asserting that Jack Guzik and Oliver are going to the penitentiary "this week."

"Lawrence O'Brien is there," he said, "and Sam Guzik, Jack's brother, is there. A man by the name of Jack McGurn, who is said to be a machine gunner and one of the big killers for the mob, has been convicted. He is the man who in that St. Valentine's day massacre is said to have killed seven men at one stroke of the machine gun—he was credited with this."

"The state," Mr. Johnson said, "could not get enough evidence to convict McGurn of the Valentine day massacre, "but after the state's attorney had joined with the district attorney in 'working for law and order' they succeeded in convicting the machine gunner of violation of the Mann act.

"I prosecuted these gangsters for any federal violation," Mr. Johnson declared. "Two or three of their gunmen now are in process of deportation, have been ordered deported, and we used every possible weapon we could to convict them."

Sentenced by Wilkerson.

Senator Glenn interrupted Johnson's testimony to ask whether Druggan and Lake are in the penitentiary.

"Judge Wilkerson sentenced these men," the district attorney replied, "and they are now in the penitentiary. All the men I have mentioned," he added, "are convicted and in the penitentiary, every one of them."

"This process of breaking down these partners was a plan to reach Al Capone," he continued in his narration of the Capone case. "In every case we prosecuted we got some leads and some evidence. We were confronted with this kind of situation, that Al Capone was very shrewd in one way. He kept no bank account. We never could find a bank account. He kept no books. He signed no checks. In all our investigation we had one check he indorsed. He never did anything first hand. The system was he was always two or three removed from what happened, and it was nearly impossible to complete the chain leading to him."

Tells of Spy System.

Mr. Johnson told the committee that the gangs had "spies everywhere" while his forces were seeking to obtain evidence of Capone's income law violations. "It is inconceivable the information these spies got," he said. "They have an intelligence system that is remarkable. Sometimes I thought they would find out what I was thinking. It is baffling."

AL CAPONE.

And at the same time, he said, the investigators discovered "understandings" between the police and the gangsters. One of Capone's syndicates, he said, dealt in beer, and because all dealings in beer were in bulk these understandings were necessary to distribute it. "We encountered that many times," he declared.

While the investigators were endeavoring to unearth evidence regarding Capone's income tax another group which Mr. Johnson termed the 'district attorney's squad' was investigating Al's beer racket," he said.

Breweries Are Seized.

"This squad from the district attorney's office was led by a very capable young man by the name of Ness, who is a graduate of the University of Chicago, and he selected the squad. The plan was to cause the Capone gang to lose money, and this squad took brewery after brewery, and something like thirty-five of these very large, expensive trucks, that cost $4,000 or $5,000 each. They developed a system of detecting these violations and they pursued that relentlessly.

"That ended in an indictment against some sixty-two and later investigations have been pursued, and I think now that we have all the men who were connected with the Capone crowd on the beer side of the case."

Among those indicted on the beer charges, Mr. Johnson stated, were twelve of the "big leaders of organized crime." They will be brought to trial in the near future, he said.

"Under this indictment was Al Capone," he continued. "We are going to try this case, and I want to say that the evidence against Capone himself was rather circumstantial, because, of course, these leaders do not commit the substantitive offense."

Tells Capone's Life Story.

"Al Capone," he said, "began his career as a bartender in the Bowery of New York, when he was a young man. He was a member of the Five Point gang in New York. He came to Chicago in 1920 or 1922, I think it was as a bouncer."

Then he added this which was later stricken out: "Colosimo was quite a figure in Chicago in the red light district, and he was murdered. We do not know how, but some people say Capone and Torrio, who brought Capone out here. We do not know. That was never proven."

Opens Gambling Places.

Capone went into gambling and grew in wealth, Mr. Johnson went on with the story. In 1924 Capone opened three gambling places in Cicero. His bookkeeper was named Shumway. The books were kept with key numbers representing persons.

The district attorney told how Capone's ownership of the places was proved when he rushed in to stop a raid instigated by "a young minister by the name of Mr. Hoover."

"Al Capone rushed in," said Mr. Johnson. "It is one of the few places we have ever seen him in flesh and blood. He is very elusive."

From that point on the testimony followed closely the details that were brought our during Capone's trial. Capone was indicted in order to stop the running of the statute of limitations, but word of the indictment was suppressed. Capone's lawyer, however, learned of the indictment and came in, wanting to know whether a plea of guilty with a recommendation for leniency would be considered.

Takes Testimony to Capital.

This was in May, 1931. Mr. Johnson said he had gone to Washington armed with the testimony that had been taken before the grand jury.

"I reported the matter briefly to the attorney general," he said, "and asked him whether I should proceed on my own initiative as I always had done. The upshot was he directed me then to keep Assistant Attorney General Youngquist advised."

REV. H. C. HOOVER.

Mr. Ness' work as a government agent in raiding Capone beer establishments was praised before senators. The Rev. Mr. Hoover was lauded for aid in trapping Capone.

Answering a question by Senator Robinson [Rep., Ind.], he explained:

"What I did was occasionally to call Mr. Youngquist on the telephone. I think once or twice when he was passing through Chicago on his way to Minneapolis I saw him."

Confers with Attorneys.

"I had a number of conferences with Capone's counsel," the witness went on. "There was no secrecy about that in any way."

The district attorney declared that "there were a number of problems in the case that made me think it advisable to make a recommendation."

One, he said, was the question of the statute of limitations. There was doubt about it's running six years.

The so-called Mattingly letter, in which Capone appointed Mattingly, a Washington lawyer, as his attorney, was needed to link up sections of the case and there was doubt about the letter's admissibility in evidence.

Then Senator Borah put the question which the committee wanted answered:

"I want to get hold," he said, "of the relationship of your arrangement with Judge Wilkerson."

It was in answer to this question by Senator Borah that District Attorney Johnson told how Judge Wilkerson had been forced to make the statement he did in court by Capone's "unbelievable arrogance."

He reiterated again the difficulties that confronted them in bringing about Capone's conviction. He had consulted with Judge Wilkerson on the matter, he said, and had acquainted the Washington authorities with his intentions.

Receptive on Recommendation.

"There never was any mystery about it," Mr. Johnson declared. "I do not want to quote the court—the substance in brief was that he [Judge Wilkerson] said, 'I think what you told me was all right and you can make a recommendation.'"

Judge Wilkerson knew, said Mr. Johnson, that the recommendation would be for two and a half years.

Again Senator Borah insisted that "what we are trying to get at is the exact part Judge Wilkerson played in the indorsement of the recommendation for leniency and what was the cause of his announcement that he would not be bound by any recommendation."

In reply the district attorney quoted at length from the proceedings of the court on July 30 when the case came up for disposition on the pleas of guilty which Capone's attorneys had entered.

And it was then that Mr. Johnson recounted Capone's "brazen actions" and told how he had given stories to the press which brought out headline statements that the court was pledged to grant leniency to Capone.

Senator Borah objected that he still was unable to see why Judge Wilkerson had not carried out the district attorney's recommendation. He wanted to know whether the committee was to understand that if Capone had not acted as he did Judge Wilkerson would have carried the agreement into effect.

Can Only "Express Opinion."

"From this record," replied Mr. Johnson, "no one could say whether or not Judge Wilkerson would follow my recommendation. All I can express is an opinion. If defendant's counsel had not taken the position he did at that time, knowing Judge Wilkerson as I know him from being in his court so many years, my opinion is he would have substantially followed the recommendation.

"But, senator, I think this point is the one that stands out all over the record that the thing he made up his mind to do was to drive home to this defendant that he himself could not announce the judgment that was to be imposed upon him. And all over the record it stands out that before he would proceed he was driving defendant's counsel to take the position that the plea was unqualified."

Mr. Johnson said that Judge Wilkerson's action had embarrassed him but that he felt that the judge was perfectly justified in taking the course he did.

"Did Judge Wilkerson do anything which you consider judicially improper?" Senator Borah demanded.

The district attorney replied that he did not think so.

He told the committee how jurors were approached and how Capone's bodyguard sat in the courtroom. Off the record, he told the senators of "many tricks which lawyers other than those acting for Capone had played."

"I want to ask you this," said Senator Borah, as the hearing came to an end. "Is it your judgment and do you now state to the committee that in your opinion Judge Wilkerson acted from what he thought was the best interest of the public and what he thought was due to the proper administration of justice in all that he did in this matter?"

Course Is Defended.

"So far as his judgment goes in setting aside the pleas, yes," District Attorney Johnson answered. "I thought at the time of the hearing that the severity of the court, particularly at the opening proceeding, was not for the best interest, and yet that was purely a personal viewpoint of mine. Because I must admit that in the eyes of the general public it did make it very clear that the federal courts stood out and the defendants could not advertise the kind of judgment they were going to get."

Johnson Traces Gangs' Power to Illicit Gains of Dry Era

It was prohibition which made possible the growth of the crime-booze-gambling octopus whose front is Al Capone, George E. Q. Johnson, district attorney, declared last night in a Chicago interview following publication of the details of his testimony before the judiciary subcommittee of the United States senate. Mr. Johnson testified in behalf of Judge James H. Wilkerson, whose elevation to the Circuit Court of Appeals is under consideration by the senators.

As district attorney, Mr. Johnson has heretofore refrained from commenting on prohibition and his statement that the government's evidence shows that prohibition produced Al Capone and the organized crime he personifies was considered an important addition to the archives of the wets.

A Statement of Fact.

Mr. Johnson's assertions were made but as a statement of fact that is logically inescapable. He was asked to explain and elaborate upon the part of his testimony in Washington which dealt with the corrupting power and revenue of the gangs.

"Of course it is the money that gives these people their power," the district attorney had testified before the senators.

"I mean by that," he explained last night, "the gangsters' power to corrupt public officials so that they may operate. Our investigations have disclosed that the wealth of these gangsters is derived in the main from two sources, beer and gambling. The large profits to the gangs come from beer, not alcohol, and because of its bulk they monopolize the traffic in beer. They are the only ones with the power to procure immunity for the transportation of beer.

Shows Huge Gang Profits.

"Some idea of the enormous profits to these gangs was given in the income tax trials. The trial of Jack Guzik showed that deposits of more than $1,000,000 were made in one bank in three years. This account served as a clearing house for Cicero gambling controlled by the Capone gang, and the deposits represented profits, not turnover.

"The trial of Ralph Capone showed that deposits of almost $2,000,000 were made in a Cicero bank in three years. These profits were derived almost exclusively from the sale of beer.

"The trial of Al Capone showed that profits of $550,000 were made in the operation of a Cicero gambling house in two years, 1924 and 1925.

"The government's investigation of Terry Druggan and Frankie Lake showed that their profits from the sale of beer totaled approximately $2,000,000 a year from 1922 to 1925.

"In my testimony before the subcommittee, I mentioned the work of Eliot Ness of the special prohibition detail in conducting the investigation that led to the indictment of Capone and his gang on beer conspiracy charges. The breweries seized in this investigation had an output that, based on the current price of $55 a barrel, would net a return of $9,000,000 a year. These things I am giving you are facts, not conclusions."

Then Mr. Johnson was asked how and when syndicated gambling came about in Chicago.

Rise of Gambling Syndicate.

"Prior to 1922," he said, "so-called gentleman gamblers existed in Chicago, men who operated independent establishments with no connection with organized gangs. But in 1922 the gangsters muscled in on this gambling and took it over, and they have operated it on a syndicated basis since that time.

"The gangsters were able to take over gambling and organize it on a syndicated basis by virtue of their power to corrupt public officials. And this power to corrupt public officials came from the wealth derived from traffic in illegal beer."

Youth "Back from Grave," Prepares to Return Home

Arrangements were made last night to return Roy La Duke, 19 years old, to his father, Leon, in Concord, N. H. where the body of a youth which was believed to have been that of Roy is lying in a tomb in a cemetery. Last Friday the father placed in the tomb the body of the youth, who died in Guthrie, Ia., and who was identified by papers in his effects. Three days later La Duke received a letter from his son in Chicago. The son said that he had been robbed of letters and papers.

MILLS PUTS CUT IN FEDERAL COST UP TO CONGRESS

Administration in First Move to Save Money.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 2.—[Special.]—The much touted nonpartisan spirit in which the new revenue bill was pushed to its passage yesterday by the house of representatives went up in smoke today as Secretary of the Treasury Mills came out with a caustic attack on the Democratic house leadership for the vagueness of its program for cutting government expenditures.

The secretary's praise for the house's recognition of the necessity of balancing the budget was incidental to his demand that congress get down to work and vote through some real economies.

His statement came as the latest of a fast sprouting series of alibis, a whole crop of which showed up yesterday during the revenue bill's last hours in the house, in which the Democrats and Republicans hurled mutual charges and congress and the administration blame one another, for having gone to the taxpayers for an extra billion dollars instead of having kept their promises to curtail expenditures.

First Hoover Economy Move.

In one respect, Mr. Mills' pronouncment was notable. Though it came nearly four months after the time when such economies might have been recommended in the President's budget, it was the first time that an administration leader had come out with so definite a pronouncement in favor, not only of consolidating bureaus but of actually curtailing and suspending certain activities if only for the emergency.

Like a good many other administration recommendations, however, though it harangued congress on the need for economies, it failed to specify where the economies were to be made or to say what department heads and bureau heads would agree not to come running to congress with protests.

Claims of Saving False.

The Mills statement was noteworthy in another respect. At the same time that the secretary blamed the Democratic leadership for claiming as economies millions in appropriations that are merely postponed, he sought to give credit to the administration for having brought in a budget 370 million less than last year's when as a matter of fact some 150 millions of that decrease were made up of nonrecurring expenditures such as the appropriations for the farm board and shipping board revolving funds.

"The bill which passed the house of representatives will raise a very large amount of revenue," Secretary Mills began. "What, however, is more important is that the house in passing it has recognized and affirmed the necessity of balancing the budget. This is a great victory for sound financial principles. There can be no turning back."

Calls Bill Defective.

Mr. Mills called the differences as to estimates of revenue "minor in character." Then, praise disposed of, he quickly got down to the critical portion of his text.

"The bill contains serious defects and discriminations," he said. "I trust that these will be corrected in the senate and that the changes will ultimately be concurred in by the house.

"The treasury estimates that the bill, during the fiscal year 1932-1933 will raise approximattely $1,030,000,000 of new revenue, including increased postal charges, as against an estimated $1,241,000,000 needed to balance the budget, exclusive of the sinking fund requirements. It is apparent, therefore, that there is a gap of something over 200 million dollars which remains to be bridged.

"This, the ways and means committee and the house evidently plan to bring about by means of reduced expenditures."

Agree on Need of Cuts.

The treasury department and the house ways and means committee, said the secretary, were in accord as to the need of reducing the cost of government. But, he said, referring to yesterday's interchange on the question of responsibility, he had warned Acting Chairman Crisp of the committee concerning the danger of counting on economies without any actual prospect of realizing them.

"Unfortunately," Mr. Mills went on, "neither the ways and means committee nor the house had before them in preparing their estimates of needed revenue a concrete program for definite reduction in expenditures. They were obliged to rely on more or less vague estimates.

"It is now clear that if we are to have a balanced budget the preparation and realization of such a concrete program is imperatively necessary. This means there must be substantial modifications of existing law affecting the duties and obligations of the departments and independent establishments of the government. In view of the drastic cuts already made in the 1933 budget as presented to the congress amounting to 370 million dollars, there is but little further room for large economies through administrative changes alone.

Hits Democrats' "Saving."

"To accomplish a real reduction in cost, there must be an elimination of duplication of effort through consolidation, the curtailment of unnecessary functions, and the suspension of certain activities during the period of emergency. To attain this goal will require not only legislation but close coöperation between the legislative and the executive branches of the government in carrying out such a program."

Then having claimed the 370 millions for the administration, the secretary proceeded to show that of the 113 millions of curtailed expenditures about which Democratic house leaders have boasted so loudly, only 27 millions represent actual savings.

"The balance," Secretary Mills pointed out, "in all human probability, merely represents deferred appropriations."

Fifty millions cut out of the veterans' bonus fund, he explained, probably will have to be appropriated in the first deficiency bill next December, "in the middle of the very fiscal year for which we are budgeting."

"Reduce, Don't Postpone, Costs."

"This illustrates one of the causes of confusion," Mr. Mills concluded. "When the treasury department talks of a balanced budget, it means a balanced budget—not one balanced on paper. When it talks of reduced expenditures it means an actual reduction in the costs of government—not a postponement of an appropriation for a few months.

"There can be no question as to the willingness of the treasury department and other departments of the government to coöperate with the congress in the development on a nonpartisan basis of a real program looking to genuine reductions in the cost of government. As a matter of fact, the departments and independent establishments have already submitted suggestions to the appropriate committees for effecting substantial reductions."

GARNER 3½ TO 1 SHOT, ROOSEVELT LEADS AND SMITH 7 TO 1 GAMBLE

New York, April 2.—[Special.]—From a 20 to 1 shot, Speaker John N. Garner has advanced to a 3½ to 1 bet as Democratic nominee for President, according to the betting in Broad street.

An avalanche of small bets from the east and several large bets from the west have caused the booking odds on the Texan to come tumbling.

Garner now is second choice in the betting. Gov. Roosevelt is a 6 to 5 shot, with plenty of takers, while former Gov. Alfred E. Smith has dropped to fifth place as a 7 to 1 gamble.

President Hoover is still a 6 to 5 choice for reëlection.

Spring Plays Its April Fool Joke on City One Day Late

Frolicsome spring played an April fool joke on Chicago just one day late. At 7:30 a. m. yesterday the temperature stood at 38 degrees and at noon it stood at 71. But just about the time topcoats were shed the wind shifted from the southwest to the north and the mercury fell to 46 at 1 p. m. At 9 p. m. it was 41.

The official forecast indicated that today it will be fair and rather cool and tomorrow cloudy and somewhat warmer. Winds will continue from the northeast today, it was predicted.

Snow at Superior.

While the Ohio valley and the Atlantic coast had warmth above the average yesterday, the northwest and the upper Mississippi valley were shivering. A foot of snow fell at Superior, Wis.

The wintry temperatures, however, had little effect on Chicago's intentions to be ready for springtime when it does arrive.

From the office of the Lincoln park board came the announcement that its golf course will be opened Thursday. This is contingent, said Supt. H. Otto Weege, on favorable weather. The south parks plan to open the Jackson park and Marquette park courses April 15.

But it's migratory bird visitors who are expected to pledge the remaining of springtime. Most dependable of these are the purple martins. Their schedule normally is about May 1, but last year they were a month early. Ornithologists hold that the martins go as far south as Patagonia in winter and to the arctic circle in summer. A few of them have been reported near Chicago already.

Most of the migrants, according to observers, stop over in Chicago only briefly. One exception is the European starling. A few of these birds are nesting in Lincoln park. Unlike most of the feathered tribe, the starlings are coming from the east instead of the south. They were imported from Europe via New York and each year move a little farther west.

The Phoebe Is Here.

The phoebe, dove brown and green and smaller than a canary, has already arrived. In Belmont harbor yesterday 103 golden eyes, ducks with white sides, were swimming as they rested from a long flight. Snowbirds also passed through.

Advance guards of the belted kingfisher and the bluejay tribes have dropped in and the robins and grackles are here to stay in large numbers. So are killdeer. The flicker, the golden winged woodpecker, has been drumming in the park trees in competition with the hairy and downy varieties of his own species. Bluebirds have been seen, but are not yet common.

In all, thirty-two varieties of bird life that wintered in the south have come back.

U. S. INCOME TAX ON RICH EQUALS GREAT BRITAIN'S

Levies by States Increase Burden in America.

New York, April 2.—[Special.]—The tax burden to be carried by American incomes under the new increases voted by the house is found to be comparable to the British rate on incomes from $100,000 up, when federal and state taxes in America are considered together.

The federal income tax alone did not approach the British tax until incomes reached $1,000,000; but when the state tax and surtax are taken into the calculation, it is apparent that the new rates put the entire class in this country loosely designated as "rich" under the same contribution as in England.

There is nothing analogous to the state income tax in Great Britain, where the functions divided here by the federal and state governments, are carried on entirely by the national government.

Comparative Figures Given.

A comparison of the total income tax, both federal and state, to be paid in America, is shown in the following table in comparison with the total income tax to be paid in Great Britain:

Budgets About Equal.

Great Britain, faced with a national budget as large as the federal government of the United States, and with a population one-third as large and a national income one-sixth as large as this country, is taking approximately one-fourth of the national income for all British taxes, whether national or local, compared with one-eighth of the national income of the United States which is taken for all taxes, whether federal, state or local.

Local taxes are raised by direct taxation of real estate at rates in London, for instance, on a par with New York. The British taxpayer, however, also pays higher postage so that the post office may run at a profit instead of an annual deficit as it does here. Moreover, many services, such as water supply, which are governmental functions here are billed independently in Great Britain outside the tax rate.

REVIVAL OF SALE TAX IN SENATE APPEARS DOOMED

House Has New Worry in Soldiers' Bonus.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 2.—[Special.]—The new billion dollar revenue bill will be approved without the restoration of the sales tax it appeared today as the bill moved over to the senate from its passage last night in the house.

There will be an effort made to put the sales tax back into the bill. Senator David A. Reed [Rep., Pa.] announced that he would be one of those who would make the fight, and he will be joined by others among the regular Republican group. But it is a foregone conclusion that their fight will fail.

When the radical-Democrat revolt in the house knocked the sales tax out of the measure it was not knocked out to stay, in the opinion of congressional commentators.

Hearings Begin Wednesday.

Hearings on the revenue bill will begin before the senate finance committee next Wednesday. Prior to the meeting the Democratic senate membership will confer and attempt to agree on the program of amendments which are almost certain to be offered.

The long series of special excise and nuisance taxes and of changes in administrative provisions which now replace the sales tax will find vehement opposition from this group and that.

While the tax bill progresses on its way in the senate the house will be confronted with a new controversy over the soldiers' bonus. House leaders are fearful lest the movement for a cash payment of two billion dollars worth of bonus certificates be approved and the work of balancing the budget undone.

Leaders Oppose Cash Bonus.

Hearings on the bonus bills will be started on April 11 before the ways and means committee, the same committee which prepared the revenue measure. Like other house leaders, Acting Chairman Charles R. Crisp [Dem., Ga.] of the committee is against any cash payment.

But what is feared is another runaway such as happened on the tax bill and such as happened at the last session, when the house passed the bill permitting loans to veterans up to 50 per cent of the face value of their bonus certificates.

One of the methods of meeting the payment of the certificates, as suggested in pending house bills, is for the treasury to issue 2 billion dollars worth of greenbacks.

Hope to Close by June.

In the opinion of Speaker Garner, expressed today, it will be possible, now that the tax bill has been passed by the house, for congress to adjourn by June 1 or not later than June 10.

"It is now up to the senate to get congress out of here," the speaker said. "I am convinced that 90 per cent of the members of the house are anxious to adjourn before the national conventions. And we can do it if the senate has the disposition to do it."

LONDON, April 2.—After a notice of the intended marriage of Bernard Mannes Baruch, son of Bernard M. Baruch, American financier, to Miss Winifred Mann of London, had been filed today, the girl fled from the city spreading emphatic denials that any ceremony would take place.

"It's all off, I have changed my mind," she said before departing and while Baruch was on his way to her home from a west end hotel. At the hotel it was said he is expected to return Thursday. Miss Mann said she would be gone about ten days.

Sheriff Tiffany said that Gray's total frauds amount to about $10,000. Gray was arrested by Detective William May of the New York force on strength of a photograph forwarded by Tiffany. While being booked, the Negro lawyer made a break for liberty but was seized. He said he would fight extradition.

CHICAGO POLICE TO GUARD CICERO POLLS TUESDAY

Hot Vote Battles Develop in Chicagoland Towns.

Several spirited election and primary contests are scheduled in the cities and villages outside Chicago and the counties outside Cook county which make up Chicagoland. Elections will be held on Tuesday in a number of towns, the counties will have their primary contests April 12, and other elections in the suburbs are set for April 19.

An exciting election is expected Tuesday in Cicero where the Democrats are attempting, for the first time in many years, to carry local offices. More than 100 Chicago policemen yesterday were deputized to act as deputy sheriffs at the 59 polling places in Cicero at the request of County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki and business men of the suburb. In addition, the Cicero police will be out in full force, at least one policeman to each polling place.

Village President Joseph Z. Klenha, Republican, is opposed by Joseph G. Cerny, Democratic aspirant. Among the other Republican incumbents and their Democratic opponents are: Village Clerk James J. Pelikan, opposed by Jerry J. Viterna; Town Collector A. C. Rahlf, opposed by Frank Cruchna, and Village Supervisor Henry Langner, opposed by Anton Maciejewski.

Some north shore and western suburbs, including Evanston and Oak Park, also will hold elections on Tuesday. The majority of the remaining 83 towns and villages in the Chicago area will cast ballots April 19, although some will run off local vote contests in conjunction with the state primaries April 12.

Interest in Evanston Race.

Coalition tickets or lack of contests will make for mild contests in Glencoe, Winnetka, Oak Park, River Forest and Berwyn Tuesday. Much interest has been stirred in the Fifth ward of Evanston where former Ald. Edwin B. Jourdain, a Negro, whose election was declared invalid, is running against Ald. Peter N. Jans.

In Oak Park, Harry N. Leadaman, village clerk for 14 years, is opposed for reelection by William J. Unfred, a former village trustee. Leadaman's name was knocked off the ballot because his petition was declared illegal but he succeeded in having the name replaced.

Maywood, La Grange and Riverside will hold elections April 19 with no opposition to the present incumbents in the majority of cases. Local elections also will be held on that day in Calumet City, Homewood, Midlothian and Flossmoor. Little opposition is expected to the regular candidates in each suburb for the offices of village trustees and village clerk.

Aldermanic contests and elections of clerks and trustees are scheduled for April 19 in Waukegan, North Chicago and Lake Bluff. Mayor A. D. Farwell of Lake Forest is unopposed for reelection in a contest to be held April 12.

Hot State's Attorney Races.

The races for the Republican and Democratic nominations for state's attorney occupy most of the attention in the April 12 primaries in the counties bordering Cook county. In Lake county, State's Attorney A. V. Smith is opposed for the Republican nomination by Charles E. Mason and A. C. McHenry. William A. Deane, former chief assistant state's attorney, is seeking the Democratic nomination and is opposed by Charles Noll.

In Kane county, State's Attorney George D. Carbary is engaged in a close battle with John Hart, former corporation counsel of Aurora and former state representative. Carbary is supposed to have the indorsement of the drys. His conduct of the De King case, in which a woman was killed by a dry raider, is being attacked by Hart, who is running on a liberal platform.

Clarence J. Ruddy of Aurora is the only candidate for the Democratic nomination for state's attorney.

Will county Democrats are entertaining hopes this year for the first time in decades. State's Attorney Hjalmar Rehn is a candidate for the Republican nomination and is opposed by William R. McCabe of Lockport, former state representative. There are five seekers of the Democratic nomination with Frank Loughran, Harold Downey and George N. Blatt regarded as the leaders.

State's Attorney Chauncey W. Reed of Du Page county is seeking his fourth term. He is opposed for the Republican nomination by John E. McCoy of Lombard. Candidates for the Democratic nomination are Cyril W. Weston of Glen Ellyn and J. Samuel Perry of Glen Ellyn.

Battle in Indiana County.

The first genuine primary battle in many years has developed in Lake county, Indiana, where there was a surprise Democratic victory in 1930. The primary will not be held until May 3. There are nearly 200 candidates on the Republican and Democratic tickets for congressman from the first Indiana congressional district, and some 18 state and county offices.

The Republican congressional fight centers on the candidacy of Mayor R. O. Johnson of Gary, who served in prison for a liquor law conspiracy and is now under a county indictment charging him with using city labor and material for his private ends.

Robert G. Estill, Democratic prosecutor; Roy F. Holley, Democratic sheriff; and Herman Conter, Democratic treasurer, have opposition for renomination. W. O. Thomas of Gary for state's attorney; O. S. Jackson of East Chicago for sheriff, and John Bochnowski of East Chicago for treasurer, are leading for the Republican nominations.

FIELD NARROWS IN G. O. P. RACE FOR GOVERNOR

White Label Pinned on Custer by Drys.

is playing little part in the battle between their candidates, Judge Henry Horner, Michael L. Igoe, and Bruce A. Campbell. But they insist that a bandwagon movement already has begun for Judge Horner.

Campbell, the downstater from East St. Louis, has failed to make any headway in Cook county, and Horner has gained much more support in downstate territory than some of the skeptics had thought possible. Igoe also built up his downstate following, which centers largely around his downstate friends in the legislature, but he has failed to break the solid lineup of the regular ward organizations in Chicago.

The organization chiefs now say that two wards about which they had been dubious now have been transferred to the Horner column, and they express confidence that Igoe will not carry a single ward in the city. This word has spread outside Cook county, and reports from downstate indicate that in some sections the Igoe support has cooled.

G. O. P. CONTEST IN THE 46TH WARD BECOMES WARM

A slight atmosphere of turbulence last night marked the Republican contest over committeeman in the 46th ward. Partisans of Paul F. Pomeroy, the Small candidate against Ald. Oscar F. Nelson, former floor leader of the council and now north side member of the Harding-Galpin-Nelson alignment for Custer, complained that Paul P. Pomeroy, father of the candidate, had been assaulted by Nelson workers. They charged that Pomeroy pere, who is a retired newspaper man, was attacked in front of Nelson headquarters, at Clark and Buckingham place by Harry Jacobs, uncle of Ald. Nelson, and Max Landesman. The Pomeroy managers also complained that earlier in the day three strangers had walked into headquarters at 3229 North Clark street and had attempted intimidation.

YOUNG M. P. FOUND SLAIN IN HOME OF LORD HAILSHAM

LONDON, April 2.—(AP)—Edward Marjoribanks, brilliant young Conservative member of parliament from the Eastbourne division of East Sussex, was found shot to death tonight in the home of his stepfather, Lord Hailsham, near Hailsham, Sussex. He had been ill and suffering from insomnia.

News of the death of the young author and politician, who was one of the tallest and best looking young men in the house of commons, caused a sensation in social and political circles. It was reported that a gun was found beside the body in the billiard room of Lord Hailsham's home.

The young man had been working hard of late, and among other things he was writing a life of Lord Carson. Marjoribanks was 32 years old, the son of Archibald John Marjoribanks and the former Myssie Brown of Nashville, Tenn. Mrs. Marjoribanks later married Douglas McGarel Hogg, who subsequently became Lord Hailsham.

Young Marjoribanks was educated at Eton and Christ church, Oxford, where he attained many high scholastic honors. He went to the United States a few years ago to address universities on the league of nations.

CRUSADERS TELL PREFERENCES IN CONGRESS RACE

Anti-Saloon League Also Makes Indorsements.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

The Crusaders, militant anti-prohibitionists, and the Anti-Saloon league issued recommendations yesterday on candidates for congress and the general assembly at the April 12 primaries.

STEPHAN A. DAY.

For congressman at large the action centers on Richard Yates, present dry member. The Crusaders indorsed Stephen A. Day of Evanston. A second man is still to be picked. The Anti-Saloon league indorsed Mr. Yates and Epler C. Mills of Virginia, who has been a dry in the state senate.

The report of the Crusaders says: "We wish to accomplish the defeat of Richard Yates, the incumbent, who, regardless of several state-wide referenda showing an overwhelming sentiment against prohibition, continues to work and vote for the dry cause and is the candidate of the Anti-Saloon league, the W. C. T. U., and other prohibition and professional reform organizations.

Stephen A. Day Indorsed.

"We are recommending for consideration of all friends and members the candidacy of Stephen A. Day of Evanston. Inasmuch as there are two congressmen at large to be elected, we hope to have an additional recommendation at an early date."

For the Democratic nomination for congressman at large the Crusaders recommend Walter Nesbit of Belleville, "who made such an excellent showing against Yates at the 1930 election."

The Deneen group yesterday indorsed Yates for its support in Cook county, except in the Tenth district and the Forty-sixth ward, where it is to support George E. Foss, former congressman, who is for 4 per cent beer. It was explained that the action was taken "because Yates made Deneen governor" at the state convention of 1904, the famous deadlock conclave.

Crusaders' Recommendations.

Findings of the Crusaders in the district fights on congressmen in the metropolitan area are as follows, except in some districts where reports are to be made later:

3D DISTRICT—Republican: "Former Congressman E. W. Sproul has in the past voted as a dry. He is now running on a modified prohibition platform, which is not satisfactory to this organization. We recommend the candidacy of Ford M. Van Decker." Democrat: "The record of Congressman Edward A. Kelly on prohibition matters has been satisfactory."

4TH DISTRICT—Democrat: "The record of Congressman Harry P. Beam has been satisfactory."

5TH DISTRICT—Democrat: "Congressman A. J. Sabath has satisfactory record."

6TH DISTRICT—Democrat: "Record of Congressman James T. Igoe on prohibition has been satisfactory."

7TH DISTRICT—Republican: "We oppose the nomination of M. A. Michaelson, former congressman." Democrat: "Congressman L. W. Schuetz has satisfactory record against prohibition."

9TH DISTRICT—Republican: "Congressman Fred A. Britten has satisfactory record against prohibition. He has been an outstanding leader in the anti-prohibition movement." Democrat: "We recommend James McAndrews, former congressman."

11TH DISTRICT—Republican: "Congressman Frank R. Reid, the incumbent, has been consistently dry. We strongly recommend the candidacy of Edwin S. Goltry, lawyer, legionnaire, and an outstanding citizen." Democrat: "Inasmuch as the three Democratic candidates are for repeal of the 18th amendment we do not feel called upon to make a choice."

Dry League Recommendation.

The Anti-Saloon league made no recommendations in the ten Cook county congressional districts. All ten of the Cook county congressmen voted for the Beck-Linthicum resolution to return the liquor question to the states. In the adjacent 11th district [Aurora-Elgin] the league indorsed Congressman Frank R. Reid of Aurora.

The indorsements of the Anti-Saloon league on candidates for the general assembly in senatorial districts of the metropolitan area are as follows, the asterisk (*) indicating a present member:

5th district—House: Republican, *Josephine Perry.

6th district—Senate: Republican, *James J. Barbour. House: Republican, Benjamin H. Suhr.

7th district—House: Republican, *Anna Wilmarth Ickes.

8th district—Senate: Republican, Charles H. Francis. House: Republican, Joseph C. James.

11th district—House: Republican, *David L. Swanson.

14th district—House: Republican, *John M. Peffers, J. Lisle Lanfer.

20th district—House: Republican, *Elmer Wilson.

41st district—House: Republican, *Otto A. Buck.

Political Notes

Frank Ringa, candidate for Republican committeeman in the 35th, wrote the Woman's Organization for National Prohibition Reform yesterday that they were in error in listing him among the Custer committeemen. "Through an inadvertence," wrote Ringa, "you have placed me among those supporting the W. C. T. U. and Anti-Saloon league candidate. This would be political suicide. I am with Carlstrom, an outstanding wet."

The Chicago district council of the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America, has recommended to its 15,000 members that they vote for Edward A. Fisher, Deneen candidate for the municipal bench.

A war comedy, "What Spice Glory," written by Capt. Herman H. Weimer, Igoe candidate for sanitary district trustee, will be presented in three sections of the city on Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday next week, in the interests of Mr. Igoe's candidacy for governor.

According to the Custer publicity department, Mrs. Charles S. Deneen was one of those who attended a reception yesterday afternoon for Mr. and Mrs. Omer N. Custer. The same department announced that flowers were presented to the guests of honor "by the Lincoln park board", and a basket of flowers was sent to Mrs. Hada Carlson, head of the women's division by "Otto Weege, president of the Lincoln park board."

Charles W. Hadley, Republican, announced that if he is elected attorney general he will assign a specialist trained in utility matters to represent the state in matters before the commerce commission.

Speaking before a colored meeting at 3315 South State street last night, Judge Michael Feinberg said he would, if elected state's attorney, create a department directed by Negroes to handle all Negro cases coming into the prosecutor's office.

WARD BATTLES FOR WET PLANK MUDDLE PRIMARY

Crusaders Get Pledge of Malone and Brundage.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Illinois' statewide primaries April 12 present the most complicated muddle in years. The movement of the "Snow uprisers" to elect a compact group of anti-Hoover, anti-prohibition, anti-high cost of government delegates to the Republican national convention is being hooked right into the fights over the election of ward committeemen in Chicago, the inside party machinery.

It is now being tied into the governorship contest and the movement, headed by B. W. Snow, Republican county chairman, to make the state convention at Springfield April 22, a wet one.

Two Give Pledges.

Two Republican governorship candidates, William H. Malone and Edward J. Brundage, answering a written query from the Crusaders, fighting anti-prohibitionists, yesterday pledged themselves, if nominated, to work for wet instructions at the state convention and for the selection of eleven delegates-at-large who will be for a wet plank in the national platform and against any presidential candidate who stands with the drys.

"If nominated for governor," Mr. Brundage wrote, "I will sponsor a plank in the state platform calling for immediate modification of the Volstead act and for submission of the 18th amendment to a popular vote in the states. Not only will I sponsor the plank but I shall devote all the power of my position to see that such plank is adopted.

"I will sponsor and endeavor in every way possible to bring about the appointment of delegates-at-large to the national convention who will endorse the above plan.

"I will sponsor the nomination of a candidate for President who stands for modification of the Volstead act and submission of the 18th amendment to a popular vote.

"I shall use my every influence to see that the delegates to the national convention are instructed accordingly."

Malone Also Takes Stand.

"I stand firmly," wrote Mr. Malone, "for modification of the Volstead act and for submission of the 18th amendment to popular vote. I will sponsor delegates-at-large to the national convention who indorse such a plan, and I will use whatever power and influence the governorship nominee possesses to accomplish these results."

Mr. Snow reported he is getting more responses from candidates for ward committeeman. Col. James E. White in the 49th and William B. Gemmill in the 5th, sent word that if elected committeemen they will appoint delegates to the state convention who will work for the program. I. M. Hoyt, Republican chairman of Montgomery county, wrote that he will go the route for a liberal state convention and for wet delegates-at-large with wet instructions.

More and more, as the campaign progresses, it is becoming a struggle, at the bottom, for control of the party organization, which determines the party's stand on issues and on the presidential nomination.

Preferences Not Indicated.

Under the primary law, candidates for national delegates can not designate on the ballot whom they favor for presidential nominee. Their announcement of a stand has to be voluntary. Delegates friendly to President Hoover are running "uninstructed." In general the Harding-Emmerson and the Deneen camps are rated pro-Hoover.

One possible obstacle lies in the fact that the state convention is accustomed to follow the wishes of the nominee for governor—giving him the kind of a platform he wants to run on in November.

So the wetness or dryness of the state platform and the action the state convention might take as to instructing delegates-at-large for an anti-prohibition, anti-Hoover program at the national convention, may depend largely upon who wins the governorship nomination. The Snow uprisers, however, plan to carry their battle into the convention whichever way it rolls.

ILLINOIS BANKING LAWS DEFECTIVE, HORNER ASSERTS

Contrasts Many Failures with Other States.

In a non-political speech at a luncheon of the Chicago Bar association yesterday, Judge Henry Horner criticized the state banking laws of Illinois as defective. He suggested by implication that if the Democrats nominate him and he is elected to the governorship he will take the lead in an effort to strengthen these statutes.

"I am convinced that our banking laws are lacking in effectiveness somewhere," he said, "because it is inconceivable that with proper laws and adequate administration of them our bank failures should have been so numerous and the loss from them so great during the last two years.

126 Banks Closed in 1930.

"In 1930 there were 126 banks closed in Illinois; and only ten of them reopened. The total deposits in these banks was approximately $63,000,000. With the exception of Arkansas, Illinois had more bank failures that year than any other state in the union. Only eight banks failed in New York, 21 in Michigan, 24 in Wisconsin.

"In 1931 Illinois again led her sister states in bank failures. The total number closed in the state was 237 as against 55 in New York in the same period.

"Our economic conditions even in the days of the depression do not differ materially from those of the other states mentioned. Apparently we have allowed banks to grow up that should not have been permitted to do so, or we have failed somewhere along the line to check their operations to minimize the tragedies."

Judge Horner said also that he felt Illinois has been derelict in the control and regulation of the sale of securities, and that in this field government control should be extended.

Igoe Camp Hits Nash Forecast.

Michael L. Igoe, also a Democratic governorship candidate, was stumping outside of Cook county yesterday, but his headquarters issued a statement in his name ridiculing the estimate of County Chairman P. A. Nash concerning the outcome of the party primary.

"Since the Sherman house gentlemen went into their stampede a week ago," said the statement, "they are becoming louder and funnier. Nash professes to believe that Campbell and Igoe will share only 100,000 votes in Cook county between them.

"Nash is a great little forecaster. Even his own precinct workers must laugh when they remember that Pat Nash could not carry his own ward for his friend Cermak while Igoe did carry his own ward for Cermak."

Bruce A. Campbell's only speech during the day was a short talk to a group of school teachers at a luncheon in the Great Northern. He said to them that separate appropriations should be made to pay the salaries of teachers and other necessary public employés and that the use of such appropriations for any other purpose should be forbidden.

Carlstrom Is Noon Speaker.

Attorney General Carlstrom, Republican candidate for governor, spoke at a noon meeting in the Erlanger theater where he stressed the issues of taxation and prohibition. He also cited his record as attorney general for eight years.

Edward J. Brundage, also a Republican candidate, spoke during the day at Amboy and Dixon and following his return to Chicago last night issued a statement repeating his declaration of war against politico-criminal alliances and taking a new angle on the taxation issue.

"The failure of the state tax commission to apportion the assessment of taxes fairly and properly between real estate and personal property," he said, "is the cause of the present situation.

"Len Small, one of my opponents, was in control of that commission for eight years as governor. My other three opponents, William H. Malone, Oscar E. Carlstrom, and Omer N. Custer, have been members of that commission. If they had performed their duty there, real estate would not now be in the distressed condition that is responsible for the loss of homes through foreclosure and for the failures of banks because of frozen assets."

In reply to Brundage's charges on Friday that the west park pay rolls are loaded with "canal watchers" and other loafers, President W. R. James of the park board issued a brief statement. In it he did not mention Brundage's charge that he, James, had withdrawn $40,000 from a contingent fund which had not been accounted for.

"The lust for public office," said James' answer, "seems to require that some candidates must always make extravagant statements about the motives and conduct of those who do not support them.

"The semi-monthly west parks pay roll has averaged for several years approximately $120,000. The semi-monthly pay roll for the first period of March was but $81,000."

15,000 NAMES TO BE ERASED FROM LISTS OF VOTERS

1,424,894 Qualified for the Primary.

Some 15,000 names will be removed from the registration books as the result of hearings on suspect notices completed by the board of election commissioners last night. More than 19,000 suspect notices were sent out. Four thousand voters responded and proved their qualifications to vote and practically the entire 15,000 remaining names will be erased.

The usual squabbling between precinct workers and representatives of the various political factions occurred at the hearings, but Chairman Fred V. McGuire declared the sessions were, on the whole, orderly. Most of the names erased were from the lists in the 20th, 21st, 24th, 14th, and 5th wards, where the contests between the ward committeemen are spirited.

The hearings began Thursday and the three commissioners worked in relays qualifying the 4,000 persons. The total qualified voters entitled to vote at the April 12 primaries now stands at 1,424,894.

VIRGIL WEARIES OF SCHOOL LIFE AT ST. CHARLES

Virgil Baker, 16 years old, 5520 Drexel avenue, was sent to the St. Charles school for boys on Feb. 27, sentenced for a year as a burglar. A police squad from the Hyde Park station was, in view of that fact, somewhat surprised to find Virgil last evening at 55th street and Woodlawn avenue.

They arrested him and he admitted that he had escaped from the institution with the help of two women. His departure, according to the police, had not been reported by the officials at St. Charles, although it occurred a week ago.

The girls are Virgil's sister, Helen, 24 years old, and Mrs. Marian Baker, 22 years old, wife of the youth's brother, Daniel.

"I got awful tired of that place," said Virgil, "so the girls came out in an automobile and parked about a mile from the school. There were four of us boys that wanted to leave all at once, but we made a lot of noise and some dogs bit us. Only two of us got away."

He admitted that since his return he has gone back to the same form of burglary that caused his arrest before. He and his brother, who lived at 6239 Blackstone avenue, and Jack Harland, 29 years old, of the same address, broke into pay telephone boxes. The police estimated the three got about $500 a week until Daniel Baker and Harland were caught. They are now in the Bridewell.

The police were keeping a watch last night on the present home of Marian Baker at 6213 Stony Island avenue.

We could wrap our stores in Cellophane

If we thought you'd want us to wrap our stores completely in Cellophane*, we could find a way. But we believe that what you want from us is the best food procurable, a wide choice, and the lowest prices going.

Of course, we could give you both fine food and fine frills. But frills in the grocery business make foods come high. We can sell the best foods for less money without them.

So we gave up worrying about frills long ago, and put our energies into stocking the finest foods and keeping their prices low. We do business that way, not because we have any feelings in the matter, but because we've found out that that's what most people prefer.

ANNIVERSARY

It Begins Tomorrow . . .

THE vision of the consumer is today dimmed by a haze of lower prices, lowered quality and misrepresentation. He wonders whom he shall believe—and in whom he may trust.

So it seems particularly fitting at this time—the inauguration of our 45th Anniversary—that the founder repeat the simple principles upon which this business has been built, and which have been steadfastly adhered to through the years.

- Dependable merchandise—quality standards are never sacrificed to meet a price.
- Every article guaranteed for satisfaction.
- No exaggerations or misrepresentations of quality or former selling price in our advertising, or by our salespeople.
- Courteous, Conscientious Service from every employee.

So, in this 45th Anniversary Celebration we emphasize the maintenance of these creeds. We went into the markets, we bought for Cash, we secured the most dependable qualities, and the most fashionable styles. Here are buying opportunities which we do not believe will be duplicated this season.

SWANSON RIPS FEINBERG AGAIN; JUDGE REPLIES

Rivals Wage Battle Over Receivership Charges.

Charges, replies, and counter-charges were tossed back and forth vigorously yesterday by State's Attorney Swanson and Judge Michael Feinberg, whose campaigns for the Republican nomination for the office now held by Mr. Swanson have reached the ultra-heated stage.

While Judge Feinberg was issuing a reply to the state's attorney's charges of political nepotism in the handling of fat receiverships brought into his court, Mr. Swanson at a noon meeting in the Grand Opera house declared that needy bank depositors are being deprived of their funds through the alliance of Judge Feinberg and his political sponsor, Robert E. Crowe.

"Feinberg's conduct on the banks," he said, "has been such as, in other states, might warrant impeachment."

Feinberg Denies Charge.

The Feinberg statement opened with a denial of personal profit in the foreclosure proceedings involving the Rockwell garage at 2534-40 Lawrence avenue. It had been charged by Mr. Swanson that Judge Feinberg, only a few weeks before the foreclosure, caused title to the property to be transferred from himself to his father-in-law.

Judge Feinberg directed at the state's attorney's forces a charge that a Feinberg supporter had been slain by gunmen on Friday and that the instance was the fourth of terrorism directed against the political supporters of the judge.

Another development of the day was the sending of a letter by Mr. Swanson to Louis E. Hart, chairman of the committee on receiverships and mortgage foreclosures of the Chicago Bar association.

Promises to Forward Facts.

Chairman Hart had requested the state's attorney to furnish any information he might have on irregularities of judges other than Feinberg and Stanley H. Klarkowski, the only ones specifically mentioned in the Swanson broadside of Friday. Mr. Swanson's reply stated that his investigation would continue and that he would forward all additional facts as they were disclosed. He added that he was demanding a bar association investigation as a member of the association and not as state's attorney.

At the Grand Opera house meeting Swanson reiterated the charge that Crowe rather than Feinberg was his real opponent. He declared that if Feinberg obtains the office of prosecutor Crowe will "restore criminal conditions to the terrible state they were in when he was in office."

Mr. Swanson renewed his charges that exorbitant fees had been paid to Crowe's law partners for their services in receiverships, particularly that of the Transportation building. He averred that the Chicago Title and Trust company has more than 100 lawyers, any one of whom could attend to the small legal details in the Transportation building receivership.

Points to $25,000 on Account.

"Yet this champion of bank depositors, this foe of crooked bankers [Feinberg], appointed a special attorney to help the Title and Trust company in operating the bank," Swanson said. "This attorney, a partner of the man who was formerly Feinberg's partner, has received more than $25,000 on account."

"More fees may be expected by this favored lawyer. What has been the result? The poor bondholders, who thought their money was secure in a big loop building, get 30 cents on the dollar."

Also, Mr. Swanson charged, Judge Feinberg is paying attorneys in bank receivership matters 50 per cent above the regular rates.

"This money comes from the pockets of the depositors of the banks he is investigating," the state's attorney declared.

John E. Northup, who prosecuted the sanitary district graft case and is now a candidate for attorney general, spoke briefly at the Swanson meeting and was given an ovation.

Judge Feinberg's Statement.

In his statement, referring to the garage foreclosure, Judge Feinberg said:

"The deliberate falsehood which my opponent has issued to the public in connection with the Rockwell garage investment of mine is typical of the manner in which Swanson has proved himself a traitor to the trust the people reposed in him four years ago.

"I sacrificed an investment of $22,000 in that property so that the bondholders may have the property and realize every dollar possible. It is a falsehood that the foreclosure suit ever came before me. It is a falsehood that I have ever handled any part of the foreclosure suit pending in the Circuit court in connection with this property. I have abandoned my investment, and I expect to get nothing in return.

Charges Terrorism Campaign.

"Last night another murder occurred at the hands of Swanson's supporters and gunmen in the Twenty-fifth ward. The campaign of terrorism, murder, and sluggings goes unabated. These very gunmen Swanson promised to drive out of Chicago four years ago.

"This makes the fourth victim among my supporters to feel this campaign of terrorism. Does the state's attorney think that he can permit this condition to go unabated and win the election by such murderous methods?"

Regarding the receivership charges that State's Attorney Swanson discussed at length in a twenty page letter to the bar association, Feinberg said:

"Swanson says that in thousands of cases pending before me I have appointed personal friends of mine, and friends of one whom he terms 'my political sponsor,' Judge Crowe, and yet out of these thousands of appointments he does not name a dozen."

On Swanson Appointments.

"I don't complain," said the judge, directing his remarks directly to the state's attorney, "of your appointment of Roy O. West's son, or of any appointment that you made merely because the person was related to you or was sponsored by one of your political backers, and I don't complain that you retained 40 per cent of Judge Crowe's staff on account of their ability and integrity.

"The only complaint I make about your appointments was when you appointed Busch [apparently Harry Busch], a Capone henchman in the 42d ward, whom Pat Roche, your chief investigator, arrested at midnight and charged with being the head of a gang of safe blowers, and whom you still retain on your staff, as well as Pat Roche. I complain about the appointment of Blackwood, an assistant state's attorney, who was charged by three reputable citizens with holding them up at the point of a gun, and whom you defended instead of prosecuted.

Three Out of Twenty.

"When referring cases to a master in chancery, Swanson names three out of the twenty masters of the Circuit court that I have referred cases to: George E. Gorman, Judge William V. Brothers' master; William R. Swissler, law partner of Former Chief Justice Floyd Thompson of the Illinois Supreme court, and Archie Cohen, Judge Kickham Scanlan's master and for many years associated in law business with United States Senator James Hamilton Lewis.

"Among the other masters I have referred cases to are Leonard Reid, an active supporter of the state's attorney; Roswell B. Mason, a Democrat, appointed repeatedly by Democratic judges for the last 25 or 30 years; Jacob M. Arvey, Mayor Cermak's city council floor leader; Ninian H. Welch, a Deneen leader and a Swanson supporter for many years, and others."

As to the fees the masters received, Feinberg declared they were paid according to the statute and the schedule prepared by the bar association.

Roche Tells About Busch.

Referring to the charges against Assistant State's Attorney Busch, Pat Roche said last night that Busch was never arrested in connection with the incident specified by Feinberg, but was requested by telephone to go to the detective bureau, "which he immediately did of his own volition."

"A number of persons," Roche said, "had been arrested who had resided in the 42d ward and, seeking to establish their identity, said that they knew Busch. Upon being confronted by Busch at the detective bureau, they then denied that they knew him except as president of Richard Prendergast's political organization. Busch was immediately absolved of any connection with these people whatsoever."

BEG YOUR PARDON!

K. M. Vitzthum, Republican candidate for sanitary district trustee, was erroneously given credit for designing the 333 North Michigan avenue building in Friday's TRIBUNE. He writes to place the credit with Holabird & Root, the architects.

Members of the Tenth district women's clubs will be guests of the Waukegan Woman's club at an all day meeting Tuesday, April 12, instead of next Tuesday, as stated in the Metropolitan section of THE TRIBUNE today.

AUDITOR NELSON LEAVES TODAY TO GET LOAN TERMS

State Auditor Oscar Nelson will leave for Washington today to consult with officials of the Reconstruction Finance corporation for the third time regarding the details of federal loans to closed Illinois banks.

The auditor said he hoped to return with exact information on the terms under which the corporation will grant loans. When he has this information he will ask Attorney General Carlstrom for an opinion as to the legality of such loans, he added. The auditor holds the recent Carlstrom opinion approving such loans has no bearing, inasmuch as no one knows under what terms the loans can be made.

A collection of rifles, knives, revolvers, and pistols seized from gangsters by the courts over a six months' period was dropped into Lake Michigan yesterday by the Sea Scouts of America, who had been sworn in as deputy bailiffs by Municipal Judge John A. DEMAND BOBS UP FOR JURY QUIZ ON GANG VOTE PLOT

Feinberg to Be Asked to Appoint Prosecutor.

A petition for the impaneling of a special grand jury and appointment of a special state's attorney to probe an alleged threat by the Capone gang to control the coming primary election will be presented tomorrow morning before Circuit Judge Michael Feinberg.

The petition will be presented by Rush C. Butler, chairman of the committee sponsoring Edward J. Brundage for governor. Notice of the proceedings has been served on Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom, also running for governor, and on State's Attorney Swanson, whom Judge Feinberg is opposing for reëlection.

Brought by Prendergast.

The petition is being brought on behalf of Richard Prendergast, Republican candidate for committeeman of the 42d ward, who has charged that his opponent, Assistant State's Attorney Harry Busch, has the backing of the Capone gang. Prendergast and Mrs. Florence McFatrich Kirk, wife of Prendergast's political associate, Wallace Kirk, are the only signers of the petition.

Mr. Butler was asked why, out of 59 Circuit and Superior judges, he chose Swanson's political foe, Judge Feinberg, to pass on a matter involving replacement of Swanson in a grand jury action. Swanson and Feinberg are rivals for the Republican nomination for state's attorney.

"Because we believe Judge Feinberg will do his duty," said Mr. Butler. "There is no political significance in this move. We have information that the gangsters are prepared to steal this election. We are acting on behalf of the decent citizens of Chicago."

Butler asserted that he had prepared the petition without consulting Mr. Brundage. William F. Gailing, manager of Brundage headquarters in the Hotel La Salle, said that none of the Brundage supporters was aware of the petition, and expressed doubt that "Butler would lend his name to such a proceeding."

Swanson Refused a Copy.

Swanson received notice of the impending petition about 3 p. m. He immediately called Butler's office, requesting a copy. This, he said, Butler promised to supply but, when he called a second time a half hour later, Butler's office was closed. Butler afterwards declined to release copies for publication, saying the courtroom was the proper place.

It was understood, however, that the allegations follow in the main the claims advanced by Prendergast in a telegram to United States Senator Borah March 19, in which Prendergast invited the senate judiciary committee to investigate circumstances surrounding the voter registration of March 15.

"Over 100,000 floaters were fraudulently registered," Prendergast asserted.

JOSEPHINE DENNEHY AND RUSSIAN PRINCE WED IN PASADENA

Pasadena, Cal., April 2.—[Special.]—Miss Josephine Dennehy of Chicago became Princess Galitzine at an impressive high noon wedding ceremony at the winter home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Galitzine here. Miss Eleanor Dennehy of Chicago, older sister of the bride, was bridesmaid for her sister.

The ceremony was performed by Father John Sullivan, H. J., of San Francisco, an old family friend of the Dennehys.

The bride wore white satin, tulle veil, and carried calla lilies. Miss Eleanor Dennehy was in yellow crêpe, with cherry colored hat, cherry colored shoes, and bouquet of cherry colored stock.

The couple will make a honeymoon motor trip through northern California and Pacific northwest and then return to Pasadena prior to motoring to Chicago to reside permanently.

Among the 40 guests who attended the wedding ceremony and breakfast following were Princess Aleka Ratislav, sister of the groom; Miss Gwendolyn Jones and Miss Gertrude Chase of Santa Barbara, Cal., and the following from Chicago: Mrs. Charles F. CURTIS MISSING ON MYSTERY TRIP IN LINDY SEARCH Aids Refuse to Say if He Will See Kidnapers.

Hope Is Revived

Hopewell, N. J., April 2.—[U. P.]—The return of the Lindbergh baby was believed imminent tonight. Hope that the abductors would restore the infant within a few days was strengthened by a statement from police that they at least were working on "definite leads."

Col. H. Norman Schwartzkopf said the "leads" "have not proved negative."

When asked about reports that the child is held on a yacht somewhere beyond the 12 mile limit, Schwartzkopf replied:

"The coast guard has reported no activity to us," he said.

It was considered the information of Col. Schwartzkopf is concerned with the departure of Maj. Charles Schoeffel, his deputy, for Europe.

New York, April 2.—[Special.]—John Hughes Curtis, the Norfolk boat builder who reported last week-end that he had reëstablished communication with the kidnapers of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's baby son, disappeared again today from his home in the Virginia city.

Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage and the Rev. H. Dobson Peacock, associates of Curtis in the negotiations, at first suggested that he might have been called away on business, but late tonight the retired naval officer admitted that the trip was in connection with the efforts to bring about the baby's return.

"Might" See Kidnapers.

Asked whether Mr. Curtis expected to make contact with the kidnapers or to visit Col. Lindbergh, Admiral Burrage replied that he "might" do both. He refused to say where the contact with the kidnapers was to be made, if at all.

A report was prevalent on Martha's Vineyard tonight that Mr. Curtis was on his way to that island to meet the kidnapers or their representative at the isolated summer home of former United States Senator William M. Butler. Mr. Butler denied any knowledge of such a meeting.

George D. Brownley, treasurer of the Curtis company, quoted Mr. Curtis as saying he believed "this thing will be settled one way or the other in a short time now."

Report Baby on Ship Denied.

Meanwhile police at the Lindbergh home near Hopewell, N. J., continued to assert that neither they nor the noted aviator regarded the Norfolk angle of the case as important. Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of state police, whose deputy, Maj. Charles H. Schoeffel, sailed for England last Monday.

A report that the baby is on a ship beyond American territorial waters and would be put aboard an unidentified freighter was denied at headquarters of the coast guard and the immigration service.

MME. MARIE CURIE NEARLY DIES; SCRATCH BECOMES INFECTED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 2.—Mme. Marie Curie, joint discoverer of radium with her late husband is in a hospital convalescing from an acute infection after hovering between life and death for several days. This was revealed tonight.

MME. MARIE CURIE

The famous scientist, who is 64 years of age, fell in her laboratory a week ago and received a scratch on her elbow. A slight infection developed which she disregarded. The poison began spreading through her system and drastic treatment was necessary to save her life.

Despite a raging fever, Mme. Curie was unwilling to quit her work, but finally she yielded to the insistence of her helpers and allowed herself to be taken to the hospital. An operation was performed just in time to save her life, it is stated. The patient is still confined to her bed, but the fever is steadily diminishing and recovery is believed assured.

Mme. Curie requested friends and associates not to publish the news of her illness.

Townsend Netcher Home Robbed of $4,500 Jewelry

Santa Monica, Cal., April 2.—[Special.]—When Townsend Netcher and his wife, Constance Talmadge, returned to their beach home today, after an absence of a month, Netcher discovered that a leather box containing jewelry worth $4,500 had been stolen from his room.

DR. MESIROW'S ALIMONY CUT IN HALF BY COURT

Judge Gives Him Chance to Rehabilitate Self.

"I think that Dr. Mesirow should be given a chance to rehabilitate himself. Therefore, I am cutting his alimony order from $30 a week to $15. It will be necessary, however, for Dr. Mesirow to work out with the attorney representing his divorced wife some plan of gradually paying up alimony that is past due."

The speaker was Judge Craig Hood of Chicago Heights, sitting in the Circuit court. He was addressing Dr. Maurice E. Mesirow, eye specialist, who was brought into court because he is nearly $2,000 in arrears in alimony payments to his first wife, Eda, who is an invalid now living in California. Flanking the physician were Attorneys Cameron Latter, who represents the first Mrs. Mesirow, and I. Harvey Levinson, who is the physician's lawyer.

Last Tuesday Mr. Mesirow was put in the county jail on a writ of attachment issued by Circuit Judge Daniel P. Trude and upheld by the Appellate court because of his nonpayment of the support money. He was released Friday after his present wife, Mme. Irene Pavloska of the Chicago Civic Opera company, paid $250 on the debt. Yesterday's hearing was an attempt at settlement.

"My gross income during recent months," Dr. Mesirow told the court, "amounted to from $75 to $80 a month. It sounds ridiculous, but it's true. My office expenses often run to $65 a month, of which the rent is $40. All the notoriety I've been getting hasn't helped."

Attorney Latter explained that the Appellate court in upholding Judge Trude's jail sentence, had expressed a suspicion that the physician was not making his best efforts to earn an income.

Working All the Time.

"But I am, your honor," Dr. Mesirow protested. "I am working all the time. I keep office appointments until noon and then I work at the Michael Reese hospital from 1 o'clock until 5 o'clock. That, of course, is charity work and does not bring me any paying patients, but it does increase my professional standing."

Attorney Latter objected to the presence of a maid in the physician's home at the Sutherland hotel. The lawyer said that the doctor should cut down his home expenses and take care of his ex-wife.

"I take it that a professional man must live decently and dress decently," Judge Hood stated. "To restrict him would be to drive away his clientele. The trouble here is just that the doctor is a poor business man. I'm going to give him a chance."

NOTORIOUS BANK ROBBER SEIZED; ADMITS 4 JOBS

David Loftus, alias George Gallagher, 28 years old, was brought to Chicago under heavy guard from South Bend, Ind., early this morning as a confessed participant in four bank robberies and a possible suspect in others. He was arrested Friday night in Mishawaka, adjacent to South Bend, on complaint of a mother with whose daughter he had been seen. At the time he carried $700 in $5 bills and a gun.

R. C. Saunders, head of the crime prevention division of the Illinois Bankers' association, proclaimed the arrest of Loftus as one of the most important in a long time. Saunders and Sergt. William Balswick of the detective bureau questioned Loftus before he was brought back to Chicago.

Loftus, police said, admitted complicity in the robberies of the State bank, Dwight, Ill., on Aug. 31, 1931; the State bank at Plainfield, Ill., on July 5, 1930; the First National bank, Marengo, Ill., on Nov. 26, 1930, and a bank at Delavan, Wis., Feb. 10 this year. His total share of the loot, he said, was $20,799.

Chicago police said they would try to connect Loftus with the six alleged bank robbers arrested earlier in the week. The six, Ed Bennett, Frank Faifer, Walter Bearden, Michael Yarro, Frank Halligren, and Fred Fullbright, will be turned over to Lake county authorities tomorrow for the Mundelein bank holdup.

STIMSON TO SAIL THIS WEEK FOR GENEVA PARLEY

Likely to Discuss World Financial Problems.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 2.—[Special.]—Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson surprised official Washington today with the announcement he will sail for Geneva this coming week to throw his influence back of the American delegation's fight to effect disarmament cuts when the league of nations general arms conference reconvenes April 11.

While White House and state department officials emphasized the cabinet member was going to Geneva solely to push the campaign for worldwide arms limitations, the conclusion immediately was drawn in congressional and diplomatic circles that Mr. Stimson plans to discuss world financial and economic problems as well as the Japanese-Manchurian crisis with the ranking statesmen of Europe prior to his return six weeks hence.

See War Debt Conference.

The disclosure that President Hoover directed Secretary Stimson to sail Wednesday or Friday for Geneva was eagerly welcomed in diplomatic circles where it was taken for granted that European statesmen would be given an opportunity to sound out the secretary on the American position on war debts repudiation and other problems facing European countries. The idea that Mr. Stimson was going to Geneva merely to attempt to save a wobbling arms conference was scoffed at both in diplomatic and congressional quarters.

The first inkling that Mr. Stimson planned to follow the precedent he set last summer when he journeyed to Europe in order to have first hand talks with European statesmen on such subjects as disarmament, war debts, moratorium, and the general European financial situation, came from the White House. Later Secretary Stimson advised newspaper men he was going because of the belief he could be of help to the American delegation now engaged in another of the frequent American campaigns to help Europe. This time the delegation is trying to persuade European powers to cut their costs of government by sluffing off disarmament burdens.

Davis Urged Trip.

It was learned that Norman W. Davis, one of the American delegates and an international financial expert closely affiliated at times with the league of nations, recommended the Stimson trip to both President Hoover and the secretary.

In many quarters it is believed Secretary Stimson will carry a new American arms program to Geneva based on the belief that while all chances for cutting army and navy basic establishments are gone, the possibility still exists that reductions may be made in the so-called offensive weapons such as tanks, toxic gases, submarines, etc.

Stimson Ill with Flu.

As Mr. Stimson's health has been bad lately, reports were circulated the trip to Geneva will be largely a convalescence tour. Mr. Stimson has had the influenza for two weeks. One report is that the after effects have proved more serious than has been made public and that the President felt he needed an ocean voyage. Regardless of this view, the general opinion in Washington is to the effect that Mr. Stimson's arrival in Geneva will be attended by some new pronouncement of American policy or view in which world finances will play a part.

Strength also was lent to the view that problems other than those of disarmament were taking Mr. Stimson to Europe by the fact that Mr. Davis is far better known for his activities in international finance and the league of nations than he is in disarmament. It was also noted today that Mr. Stimson, in announcing two new members had been added to the delegation's advisory staff, revealed that one was a Wall street lawyer and the other a private banker.

Wants U. S. to Join Discussions.

It was noted in this connection that representatives of France and Great Britain will meet shortly to discuss the proposed Danubian customs union confederation and that the Lausanne conference on German reparations has been postponed until June. It has been apparent since last winter when the international committee at Basel reported Germany unable to continue reparations payments on the present levels, a drive has been under way to get the United States to participate in the international debt discussions.

Up to the present time the United States has refused to send a representative to the Lausanne meeting or to discuss the subject of further repudiation of war debts owed this country prior to Europe's settling of its German reparations problem. In view of the fact that the European statesmen will have an opportunity to talk to Mr. Stimson privately at Geneva it is considered certain Mr. Stimson will go prepared to state the administration views on these subjects.

ROME, April 2.—Despite the depression, Italian emigrants' remittances, coming largely from Italians in the United States, are showing an increasing flow back to Italy, according to figures given out today by the Bank of Naples. PAIR CONFESS TO PARTICIPATION IN ABDUCTION PLOT

Peoria, Ill., April 2.—[Special.]—Joseph H. Pursifull, attorney and Sunday school teacher, and J. W. Betson, a Len Small politician, were held on open charges by Peoria police tonight as alleged members of the gang that kidnaped Dr. James W. Parker, wealthy Peoria physician. Both men have signed statements confessing that they acted as agents for the kidnapers, according to the police.

Meanwhile police and deputy sheriffs are searching for three more men, the trio who took part in the actual kidnaping.

Dr. Parker, who is president of the Tax Securities corporation of Chicago, was released Friday night in Fond du Lac Park drive near East Peoria, folfollowing 18 days' imprisonment. No ransom was paid and the police believe that the physician was freed when the kidnapers learned that authorities were closing in on them.

The hunt for the abductors was marked by the use of tapped wires, dictaphones and the aid of Alexander Jamie, chief investigator of the "Secret Six" in Chicago, and his aides.

REVOLT AGAINST JAPAN GROWS IN MANCHURIA

Tokio Rushes Troops as Fighting Rages.

BY JOHN POWELL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SHANGHAI, April 3 [Sunday].—Although the Japanese claim to have captured the town of Nungan, 30 miles northwest of Changchun, the new capital of Manchuria, from Chinese forces opposed to Japanese domination, a Chinese report from Peiping said that serious fighting is continuing there. The Japanese force of 3,000 is being assisted by Chinese allies under Gen. Chang Hai-peng who is associated now with the new Manchoukuo government. Meanwhile a dispatch from Tokio announced that Japan was sending heavy reinforcements to Manchuria.

The Peiping report, which was based on information supplied by Marshal Chang Hsu, said that loyalist Chinese troops had captured a large stock of Japanese ammunition. The report said a panic prevails in Changchun. Shops have been closed because of reports that large numbers of loyalist Chinese troops in civilian clothes have entered the city and are plotting a reign of terror.

South Manchuria Rebels.

Meantime, another serious rebellion against Japan has broken out in the Chientao district of south Manchuria. This is an extensive mountainous area including parts of Fengtien and Kirin provinces adjoining Corea. This district is largely populated by Corean revolutionaries who have emigrated from Corea, and has long been the center of communist and revolutionary intrigue.

Reports from Mukden state that large numbers of Corean farmers and Russian emigres have fled from this district across the Tumen river into Corea. The war office at Tokio has ordered a large detachment of Japanese troops from the Corean garrison into Chientao to protect Japanese consulates and residents.

Chinese reports from Peiping claim that the Japanese have two objectives in sending troops into the Chientao area, aside from suppressing the rebellion.

Seek to Build Railway.

The first is for garrison purposes, to enable the Japanese to complete connection of a railway, running from Changchun in a southeasterly direction through Kirin province, with the Corean railway system. For many years the Chinese prevented the extension of the Kirin railway, alleging that the Japanese intended to annex Chientao to Corea.

The second Japanese object is said to be to establish a garrison along the border between Kirin and the soviet maritime province, thus enabling the Japanese to invade the terrain and possibly cut the Chinese Eastern railway northwest of Vladivostok in event of Russo-Japanese complications.

Five Coreans and one Japanese are reported to have been murdered by Chinese on March 30 near Hailun, north of Harbin. Another report from Harbin said that a clash between Japanese troops under Gen. Hasebe and Chinese loyalists at the town of Kaolimao, in Kirin province, resulted in one Japanese being killed and seven wounded.

Peace Parley Lags.

Gen. Tsai Ting-kai, commander of the Chinese 19th route army, yesterday said that the most important point in dispute at the Sino-Japanese peace parley here concerns the setting of a time limit for the Japanese evacuation. The peace parley is now virtually deadlocked.

He declared that the bargaining over the places where the Japanese have insisted upon stationing troops near Shanghai is not important, since Shanghai itself is Chinese territory, but in event the Japanese insist on stationing their troops without setting a time limit for withdrawal, the conference is doomed to failure.

Gen Tsai questioned the sincerity of the Japanese and declared that if the Japanese launch further attacks, the Chinese are prepared to resist to the last bullet and the last man.

Japan Sends Reinforcements.

TOKIO, April 2.—[U.P.]—Heavy Japanese reinforcements were sent into Manchuria today to cope with the growing drive of Chinese armies threatening Japan's hold on that area and the stability of the new Manchurian state of Manchoukuo.

Engagements in various parts of south and central Manchuria were reported, with villages burned and mines threatened.

It was officially announced that the Corean army had been instructed to send a unit to the Chientao district of Manchuria, where the Chinese outnumbered the Kirin provincial troops loyal to Japan.

Serious trouble was reported near Yentai, just south of Mukden on the line to Port Arthur. Dispatches said Chinese troops attacked and burned 13 villages southeast of the Yentai colliery, which was guarded by a Japanese garrison.

A force of 400 Chinese attacked the Yentai colliery at dawn today. Japanese reinforcements were sent from Liaoyang and Ansha, a short distance to the south.

Harbin dispatches said Japanese troops, coöperating with 5,000 native Corean soldiers, were en route to another scene of action 120 miles south of Harbin, in north central Manchuria, where Chinese were reported to be looting and burning villages.

Severe fighting was also reported in progress at Nungan, in Kirin province south of the Sungari river. Chinese besieging the town captured part of it on Friday, but were forced to withdraw after a brisk engagement.

Japan to Extend Financial Aid.

TOKIO, April 2.—(AP)—Financial as well as military assistance for the new Manchurian régime was being prepared today. It was understood that the Japanese government was ready to accept an offer by the Mitsui and Mitsubishi interests, two of the great Japanese financial houses, to take over any necessary loans made to the Pu-Yi régime.

The cabinet already has approved a loan of 20,000,000 yen [normally $10,000,000] for the new state, to be made through semi-official agencies such as the South Manchurian railway. It was expected that this loan would be taken over by the Mitsui and Mitsubishi interests, as the government is short of funds. It was understood that the government was ready to coöperate with the financial houses in a coordinated program of Japanese investment in Manchuria.

China to Fight—Chiang.

[Copyright: 1932: By the Associated Press.]

NANKING, April 2.—Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, Chinese generalissimo and former president, declared today that Manchuria is still part of China and that China would resist with arms any further attacks of the Japanese, although she is not preparing for war.

In Manchuria, he said, the Chinese would oppose by every peaceful means the "tricky efforts" of the Japanese "to set up a puppet state" in the three eastern provinces.

"Manchuria is still an integral part of China and always will be," he said. "No new state exists. 'Manchoukuo' is pure camouflage by the Japanese. The strenuous efforts to set up the new government is entirely their handiwork. China will never tolerate such a move, under any circumstances.

"What few real Manchus are left are nearly all in China. Their civilization and culture has, to all intents and purposes, been assimilated by the Chinese. There are few, if any, representative Manchus in Manchuria today. Japanese claims to the contrary are pure fiction."

HELD AS BANDIT SUSPECTS.

James Davis, 21 years old, and William Loder, 26 years old, both of 1717 South Michigan avenue, were held last night as the bandits who robbed Dr. H. M. Bolen of 5215 Greenwood avenue early yesterday.

HOPE VANISHES FOR EARLY PEACE IN MINE DISPUTE

Adjourn Wage Conference to April 13.

Hope for an early settlement in the Illinois coal mine dispute vanished yesterday when the joint wage scale committee of miners and operators adjourned until April 13. As a result of the wage dispute all but a few of the 144 producing mines in the state, employing between forty and fifty thousand men, remained closed yesterday.

The adjournment was reported to have been taken at the request of the operators. Both groups expressed the belief a settlement would be reached when the conference reopens.

John Walker, president of district 12, in a statement yesterday said the blame for the shutdown was "squarely on the shoulders of the coal operators." In offering to continue operations under the contract which expired March 31, pending the reaching of a new agreement, the miners feel they did their share to avoid a shutdown, Walker said.

"In saying this we do not underestimate the difficulties with which the operators have to contend in meeting, in the market, the competition from other sections of the country where the coal companies have destroyed the miners' union and brought to those mining regions wages and working conditions on a par with those under which he serf toiled in feudal times," Walker said.

Work was resumed yesterday in scattered mines in the state under an agreement with the union to continue paying the old contract scale pending outcome of the Chicago negotiations. One thousand miners returned to work in the Peoria district under this plan. Seven large mines in that area are affected. The Galesburg Mining company, employing 350 men and with an average monthly output of 20,000 tons, also opened. The Bobby Dick mines near Herrin and the United Electric company, operating several strip mines, also continued operations.

The Illinois miners have asked an increase in wages from $6.10 to $7 a day. The operators have insisted on a cut in the present scale.

COMEDIAN SUES WIFE AND BARES 'NECKING' CRASH

Asks $100,000 Damages from Her Friend.

Through Mrs. Helen M. Glason's alleged propensity for necking in automobiles, her husband, William I. Glason, a vaudeville comedian known professionally as Billy Glason, said he learned of her friendship for another man. This led to the filing of his divorce suit and a $100,000 damage suit for alienation of affections in the Superior court yesterday. The defendant in the alienation suit is Albert Pollack, 6128 Woodlawn avenue, owner of a south side fur shop.

On last Nov. 14, the divorce bill charged, Mrs. Glason and Pollack went riding in Glason's automobile. Because they were "necking and not watching the traffic" their car collided with another in front of the replica of Fort Dearborn on the outer drive.

Mrs. Glason Injured.

Mrs. Glason who had been driving, was injured. She was taken to a hospital, the bill charged, but remained only a few hours and left to spend the week end in Pollack's apartment. The bill states that her husband learned of the accident when Mrs. Glason entered another hospital several days after the accident.

According to the bill Pollack had been a schoolday sweetheart of Mrs. Glason, a former Chicago beauty contest winner and Mack Sennett bathing girl.

Mrs. Glason remained in the hospital until shortly after Christmas, when she was moved to an apartment at the Monterey hotel, 4300 Clarendon avenue. There, the bill charges, Pollack has been a frequent visitor, remaining until 4 o'clock in the morning on several occasions.

Asks Daughter's Custody.

Glason asked the custody of his daughter, Shirley Marie, 6 years old, who now is living with her mother. Mrs. Glason could not be reached at the hotel yesterday, nor could Pollack be found.

Last week Mrs. Glason filed a bill for separate maintenance in the Circuit court, charging cruelty. She was the former wife of Bill Dooley, another vaudeville performer, whom she divorced in 1923.

According to Attorney Philip N. Davis, who filed the bill, the Glasons were married Nov. 20, 1923, and separated last Oct. 11. Glason is 35. His wife and Pollack are 29.

REPORT ENTIRE FACULTY OUSTED IN CHURCH ROW

Seceding members of the church school of the Rogers Park Congregational church, led by Dr. Howard Dabbs, will hold services this morning at 11 o'clock in the Howard theater, 1621 Howard street. Dr. Dabbs, ousted as a leader when church authorities objected to his recreational program, announced last night that the speaker will be William Aitchison, a Blue Island attorney, formerly an ordained minister, who will talk on "Modern Religion."

Conflicting reports from the church membership yesterday indicated that others beside Dr. Dabbs had fallen under the ban of the committee on religious education. Six teachers in the church school department were requested to resign, it was stated by Dr. Dabbs. These included the wife of the pastor, the Rev. Stanley B. Crosland, and Mrs. Ray C. Mons, whose husband is chairman of the board of trustees. The pastor, on being asked about the matter, replied that "no one was ousted."

Following the resignation of the entire faculty—by request—the church school was to be reorganized under another principal, according to Dr. Dabbs.

Woman Charges Assault; Asks $10,000 Damages

Charles Ofner, 5057 Drexel boulevard, wealthy owner of a wholesale cotton concern and prominent in Masonic circles, was named defendant in a $10,000 damage suit filed yesterday in the Circuit court by Mrs. Ella Schance, 33 years old, 1650 Maypole avenue. In her declaration Mrs. Schance charges that she was assaulted by Ofner last Sept. 17 in an office at 1607 West Lake street, where she is employed.

Budget of Virgin Islands Balanced by New Taxes

ST. THOMAS, Virgin Islands, April 2.—(AP)—The financial crisis for the present fiscal year has passed. This became known today, when inheritance taxes and economies covered the deficit. It was announced, however, that in the new budget salaries would have to be revised to meet falling revenues and a cut in the federal appropriation.

DAKOTA FARMERS PROPOSE DRASTIC BILLS FOR RELIEF

Will Vote on Debt Holiday June 29.

Bismarck, N. D., April 2.—(AP)—Petitions for three state measures providing a five year partial moratorium of debts, abolition of mortgages on growing crops, and prohibiting corporations, except coöperatives, from engaging in farming, were accepted today by Secretary of State Robert Byrne.

The proposals, sponsored by the North Dakota Farmers' union, will be voted on in the June 29 primary election.

One provides that mortgages on growing and unharvested crops have become and are a public nuisance and are a menace to the public health and welfare and that any and all mortgages on growing and unharvested crops shall be held null and void.

Bans Corporation Farms.

The one dealing with corporation farming states that all domestic and foreign corporations are prohibited from engaging in farming or agriculture and are prohibited from acquiring or holding real estate in excess of that necessary for the conduct of their business, unless it is acquired by judicial process or operation of law.

The proposal provides further that all corporations who now own or hold real estate, except that reasonably necessary in the conduct of their business, shall dispose of it within ten years provided that during the ten year period the corporation may farm and use the land for agricultural purposes.

"Nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit coöperative corporations, 75 per cent of whose members or stockholders are actual farmers, residing on farms or depending principally on farming for their livelihood, from acquiring real estate and engaging in coöperative farming or agriculture," the act states.

Penalties Are Provided.

The proposed law provides that where violations occur the real estate affected shall go to the county in which it is situated and be disposed of by public auction. The proceeds would be paid to the corporation that formerly owned the real estate.

The other petition says "that in order to prevent a complete financial collapse of agriculture and commerce and industry in this state, and the collapse of civil government, and in order to maintain the public health and welfare and morals of the people of this state, a partial moratorium for a period of five years, or until such time within the five years that the congress of the United States shall have passed the farmers' farm relief bill, known as the Frazier bill, is hereby declared on an existing indebtedness at the time that this act takes effect, including taxes and debts due by individuals to the state, county, or other political subdivisions.

"Except that the benefits of this act shall not extend to corporations, nor shall they extend to any person who, upon an order to show cause before any district court, is found, upon competent evidence, to be financially able to pay such indebtedness without sacrificing his home, lands, goods, or chattels with which he earns a living and which are necessary to maintain his family."

SMART YOUNG WOMEN OF ENGLAND TAKE UP PIPES; DISCARD CIGARS

BRIGHTON, England, April 24.—(AP)—The smart young women of Brighton, time honored British seashore resort, have taken to pipe smoking and Brighton tobacconists wish they knew exactly what to do about it.

The smart set isn't very stable with its fads. A few months ago the girls all were smoking mannikin cigars, but that didn't last long and the tobacco dealers would like to know how long pipe smoking is going to last before they lay in a supply of expensive fancy Meerschaums and swan necked calabashes.

Some of the more enterprising dealers have a highly scented blend of pipe tobacco but one of the new customers insists on thick twist tobacco.

Dry Agent Wounded from Ambush Loses Left Eye

Metropolis, Ill., April 2.—(AP)—Doctors today removed the left eye of Harvey Grasse of East St. Louis, federal prohibition agent who was wounded two weeks ago when he and a party of raiders were ambushed near here.

COMMITS SUICIDE BY PLUNGE OVER NIAGARA FALLS

Niagara Falls, N. Y., April 2.—[U.P.]—A Buffalo chiropractor, tortured by an illness that resulted from shell shock during the world war, was swept over Niagara falls today. He waded into the swift river while six watchers shouted warnings.

The suicide, Lorne S. Impey, left his coat and a United States veterans' bureau letter on the river bank when he plunged in, a note in his office, and a telegram which he dispatched a few minutes earlier to his brother in Buffalo.

Arthur Impey, the dead man's father, and Lewis Impey, a brother, identified the coat as Lorne's, and definitely established that it was he who plunged over the falls.

Patrolman Michael Senf of the reservation police and five workmen were near the river's edge when Impey climbed over the iron guard rail and stepped into the stream.

They shouted, but Impey paid no attention. He picked his way over the rocks on the river's bed until he reached the main currents.

You look all in, Bill what's the matter?

"Don't know what's wrong with me, Joe. Got up feeling flat, as usual. Can't eat...feel terrible all the time. Haven't been anywhere in weeks. Now here it is only noon, and I'm half dead already. S'pose I'll feel like a rag tonight."

"Pshaw! You've got ASTHENIA—that's all."

"As-the-ni-a?... what the deuce is that?"

"Oh, nothing to worry about. You've let yourself run down. Was that way myself a few weeks ago. Got so a cup of coffee was all I'd take in the morning; then I'd mope around all day because I felt so punk.

"Began coming down late... feeling just as tired as I did when I went to bed. Finally the old man noticed it.

"'You've been slippin' lately,' he said, 'what's the trouble?' Told him... and he laughed!

"'Why, there's only one thing troublin' you, Joe, you've got Asthenia!

"'Tell you what you do. You know, I've been goin' to French Lick Springs for years... ten days there and I'd come back like a new man. But—in a few months I'd slip and have to do it all over. On my last trip I found out why.

"'Doctor there told me it was easy to get rid of Asthenia... the important thing was to keep it out! And that's exactly what I am doing. I take Pluto Water every Sunday morning. Nothing bothers me now. Smoke eight or ten cigars a day... never go to bed before midnight... get up fresh as a daisy in the morning and eat like a horse. Haven't missed a day in months....

"'Buy a bottle of Pluto Water. You get it at any drug store. Take a fifth of a glass of Pluto Water with four-fifths of a glass of hot water the first thing when you get up, and stick to it every morning before breakfast for ten days. That'll take Asthenia clean out of you. Then... remember... take it every Sunday morning, and you'll forget you ever had Asthenia.'

"Well, it worked to perfection, Bill... never felt better in my life. Get a bottle and try it yourself. Keep it up for ten days—after that every Sunday morning. It will make a new man of you!"

A Gentle Laxative

Pluto Water, taken as directed below, is a gentle, effective laxative — non-irritating — non-habit-forming. Recommended by physicians everywhere. Start now to cleanse your system of Asthenia ⅕ glass of Pluto Water in ⅘ glass of hot water—each morning for ten days. Then take Pluto Water every Sunday morning.

It's ASTHENIA that's pulling you down. (The want or loss of strength; debility; diminution of the vital forces... often due to intestinal micro-organisms.)

Thousands have turned to Pluto Water ...it's the checkmate for Asthenia. Physicians everywhere recommend it as a mild and effective laxative — non-irritating and non-habit-forming.

Two sizes—20c and 45c—at all drug counters; on trains, steamships; and at hotels.

PLUTO WATER

America's Laxative Mineral Water corrects Asthenia in almost every instance. If after taking Pluto Water for ten days your condition is not entirely corrected, see your physician immediately.

PASTOR ACCUSED OF PHILANDERING TO FACE FLOCK

"Bedroom Court" Held in London Cottage.

LONDON, April 2.—[U. P.]—The Rev. Harold F. Davison, whose trial on charges of indiscriminate philandering has stirred England more than any case in a decade, will face his congregation at Stiffkey, Norfolk, tomorrow, and preach at the morning and evening services.

The rector left London tonight for Norfolk and will return to London tomorrow night for resumption of his trial on Monday.

The hearing was adjourned over the week-end, but during the afternoon a "bedroom court" was held in a small, century-old cottage in the Hammersmith section of London.

Take Landlady's Testimony.

The chancellor of the ecclesiastical court, counsel for the prosecution and defense and the rector himself crowded into the tiny bedroom to hear the evidence of Mrs. Lake, landlady for Barbara Harris, 17 year old girl with whom the rector is accused of having been intimate. The landlady was ill in bed. Her deposition will be read in court Monday.

A tremendous crowd awaited the arrival of the principals at the cottage and the automobiles of the attorneys were blocked, forcing them to fight their way through the throng on foot.

The Rev. Mr. Davison, however, who on the two preceding days had encountered difficulty in finding the necessary half crown for his cab fare, traveled on the subway and approached the cottage afoot.

Drives Away with Women.

After an hour and a quarter of the "bedroom court," the rector drove away in an automobile accompanied by two women.

The earlier session of the trial at the historic church house drew the usual crowds, despite the counter attraction of a heavy Saturday schedule of sports.

The day's chief witness was a young chauffeur, whose name was not disclosed.

He testified he lives with Rose Ellis, another of the rector's women friends. Miss Ellis was often visited by the Rev. Mr. Davison, the chauffeur testified, and the rector once threatened suicide when he learned the girl had told her story to the bishop of Norwich in a 13 page statement. The rector later induced her to retract it.

WOMEN TO MAP REPEAL DEMAND IN APRIL PARLEY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 2.—[Special.] — Women who are dissatisfied with prohibition will assemble here April 12 for the third annual conference of the women's organization for national prohibition reform.

The thousand or more delegates from 40 states, representing, they estimate, about a half million anti-prohibition women in the country, therefore regard the coming meeting as an important point in the development of party platforms and policies for the Chicago conventions.

The conference will, it is understood, make demand for a resubmission plank in both the Democratic and the Republican platforms. And it is expected to launch a campaign for the election of those candidates, state and national, who are committed to a change in the present prohibition act.

The conference will bring to Washington a number of women distinguished in political, civic, and literary work. Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank of Chicago is to make one of the leading addresses.

The Illinois delegation is headed by Mrs. Leslie Wheeler and Mrs. William H. Mitchell, and it includes Mrs. George E. Brennan, Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy, Mrs. Clifford Rodman, and Mrs. William A. Sauer.

BORDER KILLERS HUNTED BY U. S., MEXICAN POSSES

Mother, Six Children on Lonely Ranch Slain.

El Paso, Tex., April 2.—(AP)—Posses pushed a hunt on both sides of the Mexican border tonight for three bandits who slaughtered seven members of the family of Melquiadez Espinosa, Berino, N. M., dairyman, in a robbery attempt last night.

Texas rangers, New Mexico officers and border policemen of the United States and Mexico coöperated to run down the killers.

Converge on Ranch.

Rancho Flores, a cattle ranch south of the international border, was the immediate objective of a squad of mounted police which took up the quest today from Juarez, Chihuahua. This ranch is the only human habitation for miles around and it was believed to be a likely hiding ground for the bandits.

More than 500 persons filed through the little adobe hut of the Espinosa family today to pay their last respects to the slain mother and her six children, who were shot down when the father said he was unable to produce $5,000 cash demanded by the three bandits.

The victims were Mrs. Filomena Espinosa, 45; Luis, 30; Hipolito, 26; Andres, 23; Vicente, 18; Juanita, 12, and Felicita, 9.

Grandmother Is Spared.

The children's grandmother, 82 year old Juanita Espinosa, sat on a bed nearby, a brown cigaret dangling from her dried lips. She is blind. Her life was spared by the bandits.

But to visitors she related how Vicente begged the bandits to kill him and end his suffering after they had wounded him.

Espinosa, the head of the household, explained how he escaped death.

"We had just finished our evening meal and were talking when I heard an automobile enter our yard," he said. "One of the men said they were officers hunting for stolen cattle. He said he wanted to see the papers on my herd. I went into another room and got the papers from a trunk. The man who seemed to be the ringleader said they were all right, but that they wanted $5,000.

"When I told them I did not have the money they started shooting.

"The men took me into another room and ordered me to lie on the floor. One of the men then shot at me. The bullet hit my cheek. Blood spouted. I acted light I was dead."

THIS EX-BANKER STILL HAS IDEAS ABOUT BIG MONEY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 2.—The habit of dealing in large sums of money, acquired when his late bank was still functioning, today led to the downfall of James Nisito Ciro, alias Agostino Badessi, described on his passport as a New York bank director.

Ciro was arrested by French police today on a charge of attempting to cash $4,000 worth of forged travelers' checks at the Paris branch of a New York bank. A search at his hotel revealed $60,000 worth of phony checks which, the police charged, Ciro and an accomplice named Auguste Dilisi intended to spread around Europe.

Dilisi escaped, but it is reported he was arrested on his arrival in Milan late tonight.

Ciro told the police that since his bank failed he "has been looking around for something to do" and thought up the check racket. His banking experience apparently failed him as the checks were spotted as bogus by the first bank clerk who saw them.

CHICAGO SPENDS 111 MILLION MORE THAN ITS TAXES

Cost Per Person $26.24 in '17 and $68.01 in '29

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 2.—[Special.]—Chicago, during the fiscal year ending Dec. 31, 1930, paid out, for operation and maintenance of its general departments, $146,292,687, or $43.12 per capita. During the same period the city received total revenue receipts of $185,477,935, or $54.67 per capita.

These figures as given out today by the census bureau of the department of commerce are not, however, as gratifying as they look, for the expenditures listed do not include the payments for operations on public service enterprises [$7,763,085], interest on debt [$25,550,948], and outlays for permanent improvements [$117,769,077]. This brings the total expenditures to $297,375,797.

Includes Non-City Income.

It should be noted, the report points out, "that in order to put the city of Chicago on a basis comparable with those cities in which the county organization has been merged with that of the city, and in which the schools, parks, sanitary districts and forest preserve districts are a part of the city corporation," the figures given include a portion of the transactions of Cook county sanitary districts, forest preserves and independent park systems, the percentage in each case being based on the ratio of the taxable valuation of the city to that of the entire independent district.

The total payments included for the county amounted to $26,391,024.

The total payments included for the schools amounted to $68,068,899.

The total payments included for independent parks amounted to $27,614,393.

The total payments included for independent sanitary districts amounted to $16,182,285.

The total payments included for forest preserve districts amounted to $2,763,493.

The total revenue receipts as disclosed in the report, including the county, schools, parks, sanitary district and forest preserve district were $185,477,935.

Expense Surplus $111,897,862.

"This was $5,871,215 more than the total payments of the year, exclusive of the payments for permanent improvements, but still $111,897,862 less than the total payments, including those for permanent improvements," the bureau report states.

The report has this to say of taxes in Chicago:

"Property taxes represented 50.9 per cent of the total revenue for 1930, 28.4 per cent for 1929, and 56.5 per cent for 1917. The increase in the amount of property taxes collected was 80 per cent from 1917 to 1930 and 228.2 per cent from 1929 to 1930. The per capita of property taxes collected was $27.81 in 1930, $8.64 in 1929 and $20.39 in 1917. These percentages and per capitas reflect the widely known conditions existing in Cook county relative to tax levies and collections.

Property Value 3½ Billions.

The taxable valuation of property in Chicago subject to ad valorem taxes for city corporation was $3,694,498,706. The levy for all purposes was $226,320,739, of which $73,520,524, or 32.5 per cent, was levied for the city corporation; $16,625,244, or 7.3 per cent, for the county; $75,367,774, or 33.3 per cent, for the schools; $22,014,960, or 9.7 per cent, for the parks; $21,058,643, or 9.3 per cent, for the sanitary district; $3,325,049, or 1.5 per cent, for the forest preserve district, and $14,408,545, or 6.4 per cent, for the state. The per capita tax levy for the city, county, school, park, sanitary district, forest preserve district, and state was $68.01 in 1929 and $26.24 in 1917."

HUGE BELL, MADE FOR CHICAGO, IS TESTED IN BRITAIN

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, April 2.—The second largest tuned bell in the world boomed out its notes for the first time at the Croydon Bell foundry today.

It will be shipped to America soon and hung in the new carillon at the University of Chicago. The biggest bell in the world—made at the same foundry four years ago—now echoes from the belfry of Riverside church in New York.

Hundreds of bell ringers from churches in all parts of England held a convention at the foundry today and marveled at the bell's deep, sonorous tones.

even superhuman efforts to reduce costs of government."

The committee also showed the obligations of the ten governments by expense classifications, which are as follows:

Purpose.	Amount.
Unpaid bills, pay rolls, etc.	$ 59,833,628
Balance due to pension funds	1,870,526
Tax anticipation warrants—
1931	49,808,018
1930	137,316,610
1929	33,115,270
1928	10,474,500
Interest accrued on warrants	15,269,304
Defaulted bonds and interest coupons	3,328,248
Contractual obligations other than those payable from bond funds	11,095,550
Total	$322,111,654

The committee expects to make a complete report as to the financial affairs of the ten tax spending agencies in the near future.

Illegal Park Levy Charged.

In an open letter the committee also told the taxpayers in five park districts that the park boards for those districts have for many years illegally levied a so-called "deficit tax" in addition to other taxes. The districts levying the tax are the Irving Park district, Jefferson Park district, Old Portage Park district, Northwest Park district and the Sauganash Park district.

These districts, the committee said, have included in their 1930 tax levies the illegal "deficit tax." The letter urged the taxpayers to make personal inquiry of their park boards why they persist in making the levy, and to ask the county clerk why he extends it.

Slaying Trial Thrown Out by Woman's Accusation

Beckley, W. Va., April 2.—[Special.]—As Clair Kessel, 32, charged with the murder of Allen Jarrett, 28, took the witness stand today Mrs. Lucy Solaski screamed, "How could he do it? He killed my brother and broke my mother's heart." She collapsed. A motion to declare the case a mistrial was granted and a new trial was set for June 27.

BALANCE BUDGET AND AID TRADE, STRAWN ADVISES

Strictest U. S. Economy Needed.

Balancing our national budget is the most important problem confronting this country, and is a potential starting point for a swingback to prosperity, Silas H. Strawn, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, told the Chicago Council on Foreign Relations yesterday. Three hundred persons attending the luncheon at the Palmer house heard him discuss "Obstacles to Foreign Trade," in the light of his recent trip abroad.

How closely foreign countries are watching the efforts of congress to balance the budget is reflected, he pointed out, in the steady decline of the dollar in the foreign exchange market. The foreign currencies led by the pound sterling have, at the same time, advanced steadily in the same proportions.

The First Essential.

"Balancing the budget through proper measures of economy and taxation is the first essential for improvement in the country's economic position." He quoted a resolution adopted by the directors of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. This resolution, broadcast to the 874,000 membership of the organization, has brought thousands of letters and wires promising coöperation of business men, he announced.

"Every economy should be put into effect," the resolution continued. "Drastic cuts in government expenditures can and must be made. To balance the budget requires not only the strictest economy in expenditures, but additional taxes, carefully framed."

The three major obstacles to international trade revival, according to Mr. Strawn, are: fear and lack of confidence, a reduction in buying power, and tariff barriers. Many of the latter are erected in the nature of reprisals against the American high tariff wall, he said, and have done tremendous harm to this country's export market.

"Ever since the war and until 1929 our foreign trade increased rapidly until it reached a total of $9,641,388,295," he said, "with a favorable balance of $841,136,257. Since then there has been a steady decline, until it is now the lowest since 1910. Our merchandise exports for January exceeded the imports by only $14,000,000. Generally our foreign trade ran between 8 and 10 per cent of our total volume. In 1931 it was 53 per cent less than in 1929.

Drive Capital to Cover.

"You've heard some talk by members of congress about 'soaking the rich,'" he said. "One difficulty with that plan is that there are so few left to soak. Another great difficulty is that the result would be the withdrawal of great amounts of capital and their investment in tax exempt securities. Seriously, soaking the rich, however much they were soaked, would not yield the requisite amount of revenue. It would drive capital to cover and destroy initiative."

STRIPS JOSHUA'S TRUMPET BLAST OF JERICHO GLORY

So the people shouted when the priests blew with the trumpets: and it came to pass, when the people heard the sound of the trumpet, and the people shouted with a great shout, that the wall fell down flat, so that the people went up into the city, every man straight before him, and they took the city.—Joshua vi., 20.

[Copyright: 1932: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, April 2.—The walls of Jericho collapsed in a great earthquake and not because Joshua blew his trumpet, according to evidence just found in Palestine by Prof. John Garstang, British archeologist.

In a report received in London today, Prof. Garstang expressed the belief that no human agency was responsible for the city's downfall. The walls crashed outward in one of the earthquake's common to the Jordan valley, he asserted, and thus enabled the Israelites to occupy the city.

The report also told of blackened timbers in houses excavated on the site of Jericho, all pointing to the fact that the city was destroyed by fire.

TEACHERS HOPE FOR FULL MONTH PAY THIS WEEK

Money Is Available from Warrants and State.

Chicago school teachers, whose financial straits have become nationwide news, were cheered yesterday with the prospect of getting a full month's pay, probably this week. Money for two weeks' pay will be provided by the city through the sale of 1930 tax anticipation warrants. The money for the other two weeks is to come from Chicago's share of the state distributive fund.

In addition to the 14,000 Chicago teachers, some 4,000 rural school teachers will receive approximately half a month's salary from the Cook county allotment of the state fund.

Federation Raises Obstacle.

Payment of teachers from the funds raised by the city may be temporarily delayed, however, as a result of action taken yesterday by the Chicago Teachers' federation, led by Miss Margaret Haley. Attorneys for the federation protested to City Controller Szymczak against the decision to pay the teachers for two weeks in January instead of December.

The federation says that the purchase of 1931 board of education warrants by the city to meet the pay roll will be in violation of state statutes, charging that the board of education will have sold more warrants than the law permits.

Controller Szymczak declared the school board can still sell nearly $5,000,000 worth of warrants before reaching the maximum. Half a month's pay roll for the teachers is approximately $1,750,000. He also said it was up to the school board to decide what pay roll is to be met.

On the legal point raised by the federation he said an opinion had been requested of Corporation Counsel Sexton and the law firm of Chapman & Cutler. The opinion is expected tomorrow and, if it is favorable, checks will be mailed out later in the day.

Bogan Makes Plea for Unity.

Superintendent of Schools William J. Bogan, when informed of the action of the teachers' federation, said the teachers were imperiling their interests by disputes among themselves. Speaking before the Principals' club at the Art institute, he made a plea for unity among the teachers.

Announcement that the state funds were ready for distribution was made yesterday by County Treasurer McDonough. The amount available for Cook county is $1,877,218. A check for that amount will be turned over to County Superintendent of Schools William J. Tobin tomorrow for distribution to the Chicago and rural schools.

ARTIFICIAL LAKE BEGINS FORMING AT STARVED ROCK

Peoria, Ill., April 2.—[Special.]—Seven of ten gates, forming the dam across the Illinois river at Starved Rock, were closed Friday and water began creeping up over the islands of mud and sand where, within a few days, Starved Rock lake will be created.

This new lake in the valley of the Illinois will be about ten miles long and a mile in width at its broadest point. From the top of Starved Rock and from the brow of five miles of the ridge of Rocky Cliffs of which Starved Rock is a part, a magnificent view of this new lake from the east shore will be possible. It will loom large from the more distant bluffs on the west side of the valley, except from Buffalo Rock, four miles south of Ottawa, on the west shore line, where another closeup from a good altitude may be secured.

Looking down from the top of Starved Rock, the changes which the hand of man are making in the picture below are most interesting. Directly under the eye is the new $2,000,000 concrete dam, with its 600 foot concrete lock on the far end. Over this dam an impressive cataract will plunge a distance of 18 to 20 feet.

GERARD RESIGNS AS TREASURER OF DEMOCRATS

Washington, D. C., April 2.—[Special.]—James W. Gerard of New York, former ambassador to Germany, today notfied the clerk of the house of representatives that he has submitted his resignation, effective immediately as treasurer of the Democratic national committee.

It was said at the Democratic national committee headquarters here that the pressure of Mr. Gerard's private practice of law had made it impossible for him to give sufficient time to his duties as custodian of the Democratic party's finances.

The Democratic victory fund drive to raise money for the coming presidential campaign is now in full swing, and it is understood that extra work thrust upon Mr. Gerard's shoulders as a result of the drive had proved too heavy in addition to his regular duties and his private law practice. His resignation came as a surprise, however, especially at the height of the drive for funds.

It was considered probable today that John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for the presidency in 1924, will temporarily assume the office vacated by Mr. Gerard. Mr. Davis is directing the victory fund drive.

As to a permanent successor, Democratic headquarters declined to opine, stating that such a decision could not be reached immediately. Chairman John J. Raskob, it was said, must appoint some one at once to act as treasurer, but the final selection can not be made until the full national committee meets again.

Shots Through Poolroom Window Wound 2 Patrons

Two men were wounded in a mysterious shooting early this morning in the poolroom at 617 North Hoyne avenue. They were sitting with a group of other patrons when an unseen gunman fired a volley of shots through a rear window. Rocco Maro, 40 years old, of 616 North Hoyne avenue was struck twice in the left arm. An artery was severed and at St. Mary's hospital it was said his condition was serious. Walter Jarosz, 20, of 2057 Erie street was hit in the right arm and taken to the Bridewell hospital. Jack Magliolo, 649 North Hoyne avenue, owner of the poolroom, could offer no clew to the shooting.

AL SMITH IN RACE TO STAY DESPITE PRIMARY RESULT

Brands Roosevelt Pact Story False.

New York, April 2.—[Special.]—Former Gov. Alfred E. Smith in a series of telegrams sent to Democrats in the middle west today declared he was in the presidential race to stay and made it clear that he would not withdraw his name, whatever the outcome of primary fights, before the national convention at Chicago in June.

The former governor at the same time spiked rumors that he was working under a secret agreement with Gov. Roosevelt by which his support would be swung to the other New Yorker should his own strength fail to shape up properly and that he would be given a cabinet appointment in the event Roosevelt won.

There was no nonsense about the statement. It was plain and his statement was hedged about by no qualifications. It follows:

"Statements appearing in the Wisconsin and Minnesota press that there is any understanding between me and any other candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination or that I will withdraw my name prior to the convention are false. Such statements imply a disloyalty to my friends and supporters which I resent."

The telegrams were sent to Howard E. Doran, an automobile dealer of Duluth, and John F. Calahan of Milwaukee, a member of the Democratic national committee. They were in reply to a letter received from Mr. Doran informing him that rumors were current that he would withdraw and then support Roosevelt.

EAST ST. LOUIS CUTS PAY 10 PCT.; REGRETS BEER LICENSE LOSS

East St. Louis, Ill., April 2.—(AP)—A 10 per cent cut in the salaries of all city employés has been announced by Mayor Frank Doyle.

The mayor said the action was taken in an effort to reduce the operating expenses of the city government by $70,000 in the next nine months and make the budget balance.

The cuts will affect 242 employés, including the mayor, whose salary is $4,500 a year. The employés have not been paid for three months.

City Commissioner John T. Connors, head of the department of finance, said: "I am sure if 325 saloons were each paying East St. Louis $750 annually, as they did before prohibition, we would be operating on a cash basis."

RUSSIA SUFFERS MEAT SHORTAGE; RATIONS CUT OFF

Live Stock Industry Admits Nation-Wide Collapse.

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latavia, April 2.—Orders to cancel meat rations for Moscow, Leningrad and Ukrainian industrial districts were issued today by Commissar of Supplies A. I. Mikojan. The restriction, which is temporary, follows the confession of the soviet live stock breeding industry of the breakdown of the government plan to supply meat to the population whose cards entitled them to purchase a pound a week this spring.

The Tass News Agency reports that the gaypayou [secret police] has arrested thirty managers of state breeding farms. They will be prosecuted on the charge of sabotaging meat production. One hundred other managers will be dismissed from their posts.

Because the program has been fulfilled only to the extent of sixty per cent, serious difficulties have arisen, the Tass News Agency says, adding that Commissar Mikojan has ordered a complete reorganization of the meat industry before August.

Most of the members of the Moscow diplomatic corps continue to receive weekly parcels of meat from Riga.

MR. BRUNDAGE, MR. MALONE, AND MR. CARLSTROM.

There are five candidates for the Republican nomination for governor, three of whom must rely upon an aggregate of votes cast by Republicans who are out of patience or disgusted. These candidates are Mr. Brundage, Mr. Malone, and Attorney General Carlstrom. The votes cast in the primaries for the three must come from people who will not support either the former governor, who is a candidate for reëlection, or the man picked by the present governor as his successor.

These two factions attract by patronage or prospects of patronage the major elements of Republican state organization as it has existed and operated for the last ten or fifteen years both in Chicago and downstate.

It would seem obvious, then, that Mr. Brundage, Mr. Malone, and Mr. Carlstrom, so long as all three make their bid to the voters not controlled by the discredited organization, are running against each other and that very likely all three will defeat the chance any one had to obtain the nomination. They check each other off the ticket. The chance one might have is wiped out because three are taking it.

Good judgment and common sense would suggest to them that they confer, take their political assets into account and give the one who must be conceded the most strength the opportunity to finish his campaign on the best terms. The two who would thus withdraw would lose nothing. The strongest might win.

JUSTICE TO MR. SHEARER.

William B. Shearer, who, at the suggestion of the President, was subjected to a senatorial investigation in 1929, now asks that a report to the senate be made on the findings of the investigation, or that the committee reconvene to take further testimony and evidence which he is prepared to submit.

Mr. Shearer reminds the senate that he was denounced by President Hoover and accused of treason by Senator Borah, who procured the investigation of Mr. Shearer. "It was before the United States senate that I was denounced," says Mr. Shearer, "it was before the United States senate I was investigated. It is in the United States senate that my status as an American rests."

The purpose of the investigation upon which Mr. Shearer demands a showdown was to disclose his alleged activities in behalf of certain shipbuilding companies at the Geneva naval conference of 1927. The inquiry was a fiasco. The chairman of the American delegation at the conference, Ambassador Gibson, said that "the information handed out by Mr. Shearer at Geneva was correct." Senator Shortridge, chairman of the subcommittee which investigated Mr. Shearer, the latter quotes as telling the press that "nothing showed that Mr. Shearer was sent there [Geneva] to defeat or frustrate the plans of our government, and he should not even be criticized." Mr. Shearer also points out that the three shipbuilding companies which Mr. Hoover and Mr. Borah apparently believed had employed Mr. Shearer to use some mysterious influence for their benefit during the conference have since received valuable government contracts to build ships, whereas, Mr. Shearer charges, he, "since the investigation, has been denounced, persecuted, interfered with and stopped from making a living."

Mr. Shearer protests that no public finding has been made and he now demands one. We think he is entitled to one. His offer to present further testimony and evidence suggests that it would be even better in the public interest to reopen the investigation. We have believed and said that Mr. Shearer suffered an injustice and the proceedings thus far known indicate that he did suffer injustice. It is a public interest that any citizen wronged should be righted, but there is also a public interest that such effect as the charges had upon the credit of the American representation at the conference and upon their course of action should be removed, even at this late day. Probably they remain as a vague residuum, at least in the minds of Americans prone to think ill of any vigorous assertion of American interests in foreign conferences.

At the conference in question those interests were vigorously asserted, and it would seem that from Mr. Hoover's readiness to suspect ulterior influences, as well as from the subsequent surrender of the position taken by the delegation selected by him for the London conference, he disapproved the course taken at the Geneva conference. The full clarification of the charges made against Mr. Shearer and the shipbuilding companies is therefore desirable, not only in justice to Mr. Shearer and the companies, but in justice to the nation whose security the delegation at Geneva ably defended.

THE WORST TREATIES IN HISTORY.

The president of the British board of trade, Mr. Walter Runciman, told a group of American correspondents in London that in his private judgment the treaties which ended the world war were the worst treaties known to history. Students of history may be able to discover treaties which in their opinion proved more damaging to posterity than those imposed upon Germany, Austria, Bulgaria and Turkey, but opinion must be well-nigh unanimous, outside France at any rate, that the job was bungled from start to finish. Malice, hate, fear, jealousy and demagogy had free play. The results are now only too evident. The world depression began in central Europe and every time recovery has seemed imminent a new collapse in central Europe has prevented its coming.

Mr. Runciman's statement should be read by Americans as a tribute to the statesmanship exhibited by the irreconcilables in the United States senate. They could not undo the vicious work of the Big Five at Versailles, but at least they prevented the United States from becoming a partner in the post-war folly and savagery. America is still being accused of perfidy in Europe for not having ratified the treaties, but that kind of perfidy is indistinguishable from good sense and good morals, as Mr. Runciman has now attested.

The charge is often made that if only the United States were to coöperate fully with the nations of Europe the international difficulties would instantly dissolve. The theory is that the influence for good of the United States would exorcise the evil spirits which possess all other nations. No chauvinist ever had as exalted a notion of his own nation's unfailing righteousness or of its duty to dominate the world as is shown by these good-willers.

All the facts are against them. The last time the United States coöperated fully with the great powers, the treaties which Mr. Runciman now denounces were the product. They were created in spite of all that Woodrow Wilson could do by way of tempering the greed of his allies. No American ever negotiated with foreign powers with greater prestige at his command than Mr. Wilson had when he went to Paris. If ever the "influence for good" of the United States was exertable, it was that time. The results stand as a warning which the American people cannot afford to forget.

JUST WHERE'S OUR STALIN?

A Moscow dispatch reports that the communist central executive committee has decreed that privately owned live stock may be retained hereafter by individual members of collective farms. The organization of the agricultural communes where everything is common property is not to be urged. The private ownership of live stock is to be encouraged.

Stalin's decisions are easily given the form of law and so long as he has the military and the police can be given the effect of law. He advances or retreats as he thinks it expedient. The communist theory is applied or withheld. An opposition in leadership may observe the exile of Trotzky as admonitory and be cautious. An opposition in any class of the people may contemplate the military force and beware.

The American attempt to expropriate the resources and private wealth of the country for communistic uses tries to make communism work with democracy. When Mr. Crisp as acting chairman of the house committee on ways and means brought in a tax bill he was overthrown by an emeute of rebels who did not like his bill. Mr. Crisp represents authority in a democracy. He surrendered to a protest he could not beat down.

Mr. La Guardia, representing the opinion which successfully put Mr. Crisp and Mr. Rainey, the majority leader in the house, to flight, will have to compromise if he meets a stout resistance in the senate. He can't call upon the secret police and he cannot send Mr. Moses, Mr. Fess, Mr. Smoot, et al. to the Caribbean for the remainder of their lives.

Democracy implies compromise with men who cannot be physically operated upon. Stalin may have to compromise with a stubborn fact, but not with a stubborn person. His is the prevailing will and for the others there is submission. A farmer may be permitted a herd of cattle or as a kulak he may be sent out to raise snowballs. Iowa had to call out the National Guard even to test the herds.

The United States is trying to go soviet without recognizing that the essential is absolute authority, the power over property and life, without reference of disputed questions to a representative body or to an electorate. The doctrines for which Mr. La Guardia, Mr. Doughton, and their insurgent friends in the house and Senator Brookhart, Senator La Follette, Senator Norris et al. in the senate have a fondness cannot tolerate the contentiousness of a democracy or its flights of enthusiasm or rumbles of discontent. The soviets do not trifle with the romantic idea of democracy or the altruistic ideal of the individual. They immediately get down to realities with the word dictatorship and without a thought of maybe.

ASIATIC PRINCES AND OCCIDENTAL CAPITALISTS.

India's ceremony of investiture, the conferring of knighthood and other honors, under Lord Willingdon's policy of "India as usual," is reported as one of indescribable splendor. The Indian princes filled the eyes of the gods with their jeweled strut and the viceroy and his vicereine lived up to the best expectations. Even the English reporters aided the show with knee breeches and buckled shoes. It is a surmise in Delhi that the vicereine was responsible for the revival of the ceremonies in the magnificent fashion, she being reluctant to miss a big moment because of dismal hours. Lord Irwin, Willingdon's predecessor, had toned the investiture down to the gray of gray days, not wishing to parade regal pomp before the people's poverty.

The princes have become Britain's ripe apples. On the other side of the picture is Gandhi, the loin cloth, the spinning wheel, goat's milk, prisons and rebellion. Lord Willingdon's firm policy contemplates the prisons on one side and the princes on the other. The latter have reasons for coöperation with the British and the British have reasons for coöperation with them. Their domains need protection and their privileges need upholding; their hoarded gold has been attracted to the Bank of England by the depreciation of the English pound and the effect of that inflow has been noted in British finances.

The princes represent the emotional conception of capital as it prevails among many social and economic revolutionaries and radicals. They are capitalists who amass wealth for their exclusive use. It consists of barbaric hoardings of precious stones and precious metals, converted, when used for anything except satisfaction of the sense of possession, only for personal gratifications in display and sensuality. The sentimental, possibly subconscious, valuation of capitalism is frequently that. It is not in this view a force directed in private enterprise for common uses, but a privilege reserved for private uses exclusive of the general good. Thus capitalism is regarded as gigantic hoarding such as that of the Indian prince delighted by his piles of emeralds and pearls and his stacks of gold ingots. An American capitalist might be able to buy out one of the minor Indian princes, but he would have to sell factories, railroads and mines to do it. In his personal budget he'd be broke in a week's running of the prince's establishment.

ONE COAL HOLE AFTER ANOTHER

DR. EVANS advises a shy boy to overcome his bashfulness by mental training and discipline. Yes, and find at three score and ten that his hands are both lefts, too large for his pockets, and unsafe out of them; that he spills himself over rugs and backs off steps which seem to be everywhere; that he says good-morning when it is midafternoon, and stutters that he meant good-night; that he offers to shake hands when he shouldn't and then misses the hand he tried to grasp; that he flounders in the middle of a sentence because he wants to say prosperity and is saying perversity; that he overturns cream in his lap, takes the other fellow's hat, is always confused when he tries to make change by adding 5, 10, and 2; always forgets when he undertakes the formidable ceremony of raising his hat to a lady that he is wearing a flat crowned straw and not a fedora, and that he never has found an answer to the people who tell him that all he has to do is forget himself.

THE HOSPITABLE CUP OF VOLSTEAD

FROM London Punch: Undoubtedly American hospitality is a terrific thing. It may too often tend to concentrate on sending flowers to your hotel and giving you the names of places where the stuff is reliable, but its initial impact is nearly always shattering. It doesn't slowly work up to a high point: it is hitting on all six from the word "Go," and takes you like an H. E. shell. Thus, a friend of mine named Smith, soon after arriving at New York, rang up a man to whom he had been given an introduction. His idea, I think, was that he (Smith) might fix an appointment to call and subsequently they might lunch together, but he reckoned without American hospitality. Within a few hours or so of his ringing up, the American had:

(a) Explained that, owing to having to go out to a big club dinner, for which tickets had been sold weeks ago, he could not invite Smith that night to his own house, but that he was to come to the party with him; (b) Phoned all over most of the neighboring states till he had discovered and bought a ticket whose owner was ill and unable to go; (c) Sent a special messenger boy up to—as far as Smith could make out—somewhere in Connecticut to fetch it in time; (d) Given Smith a powerful cocktail and a membership ticket for his favorite speakeasy; (e) Introduced him to two friends, who gave him even more powerful cocktails and membership tickets for their favorite speakeasies; (f) Bought him about half a gallon of whisky to take to the dinner; (g) Lent him a spare dining-out flask (his own being too small to accommodate them both), which looked the kind of thing you see being passed from hand to hand in old-time pictures entitled "Captain Kidd and His Pirates Celebrating a Capture"; (h) Nearly lent Smith a pair of trousers in which to wear it (eventually Smith crammed it into his hip pocket, but round about ten p. m. his braces gave way under the unaccustomed strain, and he spent the rest of the evening with his tie worn lower than ties usually are outside the South sea islands); (i) Introduced him to some sixty-five friends, who each introduced him to some twenty-two others; and (j), of course, sent flowers to his hotel.

Well, that's an instance of U. S. A. hospitality.

THE WHITE HOPE of the treasury's excise taxes is the embrewed citizenship accustomed to stills.

THE W. G. N. compositor does his bit and the proof reader stands pat: "It stated that the Illinois yanking laws place no bar in the way of receivers taking advantage of the opportunity to borrow from the government."

THE DEPRESSION really begins to get somewhere: "Citizens with a thirst may now walk into certain south side saloons and buy a stein or high shell glass of real beer for fifteen cents. The standard price for years has been twenty-five cents."

A WOMAN candidate says: "The sex element just doesn't enter into politics." Maybe so, maybe so, forgetting Cleopatra, Zenobia, Catherine Sedley, "Mrs. Curwell," Eve, and Carrie Nation. But the lady said "state politics." The exceptions are withdrawn.

THE DEEP purple of toryism (from Blackwood's magazine—1846): "We can see no reason why hares, and pheasants, and partridges, should not be fed as well as Quakers. While living they are undoubtedly more graceful creatures; when dead they are infinitely more valuable."

PEACE DISCOVERS all the valuable qualities of a small professional army in war. Its pensions are such negligible charges against the national budget. Corporal Trim is made aware that he was lucky to come out with one whole leg. Nations in arms can manage a war, but they can't make a go of the subsequent peace. It's easier to keep on fighting. Wars should be fought by nothing larger than a division. Then even the victor would be safe.

HIMMEL, it's again (Dr. T. Wood, recently from Derby, on the north coast of western Australia, to the London Times): "We were sitting outside the hotel (it was too hot to go in) watching the sky flame behind the boababs as the sun went down. One of us, like myself, was an Englishman wearing a familiar school tie. He had just been to the Buccaneer archipelago with his lugger and a black crew, hunting dugong, the sea cow. He asked me: 'How can I market dugong oil? It's the finest cure in the world for baldness.'"

PIETY DE LUXE.

Minister—Well, how did you like the book?

Invalid—Well, sir, if I had not known it was a pious book I should have split my sides with laughing.—Frankfurter Illustrierte, Frankfurt.

THE TOOTHACHE SEASON.

A LARGE group of tourists were on board ship, starting on a round-the-world trip. It was in the month of March. In the party were three dentists, but only one had brought his instruments along. The three held an informal meeting, at which they agreed that all who asked for help with their dental ills would be referred to the forehanded gentleman who had brought his equipment with him.

The trouble began on the third day out. A procession of people were in need of help. Some had neuralgia of the face, or toothache, or sensitive dentine. If they took any warm or cold foods the teeth containing metal fillings felt the heat or cold unduly, and, in some instances, the discomfort developed to the point where it was complained of as pain.

Between the sensitiveness to heat and cold, the toothaches, facial neuralgias, and some earaches, the poor dentist who had brought along his tools was having his troubles. It is true he was going around the world, but as a traveling dentist rather than as a sightseer. He called a second meeting of his professional brethren, and he submitted the case of one dentist who had paid his good money to no purpose, except to continue at work.

The point to this story that interests you and me, on the other side of the picture, is that March is a month in which there is a rather general prevalence of facial neuralgia, toothache, sensitive dentine, and allied discomforts. The dubious honor of being the toothache months belongs to April, October, and November, as well as March. This fact is known to most dentists, but the people generally do not know of it or, if they do, they disregard the information.

The reason for the prevalence of these disorders in these months is the fact that the season is shifting, the weather is variable, and it is not easy for a person to keep himself always in good adjustment to his surroundings.

A companion picture is that given by the prevalence of common colds. January and February are the months of pneumonia, bronchitis, and severe infections. But the earlier months of the autumn, and the later months of winter, and the first months of spring are the seasons of sniffles, of acute common colds, the sore throats, and the neuralgias, which belong in the same family.

GET MEDICAL OPINION.

G. F. writes: My 6 months' old baby has a lopsided head. He has a tendency to keep the right side of his head to one side, and this has caused the bone at the back of his head to come up to a point on one side, and the other side is flat and unshapely.

REPLY.

Probably nothing can be done. The deformity may have resulted from a birth injury. The position in which the child habitually sleeps may have been a contributing factor. It is possible that a physician could give you some helpful advice about the child's sleeping posture. A limited degree of change might be brought about in that way, but the possibilities are not great. At any rate, get medical opinion. Do not take the matter too seriously. Many very able people have had queerly shaped heads. The great scientist, Tyndall, had a head that no one would brag about: and head architects do not approve of the Daniel Webster head.

SMOKE AND MILK DIET.

R. S. B. writes: 1. How many pipefuls of tobacco may a man of 20 smoke without injury to himself?

2. By going on a strictly milk diet for a week, can one clear the complexion to some degree? Should vegetables be added to this diet?

REPLY.

1. It has been said by an authority that the average young man [20 to 50] can smoke the equivalent of six cigars a day without definite harm.

2. A milk and vegetable diet continued for one week will not materially affect the complexion either way.

CHARITY HOSPITALS.

I. writes: Is there any place a person without money could go for an operation for crossed eyes?

REPLY.

You can have the operation done in any charity hospital. At your time in life your eyes can be straightened, but the sight of the crossed eye cannot be restored. You should have been operated on many years ago when you had sight and money.

MAY BE DEMENTIA PRECOX.

F. B. C. writes: My wife is a neurotic. She is 46 years of age, in very good physical condition, but thinks she is liable to die at any minute. She refuses to try to do anything, or to visit her neighbors or her children. Can you suggest anything that might help her? Is this what some people call hysterics?

REPLY.

Your description indicates that your wife has some degree of dementia precox. The symptoms do not indicate hysteria.

UNIMPROVED STREETS.

Chicago, March 24.—[Friend of the People.]—I wonder if our vehicle tax repair department could afford to spend a little time and material to fix the bad condition of the intersection of Mozart and Waveland avenue? Mozart is the first north and south street west of Western avenue which autos can use in this vicinity and the terrible holes in this crossing cause many broken springs and blowouts. H. B.

Report is made that the intersection of Mozart street and Waveland avenue is unimproved. Loose stone was spread there, which was rather rough, to improve conditions. A top dressing of cinders has now been spread over the stone, which will afford relief.

Superintendent of Streets.

COLLECTING BOND INTEREST.

Chicago, March 24.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I bought three real estate bonds from a bank which closed Dec. 12. The interest is due Dec. 9 and 26, 1931, and Jan. 2, 1932. Interest was collected by the bank previously at 8 per cent and they paid me 7 per cent. The bonds call for 8 per cent interest. 1. How do I go about collecting this interest? 2. Shall I wait until a receiver is appointed for the bank? 3. The principal of one of the bonds is due Jan. 2, 1932. How shall I go about renewing this bond, or do you advise trying to collect in full? The bond is $1,000 and mortgage against the property is $9,000. 4. The bank was collecting rent from one of the properties on which I hold one bond before they closed. How will this be handled?

C. E. W.

1. The first step is to present the notes to the maker.
2. No.
3. See No. 1. We are not in a position to choose between the two alternatives.
4. Presumably the owner would appoint another renting agent.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

UNPAID RENT.

Chicago, March 24.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Can a landlord keep unpaid furniture for back rent? 2. If he can who is responsible for the balance of the payments on the furniture? F. M.

1. Yes, by appropriate court proceedings.
2. The tenant would be liable on his promise. If the landlord wishes to make his claim good out of the furniture and if it is mortgaged or subject to conditional sale, then it would be necessary for the landlord to pay the vendor if the tenant does not pay.

CHINA-JAPAN WAR, 1894

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28. — China has succumbed to the inevitable and has sued for peace. The proposal will be presented to Japan through the United States ministers at Peking and Tokio, thus promising a termination of the war as a result, in part at least, of the exercise of the good offices of the United States. It is not possible yet to learn the terms of China's proposition as handed to Minister Denby, but it is probable it provides for two concessions—a money indemnity and a relinquishment of suzerainty over Corea.

CHEFOO, Nov. 27.—It is stated here that the bodies of Japanese prisoners were found mutilated at Port Arthur and 400 Japanese were killed by the fire from the forts. No quarter was given. The plans of the mines in and around Port Arthur were discovered by the Japanese.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 27.—Dispatches from Tientsin say that Col. von Hannekin, former German officer, recently appointed to the command of the Chinese navy, has gone to Shan Han Kwan to organize the defense of that place. Shan Han Kwan is the starting point of the great highroad to Peking and is believed to be impregnable.

HIROSHIMA, Nov. 28.—News has been received that a detachment of the 1st Japanese army has defeated a large force of Chinese in the vicinity of Motion Lien. The Japanese are said to have lost forty killed, but the Chinese loss is claimed to be immense.

TIENTSIN, Nov. 28. — The Red Cross society has sent six doctors to Port Arthur to assist the wounded. They have left here on board the steamship Toonan, which has been lent for that purpose by the viceroy. British military attachés are accompanying the doctors.

28 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 3, 1904.

PARIS. — A dispatch from St. Petersburg says it is rumored that a Japanese force has landed at the mouth of the Tumen river, which is about 100 miles southwest of Vladivostok, at the northeastern extremity of Corea.

SEOUL.—The Japanese army, it is reported here, is at the gates of Wiju, and news of the battle is expected at any hour. It is stated that the advance guard of the Japanese army has found 2,000 Russian troops entrenched outside the walls on the south side of Wiju. The Russian artillery is supported by Cossack cavalry and infantry. Cossack cavalry has destroyed all bridges between Chongju and the Yalu. The rivers and small creeks are swollen and the roads are deep with mud, making the transportation of artillery and supplies difficult.

ST. PETERSBURG. — Instead of waiting for a Japanese attack on the Yalu, it is believed here that Gen. Kuropatkin will take the aggressive, invade Corea in force, and endeavor to recapture Chongju, Anju, and Pingyang. Gen. Kuropatkin now has along the railroad from Mukden to Liaoyang an army of 150,000 infantry, nearly 20,000 cavalry, and 250 guns, all available for an advance into Corea. It is declared here that with this force he can drive the Japanese army clear back to Seoul. By June 28, 130,000 more infantry, 30,000 cavalry, and 250 cannon will have been sent out. It is estimated that the Japanese troops landed do not exceed 80,000, and that 100,000 are waiting until the commissariat is assured before being transported, as it is impossible to feed them in Corea.

CHICAGO.—Robert R. McCormick, Republican candidate for alderman in the 21st ward, was the central figure in an enthusiastic meeting in North Side Turner hall. Three thousand voters attended. Franklin MacVeagh was one of the speakers. Mr. McCormick delivered a stirring address.

APRIL 3, 1916.

CHICAGO.—Dr. Theodore B. Sachs is dead, and by his own hand. He was found a suicide yesterday in the library of his private sanitarium at Naperville. He took morphine. The former head of the Chicago Municipal Tuberculosis sanitarium and the foremost authority on tuberculosis in this country resigned two weeks ago as a protest against turning the institution for white plague victims into a "city hall job factory." Before taking the poison he wrote out with great care a message to the people of Chicago. He wrote, as he was about to step over the thin line into eternity, that the institution was "unsoiled with graft and politics" and that it was the "heritage of the people." His last act, too, carried a mandate to the city council and the people of Chicago. It was an order to "make a thorough inquiry" into the institution and to "thwart unscrupulous politicians." Also he wrote to the community to resist "any attempt of unscrupulous contractors to appropriate money which belongs to the sick and poor." He was born in Dvinsk, Russia, May 2, 1868, and came to the United States when 21.

SAN ANTONIO.—A story from Mexico that has been given some credence at army headquarters was that Villa was headed for Chihuahua City.

CONFUSION ABOUT THE WORLD COURT.

Easton, Pa., March 18. — The Root protocol is grotesque and leads to grotesque results.

It opens by reciting in a preamble that the states signatories to the world court have agreed to "the following provisions regarding the adherence of the United States . . . subject to the five reservations formulated by" the senate. This promises all. If the states signatories have agreed to our adherence subject to the five reservations, we are, in fact, in. Article 1 advances the same promise by direct assertion, beginning: "The states signatories . . . accept the special conditions attached by the United States in the five reservations"; but proceeds to undo all that has gone before by adding "upon the terms and conditions set out in the following articles." For by these terms and conditions it is provided in effect not that the court shall respect an objection [to entertaining a request for an advisory opinion] brought forward by the United States conformably to its fifth reservation but only that if the objection be not respected, "powers of withdrawal . . . will follow naturally." This initial flourish of acceptance, actually nullified later by a virtual rejection so transparent as that which follows it, looks like mere pretending.

The propounding of this eccentric document has led to eccentric results. Its ambiguity has bewildered the senate committee on foreign relations; set one eminent proponent of the court, Mr. Newton D. Baker, against Senator Robinson of Arkansas, another eminent proponent, and, incredibly, set Mr. Root against Mr. Stimson.

Unable to reach agreement among its members as to whether ratification of the protocol would mean abandonment of the fifth reservation or preserve it unimpaired, the committee devises a proposed form of ratification expressing "the clear understanding" that the court shall not do the thing prohibited by the reservation, gives unanimous assent to this device and immediately splits over the meaning and effect of its own handiwork, some members holding that its adoption by the senate would take us into the court without more ado, others that it would not take us in until answered by acceptance abroad.

Mr. Baker tells an audience in New York that in a deadlock over advisory opinions the United States under the protocol would be "regarded or deemed as withdrawing from the court"; that is to say, would be thereby automatically put out. Senator Robinson on the same day tells his hearers in Philadelphia that if a deadlock supervenes "we may then withdraw"; that is to say, not withdraw unless we choose.

Mr. Root assures the senate committee that under the protocol the fifth reservation against the court's entertaining, without the consent of the United States, any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest, stands unimpaired and unaffected. Mr. Stimson, on the contrary, in advising the President, "conveys the opinion" [so it is expressed in a resolution pending in committee] that under the protocol the court, without the consent of the United States and against its express objection, might render advisory opinions [except in actual disputes, as to which Mr. Stimson professes to have found outside the protocol something just as good as the acceptance which the nations refused to put into it] touching any question in which the United States has or claims an interest, and our only remedy would be withdrawal from the court.

You would not hire a garage under a paper half so variously interpreted.

JOHN W. FARQUHAR.

$1.50 TO GET IT OUT.

Chicago, March 24.—When I subscribed for telephone service a little over three years ago the clerk taking my application said they expected to continue the extra 25 cent monthly charge only temporarily. However, a few days ago I called at the telephone company's office and told them I objected to paying this extra charge any longer, and was advised the only thing they could do was to take out the cradle phone and replace it with an old style instrument at an expense to me of $1.50, which would be equivalent to six months' extra charge for the cradle phone.

Therefore, like G. C., I feel that I have been imposed upon by the telephone company, but am helpless in the matter. ROGERS PARK RESIDENT.

CRADLE PHONES.

Chicago, March 24.—I wish to commend C. C. for his article on "Paying For A Cradle Phone." I am in complete agreement with his sentiments. I have been paying this extra charge of 25 cents a month for over two years. I really think I should own the phone by this time. It certainly costs the telephone company no more to have calls over the cradle phone than it does over the standard type, so why doesn't the telephone company discontinue the charge after a reasonable amount has been paid for its installation? The telephone company is selling service to the public, not renting equipment. B. E. W.

POSTAL CLERKS' PAY.

Chicago, March 24.—It is with deep regret that I note the contemplated reduction in the salaries of the postal clerks and carriers. The postal system has probably more men who have given their all to their government for smaller remuneration than any other civil service group. They were the last to receive the benefits of our previous prosperity, and only with the present value of the dollar are they receiving anywhere near the amount their years of study and diligent attention to their duty should entitle them.

FORMER POSTAL EMPLOYEE.

TOO MANY LIGHTS.

Chicago, March 24.—If the governments are in such financial straits, why is such a thoroughfare as McCormick boulevard—alongside the "Million Dollar Bridle Path"—so brilliantly lighted at night? On driving along this boulevard last Sunday night we noticed that every third light was unlit. It should be just the reverse: only every third or fourth light should be lighted.

MEXICO HOLDS PRIMARY TODAY; ARMY ON GUARD

Riots Feared as Nation Goes to Polls.

BY JOHN CORNYN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, April 2.—Mexico will go to the polls tomorrow at the primary election for the purpose of choosing candidates for state and congressional offices, and the entire nation will be under the control of the army until 6 a. m. Monday.

The government has taken extraordinary precautions because of the bitter campaign. More than 500 candidates are seeking 168 nominations for deputyships in the National Revolutionary party. Because this party controls more than 90 per cent of the election machinery, nomination ordinarily amounts to election, although there has been considerable talk about the possible birth of a powerful second party this year.

Troops to Run Country.

Federal troops, who will run the country until Monday morning, will assist Mexico City's 4,000 policemen in keeping order.

Any civilian caught carrying a gun during the election will be jailed. All cabarets and saloons will be closed. It will be an offense to be found intoxicated. The sale of liquor during the emergency period has also been forbidden.

Among the candidates are several prominent politicians who have practically jumped the traces of the National Revolutionary party. Their supporters are planning demonstrations at the polls, and the troops and police have orders to prevent them from developing into riots.

Among the candidates is former President Emilio Portes Gil. He is running for governor of the state of Tamaulipas, and his supporters have threatened to make trouble at the polls. Strong detachments of troops are expected to quell any disturbances.

Shoots at Rival; Hits Friend.

MEXICO CITY, April 2.—[U. P.]—The first casualty in connection with tomorrow's primary occurred today, when Cosme Mier y Rivapalacio, candidate of the National Revolutionary party, shot at his opponent, Edmundo Gavilondo, in the latter's residence. He missed Gavilondo, but hit the latter's friend, Guadeloupe Reynoso, wounding him seriously.

NEW CHAS. ROSS APPEARS TO AID HIS ALIEN SON

Another claimant to the name of Charlie Ross, who was kidnaped in Germantown, Pa., fifty-eight years ago, appeared yesterday. He is an elderly gardener and inventor, Gustave Blair of 13901 La Salle street, Riverdale.

Attorney Clinton O. Thompson, representing Blair, said that the claim was advanced as part of a campaign to have the immigration authorities permit the gardener's son to cross the American border from Canada at Seattle. So far the son, Ralph Max Blair, has been unable to convince the immigration authorities that his father is a native born American.

According to the attorney the elder Blair could give no definite evidence that he is veritably Charlie Ross other than physical resemblance. One of his ears, particularly, is thicker and set lower on the head than the other. This was a characteristic of Ross.

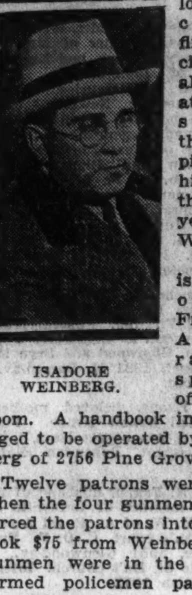
Blair's story is that after being kidnaped he was disguised as a girl, called Betty, and moved about the country for a year and a half. He was then given to a Chicago family to rear. Neither Blair nor the attorney would divulge the name of this family. Mr. Thompson said he had been trying for two years to get its members to give documentary proof of his client's claim.

Voss Takes Office as Compensation Deputy

Joseph H. Voss, Democratic committeeman of the 50th ward, yesterday took office as deputy commissioner of compensation, following his appointment by Mayor Cermak. Mr. Voss, who takes the position left vacant a week ago by the appointment of Edward J. Denemark as superintendent of the House of Correction, resigned as treasurer of the forest preserve district to take the city job. He will be head of the department, but will have the title of "deputy, acting for the mayor," as the commissioner's title was abolished by the council several months ago.

VICTIM OF HOLDUP SHOOTS BANDIT AS GANG FLEES STORE

One of four bandits was shot in the right temple and probably fatally wounded late yesterday as he followed his three confederates in flight from the cigar store and alleged handbook at 116 North Halsted street. At the Bridewell hospital he identified himself as Anthony Conino, 32 years old, 1901 West Ohio street.



ISADORE WEINBERG.

The cigar store is listed as being operated by Frank Hoffman. A partition separates the rear spaces into an office and a larger room. A handbook in the rear is alleged to be operated by Isadore Weinberg of 2756 Pine Grove avenue.

Twelve patrons were in the store when the four gunmen entered. They forced the patrons into the rear, then took $75 from Weinberg. While the gunmen were in the store two uniformed policemen passed in front. One of the bandits muttered: "If those cops come in here, we'll give it to them." The robbery completed, the bandits departed, Conino in the rear. As he passed through the door, Weinberg shoved a pistol through an opening in the partition separating his office from the front, and fired. Conino collapsed, still holding the $75 loot. Weinberg recovered it.

POLICE TRACING POLITICAL ANGLE IN TESTA MURDER

Precinct Captain Had Received Threats.

The inquest over the body of Nicholas Testa, 42 years old, a Republican precinct captain, was continued yesterday to give the police an opportunity to determine whether politics was the cause of the fatal shooting Friday night. The family contends that Testa was killed because he was working in behalf of James Savage, Republican candidate for ward committeeman in the Twenty-fifth ward.

The leading rival of Savage is Assistant United States District Attorney William J. Parrillo, who a week ago sued Frank J. Loesch, head of the Chicago crime commission for $250,000 after the latter had called Parrillo a "partisan of Capone."

Police Blame Testa.

The police expressed the belief that the quarrel which led to the shooting was the result of Testa's own actions.

Children, who witnessed the shooting in front of the Testa home, 2709 West Polk street, said that Testa and his three assailants appeared to be quarreling over a truck. Others said it was over some diamonds. The police are investigating Testa's past history to determine what he had been doing since he left his job as a street car conductor 10 years ago. Recently he was given a political job.

Daughter Testifies.

Dorothy Testa, 16 years old, a daughter, testified at the inquest that she was talking with her father about moving when a younger sister said that three men wanted to see him.

Testa went to the street, armed with his revolver, the daughter said. From the window she saw him talking with the men. The next she heard, she said, was the firing of shots. Her father handed her the revolver before he was taken to the hospital. She quoted him as telling her before he died "that he did'nt know those guys."

The daughter said that two weeks ago her father told her two men had warned him "if he did not get out of the job as precinct captain he would be shot."

Murder Victim's Body Taken from Drainage Canal

The body of a man, believed to have been murdered, was taken from the drainage canal at Joliet yesterday. Deputy Coroner Willard Blood said that death probably was caused by two skull fractures, one from a blow under the right eye and the other from a blow on the left temple. The man was dressed in dark trousers, a flannel smoking jacket, brown button shoes with cloth tops, and a white shirt. According to the police, he was about 40 years old, weighed 150 pounds, was 5 feet 7 inches tall, and wore a dark mustache. The body had been in the water about two weeks, police said.

POWERS READY TO GRAPPLE WITH CRISIS IN DANUBE

French Premier to Arrive in London Today.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 2.—The British cabinet is assembling in London to deal during the next seven days with the French plan of a Danubian customs federation, the Irish reply to the government's note on the abolition of the oath of allegiance to the king and the retention of land annuities, and the forthcoming budget.

Prime Minister MacDonald has been vacationing and King George and Queen Mary have been at Windsor, but they will return to London tomorrow afternoon to meet Premier Tardieu of France. A banquet at the French embassy will be given in the evening. Work will begin in earnest on Monday when MacDonald, accompanied by Sir John Simon, secretary of foreign affairs, and Walter Runciman, president of the board of trade, will meet Tardieu and his finance minister, Pierre-Etienne Flandin, in preliminary discussions. Later in the week, probably on Wednesday, Germany and Italy also will be represented.

Balkans in Dire Need.

The Danubian discussions are spurred by the league of nations financial committee's report that the Balkans are in dire need of assistance. It was hinted today that probably both Great Britain and France will be forced to forego their "most favored nation" status with the countries involved in the consortium if real tariff preferences in the Danube valley are to be realized.

There was some criticism in London because France had not included Bulgaria in the group since the Bulgarians were placed among the Austrians, Hungarians, and Greeks by the league committee as the peoples in greatest need. It is admitted that it is virtually impossible to keep the villain —"reparations"—in the dark during the four-power discussions, but such a development would be welcomed by the British.

Will Prepare Budget.

Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, is returning from a fishing expedition to Scotland tomorrow for the final preparation of the budget.

Another economy measure is expected, but relief from three quarters is being discussed. The first is a reduction in the 12 cent income tax, restoring the rate of $1.02 in the pound [par value $8.46], which prevailed before Philip Snowden's crisis budget last fall. The second is a removal of the salary cuts imposed on teachers, police, and other government services, while the third is an allevation of the unpopular beer tax, which has turned and devoured itself by reducing sales to a point where the revenue has fallen below the figure reached under the old rate. The additional taxation imposed by Lord Snowden amounted to a penny a pint.

ONE BOY DROWNED, ANOTHER SHOT IN TRAGEDIES OF PLAY

EVANSTON BOY IS DROWNED IN HOMEMADE BOAT

Another Youngster Shot at Play.

One boy was killed and another probably fatally wounded in two Evanston tragedies yesterday. Arthur Lencioni, 11 years old, 1830 Grant street, was drowned while launching a rowboat he had helped to construct. Ralph Terry, 12 years old, 1519 Hinman avenue, was shot through the stomach while playing detective with a chum.

All through the winter the Lencioni boy had worked on the boat with Jimmie Gillen, 14 years old, in the latter's basement at 1829 Grant street. Yesterday seemed a fine day to launch their 8 foot craft, so they hurried through breakfast and hauled the boat to the lake shore off Milburn street. Using paddles for oars, they put off.

Wave Capsizes the Boat.

About fifty yards out a wave swept over them and the boat capsized. Jimmie had had Boy Scout training and was able to swim, so he started for shore, tugging his companion. But Arthur's struggles caused Jimmie to lose his grip when the waves swept over them. Jimmie reached shore alone and collapsed. Coast guardsmen began a search for young Lencioni's body.

The Terry boy, son of Clarence Terry, Chicago manager of the Burroughs Adding Machine company, had gone to the home of his friend, William McAllister, 11 years old, at 413 Grove street, Evanston, to organize a "detective" club.

Play with "Unloaded" Gun.

The boys agreed they would need a gun to be detectives, so William produced a .45 caliber army pistol belonging to his father, John G. McAllister, a West Point graduate who was an officer in the world war.

William said the gun wasn't loaded, and he started to demonstrate that it was empty. The gun was discharged, the bullet passing through Ralph's stomach, out a window and into the wall of a neighboring home.

The boys set out for Ralph's home. They had just reached it when Ralph collapsed. At the Evanston hospital it was said he probably would die. it was said he probably would die. Last night he was given a pint of his father's blood in a transfusion performed by Dr. Dwight F. Clark of Evanston.

Robert Mulhall, 9 years old, 2751 Touhy avenue, was wounded in the right hand yesterday when he was struck by a small caliber bullet in a clayhole at Touhy and Kedzie avenues. The spot is used as an informal target range and the police believe a stray bullet caused the boy's wound, which was not serious.

JOLIET MOTORIST INJURED WHEN CAR HITS TREE

Oliver Olson, 209 Sterling avenue, Joliet, was seriously injured yesterday when his sedan skidded from the highway and crashed into a tree at Keane avenue, north of 143d street. Olson said that the accident occurred when he swerved to the left side of the road to avoid another automobile which failed to stop. The injured man was taken to the Holy Cross hospital in Joliet.

One automobile death in Cook county yesterday increased the 1932 toll to 282. The victim was William Kennedy, 62 years old, 6016 South Richmond street, a watchman. He died at the Holy Cross hospital from injuries sustained March 15, when he was struck by the auto of a hit and run driver at 59th street and Francisco avenue.

Edward T. Kennedy, 24 years old, of 2805 Girard avenue, Evanston, was found guilty yesterday by a jury in Evanston Police court of driving an automobile while intoxicated. Magistrate Harry H. Porter fined him $100, plus $5 costs. Kennedy, who says he is a student and the son of a physician, announced he would appeal. Witnesses testified that Kennedy on the morning of March 20 drove his car 60 miles an hour and hit another machine.

2 CANDIDATES FOR PRESIDENT SPLIT DENTAL SOCIETY

Election of officers in the Chicago Dental society, scheduled for April 19, gives promise of a lively fight between the choice of the nominating committee for president, and a faction which has as its platform, opposition to "the corporate practice of dentistry. Dr. Howard C. Miller, the present secretary, the candidate of the "regular" group. Dr. Gail M. Hambleton is the candidate of the dissenters, said to number more than 200. Dr. Charles R. Baker of Evanston is the present head of the society.

Dr. Hambleton and his associates, according to a statement issued yesterday, are opposed to "certain types of low priced clinics" as being inimical to the welfare of the individual dentist. These clinics, they assert, do not foster good dentistry and tend to lower the present high standards of the profession.

An attempt is to be made, it was explained, to introduce state dentistry in Illinois. A plan of the Rosenwald foundation to spŏnsor a low priced clinic, submitted to the society a year ago, was voted down.

Representatives of the faction backing Dr. Miller, who refused to be quoted, stated that the clinic matter was a dead issue, revived for the purposes of the election.

McGURN'S MANN ACT CONVICTION UPHELD BY COURT

Rolfe Woman Also Guilty; One Judge Dissents.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals, with Presiding Judge Samuel Alschuler dissenting, yesterday affirmed the conviction of "Machine Gun" Jack McGurn and his "blond alibi," Louise Rolfe, on charges of conspiracy to violate the Mann act. McGurn, a public enemy and reputed executioner for the Capone gang, and the girl, whom he has married since their arrests, were sentenced to two years' and to four months' imprisonment, respectively, by Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley last July.

Made Trips to Florida.

They were adjudged guilty of making trips to Miami and Jacksonville, Fla., and Gulfport, Miss., as man and wife in 1928. In their opinion affirming the conviction, Judges W. M. Sparks and Evan A. Evans of the Circuit Court of Appeals held that McGurn and his sweetheart had made the trips for immoral purposes, as charged by Assistant United States District Attorney Daniel Anderson, who prosecuted the case.

McGurn Paid Expenses.

"The evidence showed," the opinion stated, "that McGurn paid all the expenses for the trips and lived in hotels as the husband of Miss Rolfe."

In his dissenting opinion Judge Alschuler declared that direct proof of the Rolfe girl's willingness to travel with McGurn fell short of proof that they conspired that she should be transported.

Finds No Conspiracy.

"If the party charged did not transport the woman or cause her to be transported there is no crime of conspiracy to violate the Mann act, regardless of what else might have happened," Judge Alschuler said.

McGurn, whose real name is Vincent Gebardi, produced the girl shortly after the St. Valentine's day massacre of seven rival gangsters to prove that he took no part in the killing. She corroborated his statement that he was in a loop hotel with her at the time. They were arrested in the same hotel after they returned from a southern trip in 1930 and charged with violation of the Mann act.

HOUSE TAKES UP BILL MONDAY TO FREE FILIPINOS

Washington, D. C., April 2.—[Special.]—The question of Philippine independence will be taken up by the house of representatives next Monday as the first bill of importance following the disposition of the new revenue measure.

The debate promises to be brief, with the issue in doubt.

It will center around the bill sponsored by Representative Butler B. Hare [Dem., S. C.], chairman of the house insular affairs committee, in which the islands before gaining complete independence would be required to draw up a suitable constitution, to pass eight years under a commonwealth status with partial tariffs in effect, and to submit the question of final freedom to popular vote.

The senate also came a step nearer a vote on freedom for the Philippines today when the Republican steering committee added the Hawes-Cutting independence bill to the list of measures to be given preferential treatment in bringing them to a vote.

CHAS. O'DONNELL, SPIKE'S BROTHER, DIES OF WOUNDS

Charles O'Donnell, 26 years old, brother of Edward (Spike) O'Donnell, south side beer chief, died in the Little Company of Mary hospital yesterday of poisoning that set in after he was shot and wounded on March 6. Fifteen shotgun slugs and revolver bullets entered his body.

Police said that O'Donnell was shot as the result of a war over beer prices. The slayers fired on him as he left a taxicab and started to enter the apartment building in which he lived at 1723 West 91st street. One gunman was in the building and the others apparently had followed O'Donnell, according to the police theory of the shooting.

O'Donnell refused to talk to the police. Dr. Raymond J. Thoma, 6558 South Western avenue, who attended him, was at his bedside when he died. Charles is the second victim of a gang assassination in the O'Donnell family. His brother, Walter, was shot and killed five years ago.

Claudel Urges France to Take Part in World's Fair

New York, April 2.—(AP)—French participation in Chicago's 1933 centennial exposition was urged today by Paul Claudel, French ambassador to the United States. He told those attending the thirtieth annual meeting of the Alliance Française such participation was one of the many ways of drawing the two countries closer together. He also advocated an attempt to arouse the interest of Americans in the French language.

GANG GUNS SPIT DEATH AT LEGS' EX-BODYGUARD

New York, April 2.—[Special.]—The sedan which more than once carried the late Jack "Legs" Diamond to the spot where his enemies' guns found him, carried his former bodyguard to a similar "spot" in a Brooklyn café where three men fired six bullets into him as he stood at the bar with a glass of beer today.

His name was Joseph Burke, known as "Lefty Joe," a New York and Catskill beer runner. He died in Beth Moses hospital, Brooklyn, a short time after he was shot. He was 33.

Burke was shot in a room in the rear of a place on Nostrand avenue. The place was crowded with customers when Burke drove up in the sedan which he purchased after Diamond's death from the gangster's widow for $400. Burke walked to the bar and was drinking a glass of beer, police said, when three men walked in.

"This is no holdup, folks," the mob leader assured customers. "We're looking for a guy and we want him bad." He then directed them to pass into a rear room, single file. Each person was scrutinized closely as he passed.

Burke remained in the outer room. He had turned and was facing the armed men, his face white and his arms resting on the bar. When all but two of the others had left the barroom the guns barked. Burke slumped to the floor and his assailants turned and ran.

The police say Burke was Diamond's agent in Brooklyn, but that he spent most of his time acting as bodyguard to the gang leader. About six months before Diamond's death Burke returned to Brooklyn, telling the police that it "got too hot" for him at Acra, Diamond's headquarters in Green county.

With Diamond dead and John Scaccio, the slain gang leader's other trusted lieutenant, in prison, Burke assumed that Diamond's beer business was his by right of succession, and started out to take it.

FEUDAL SYSTEM WORKS WELL IN HAWAII ISLANDS

Lot of Workers Is Not an Unhappy One.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WAILUKU, Hawaii, April 2.—In this sculptored green cup of Maui, an island of 728 square miles in area, rimmed by the white Pacific surf lines, one may find a perfect miniature of enlightened industrial feudalism in flower.

It is an evolution of the gentle missionary spirit and the exploiting power of the white man. Protection, guidance and love go hand in hand with strict efficiency and the drive for dividends. The old evangelical churches are neglected, while the descendants of these spiritual pioneers go in for business and sports. The missionary survival is expressed in hospitals, settlement house, boy and girl scout work, the little theater, women's clubs, parent-teachers' associations and a sincere effort toward assimilation of the little brown brother.

Buddhist Churches.

This may explain in part the fact that throughout the territory the melting pot ideal is so often confused with Christian morals, hidden in phrases and sentiment, why the people here deceive themselves and fail to see that the results are so far out of line with the American scheme. The Japanese Buddhist churches today outnumber the Japanese Christians three to one and are rapidly nearing the number controlled by the old Hawaiian Congregational board which once dominated the scene as the giant mountain of Haleakala overshadows the plantations and valleys of this isle.

The old New England church, the stone for which was carried on the backs of natives over miles of trails, still stands on the hill of Wailuku, its steeple outlined against the mysterious green valleys where the ancient temples of the Hawaiians have given place to paved roads and miles of tunnels to bring waters to the thirsty sugar fields.

The church doors are open and fragrant winds wander through its dusty aisles. Japanese boys are playing ball on the lawn in front. An old Episcopal church down the street has a similar deserted atmosphere. The country club and the golf links, however, are well patronized, and people drive to the beaches, the fair grounds or to look over the polo field where an old Astor cup winner is housed in a sunny green paddock. Officers of the navy are being entertained at dances and parties in hotels or in the stately homes along the mountain drives, amid scenes and in a climate that rivals California. Among this upper third there is a culture of distinction and the charm of an all year open air life.

In the Orient Again.

Coming to the middle third we are in the Orient again, with certain trimmings of American fashion, such as Japanese girls "gone flapper," reading confession magazines, going on automobile parties, and Filipino boys wearing tight waisted suits from Chicago. All small business, including bootlegging is controlled by the Japanese and Chinese, who have to lease, however, from the big landlords. The orientals are doing well in a business way and are making particularly strong headway in the garage and automobile trades. They have deserted the canefields, have scraped to send their boys and girls to college and now are waiting for the miracle of education to lift them toward the upper class. It does not seem to fulfill their dreams.

At the base of it all is the field laborer. He lives and works in the lowlands under a tropical sun, producing the golden stream of sugar that has built the fortunes and family dynasties on the hills. Just now he is a Filipino boy. Before that he was Japanese. Before that he was a Chinese coolie. His home is a camp near the canefields, comfortable enough to his standards, but without an idea of permanency, or home making.

Hawaiians Run Political Show.

The Hawaiians? They have retreated to remote sea coast villages or are holding political office in the towns. Everybody likes the Hawaiians. They are easy, good natured fellows, and it is considered some compensation for them as a race that, having lost their lands by methods entirely legal, having been ground out in the economic conflict between the white overlords and the oriental competition in business, that they run the minor political show.

They have done it well in this county where there is not much to do. The sheriff, a Hawaiian, has a watchful eye on the growing poolroom gangs of young orientals, living off indulgent parents, disappointed in not getting white collar jobs, unwilling as yet to go to work in the only jobs that are open, agriculture. It gives just a trace of the Honolulu precipitant. There has been no impact of bad white element here to lead the way to crime. The counter influences, particularly in sports, are good. There have been but two rape cases in five years, both involving native women, and other major crimes are unknown. This island is still "the house without a key," an old Honolulu boast that no longer is true there.

Farmers on the mainland might turn this way for a view of what highly industrialized, scientific, big scale agriculture is like in the way of methods and dividends. It has keen executives at the top, scientists and skilled mechanics under them, and gangs of one dollar a day laborers at the bottom.

Only Sugar Manufactured.

There is no real estate man on the island, for there is no land for sale, no manufacture except sugar. In sugar, pineapples, transportation, cattle, banking, as well as in philanthropy, politics and social life, the great name on the island is that of Baldwin. Alexander & Baldwin, Ltd., is the pioneer sugar firm and both Samuel T. Alexander and the late Henry P. Baldwin started their operations on this island. They now extend throughout the territory and to the mainland. Senator Harold Rice, who represents the dominant politics of the island, married into this family. The widow of the elder Baldwin, a devout woman, leads in charitable work. The wealth that flows up to them is wisely administered. Her sons are carrying on.

It is the foundations of this benevolent overlordship that are now threatened from two sources, here and in the other islands. The first is the growing political power of the oriental voter, an unknown quantity, not to be manipulated as easily as the Hawaiian. The second is the demand for reconstruction that has come out of the Honolulu trouble. Under normal conditions there would be no need for intervention of any kind, on grounds of social safety in this community. The men at the head of affairs consider themselves amply able to take care of their own problems. Many of them have been here since the days of the monarchy and have lived through stormy republic and revolution. They would prefer now to be let alone, although not averse to the "right kind" of commission government for the islands, if their labor supply is let alone. That would dispose of the political problem.

Independent Farm Movement.

They do not, however, want to be identified with any movement toward such a change and have taken no attitude as a group. The objections that might be raised to such a civilization as is found here would be academic, based on the conflict which is apparent everywhere in the United States, between the Hamiltonian idea of money control and the old Jeffersonian doctrine of independent small farmer citizenship.

Up on the broad green flanks of old Haleakala, called the house of the sun and which holds in its cloudy summit the world's largest extinct crater, a pit deep enough and wide enough, it is said, to put New York City inside, there is an effort toward independent farm ownership. It grows out of the territorial homes commission movement and has not received great encouragement or been marked with great success so far. It is the fashion on the island to disparage it, and tales are told of sugar and pineapple tracts taken over by individuals and run into failure, coming back to the company protection. There was an abortive attempt at vegetable growing for the Honolulu market, which now gets millions of dollars' worth of fruit and vegetables from California every year. And this in a land that will produce almost anything, from corn to cotton, from cabbages to sugar.

Individual Hampered.

It is claimed that one reason for these failures was the attitude of the financing and marketing companies toward the small individual, hampering and discouraging. On the neighboring island of Molokai, which has a leper settlement on one small isolated peninsula and much forest and arable land in general use, the homesteaders turned from vegetables to growing pineapples under the tutelage of Libby, McNeill & Libby, and have had a year or two of wealth. Due to market conditions this year, however, the independent growers of pineapples on this island have been unable to sell their crops.

And even here the few white men who have built small homes on the hillsides and are trying to scratch out a living among the rocks, are in competition with the orientals. Many Chinese and Japanese families have leased small tracts in the upper valleys and toil there, whole families at work, on Sunday as well as week day, producing all that the soil will give at cheap price. They make few improvements and live in makeshift shacks of tin and old boards.

Against this place the brilliant history of the Hawaiian Commercial and Sugar Company, Ltd., which owns more than 30,000 acres, including the precious hill side reservoir sites. This is a little kingdom which takes care of the carefully graduated income of 7,000 souls, looking after their welfare, health, and public peace, giving them pure water and pure milk. There are four public schools on this plantation, three Japanese language schools, ten churches, one large hospital, twelve day nurseries, three theaters, a gymnasium, and a public swimming tank. From a central meat market choice meats are distributed at cost price.

DARROW IN HONOLULU COURT AS A DEFENDER

SPRING FLOWER SHOW OPENS IN RIOT OF COLOR

Judges Pronounce Exhibits Finest in Years.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Thousands of blooming flowers and shrubs in a riot of color were admired by throngs attending the opening yesterday of the sixth annual spring flower show of the Garden club of Illinois, on Navy pier. It was children's day and youngsters from the gold coast mingled with those from the heart of the city in viewing and naming many varieties of flowers they had seen previously in picture books.

The immense hallway on the pier gave spring its formal entrance to Chicago, so far as blooming landscapes were concerned. Forty women's clubs competed in the amateur gardens extending over the three acres of exhibit space.

Finest Ever Shown.

Judges in deciding the winners in the table decoration and interior flowering exhibits declared them to be the finest ever shown in Chicago. The Waukegan Garden club won over the Lake Bluff club in the competition of twenty dinner tables each set complete for six persons. The former won a silver medal, the latter a purple ribbon. De Kalb's Home and Garden club won first place, with garden clubs in Beverly Hills and Ravinia second and third.

In striking array the exhibits of tables by nations were headed by the Evening Garden club of Wilmette, followed by garden clubs from Batavia, Beverly Hills, Elgin, and Riverside. The Downers Grove Garden club won the purple ribbon over the Little Garden club of Evanston in the tea table class. Morgan Park women were awarded a silver medal in breakfast table exhibits set for four.

Edison Park Club Wins.

The Garden club of Edison Park won a silver medal in the living bouquet competition of high vases. The North Shore Garden club took top place in the low vase bouquets. De Kalb's Garden club took the silver medal for scenic shadow pictures, and Glencoe's Skokie club the purple ribbon in flower pictures.

In the sunroom gardens the Garden Club of Evanston took the blue ribbon, and Kenilworth's Home and Garden club won high honors in potted flowering plants. A special garden flower display for tables by the Warren gardeners also gained a silver medal.

The show continues today and all this week, from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. Special lectures will be given today at 3 p. m. by Mrs. Silas B. Waters of Cincinnati on garden plants, and by Joseph Dodson of Kankakee on bird life.

VATICAN WINS APOLOGY FROM SLAV CABINET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, April 2.—Following the receipt of a sharp note of protest presented by Msgr. Ermenegildo Pellegrinetti, papal nuncio, the Jugo-Slavian government today offered its excuses to the Vatican for an article in the Jugo-Slavian newspaper Politika. The article charged the Vatican with unfairness in its attitude toward Slav minorities in the northeastern corner of upper Italy, acquired by Italy under the peace treaties. The Jugo-Slavian government said the article was deplorable, and explained that it accidentally escaped the eyes of the censor.

The Politika's article was entitled. "The Vatican and National Minorities" and said that the holy see had compelled the resignation of the aged Slav archbishop, Sedej of Gorizia, and had substituted an apostolic administrator of the bishopric out of political motives with relation to Italy and against the religious interests of the people.

The Vatican called this an unjust attack and contrary to sentiments of justice and charity of the holy see. It further asserted that the purpose of the article was to incite public odium against the holy see.

EAGER CROWDS ATTEND EXHIBITS OF AUTO MAKERS

3 Manufacturers Launch Sales Drive.

BY HAL FOUST.

The public responded yesterday to the efforts of three automobile manufacturers to stimulate motor car sales in the low price field.

In the bright sunshine of a spring day, fourteen hundred men and women were at the entrance of the Merchandise Mart, Wells street and the river, when the doors were thrown open on the General Motors exhibit, which will continue through the week.

Chrysler's New Car.

Walter P. Chrysler announced his new Plymouth—a fast and dapper automobile—drawing crowds to dealer show rooms. The new Fords, the V-eights and the improved fours, attracted other hundreds of motorists on the half holiday.

"The automobile," said Mayor Cermak at the opening of the General Motors show, "may prove the key that unlocks the door to American prosperity.

"I am certain that even a moderate improvement in the automobile industry will immediately be reflected in an upturn in general economic conditions. It is the largest manufacturing industry in America and with its allied lines furnishes jobs for one-tenth of the nation's workers.

Indebted to Their Courage.

"The public is indebted to the enterprise and courage demonstrated by these automobile executives in their efforts to revive buying. I might be led to believe from the crowd here today," the mayor concluded, smiling, "that prosperity has come out from around the corner."

Eight popular orchestras are taking turns entertaining at the General Motors show. Prizes, including an automobile, are being given away. Prices have been reduced on the Pontiac sixes and the Chevrolets to compete with the Plymouth and the Fords.

Reconstructs Vases Used by Ancient Priests in Bolivia

LA PAZ, Bolivia, April 2.—(AP)—After a long investigation, Prof. Arturo Posnansky has succeeded in reconstructing a vase used by ancient priests which was found in excavations of ruins at Tiahuanacu. He said he also found pictures showing warlike scenes and demonstrating that the Tiahuanacus used bows and arrows and grew huge fingernails on their right hands.

PACIFIC CAPTAIN QUITS SEA AFTER 48 YEAR CAREER

VANCOUVER, B. C., April 2.—(AP)—Capt. Samuel Robinson, dean of the shipmasters of the trans-Pacific sea lanes and a hero of the Japanese earthquake of nine years ago, quit the sea today, ending a career that started forty-eight years ago.

On the arrival of the Empress of Japan from the orient Capt. Robinson completed his last voyage. At the age of 62 he must "get accustomed to the land," he said, before he can begin a life of retirement.

During the Japanese earthquake of 1923 Capt. Robinson turned the Empress of Australia, his command at that time, into a rescue ship. Four thousand refugees, dragged from the harbor or from the shore, were taken aboard. For the rescue work he was made a Knight Commander of the British Empire by King George of England and was decorated by the emperor of Japan.

Automobile manufacturers have made the greatest efforts in the history of this industry to develop new designs and new mechanical betterments. And they have produced the greatest values in the history of the industry. They priced their products on an anticipated and hoped for volume which the industry has not realized. Therefore in our opinion many manufacturers will probably raise prices. No matter what make of car you intend to buy, you can save money by buying now. Not only save money by buying before prices are advanced by manufacturers, but in addition you can probably save a Federal sales tax on all motor cars.

BRITAIN FEARS IRISH ROW MAY SPLIT DOMINIONS

New Zealand Sends Note on the Subject.

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 2.—Interest in Ireland's anounced intention to abolish the oath of allegiance to the king reached a high pitch in London today while President Eamon de Valera's reply to the British government's note of inquiry regarding what he planned to do was awaited.

The government today received a cable from Lord Bledisloe, governor general of New Zealand, expressing apprehension over the Irish attitude on behalf of the New Zealand government, headed by Prime Minister G. W. Forbes. The cable was turned over to Minister of Dominions J. H. Thomas and was the subject of careful consideration. The dominions office is also closely watching the attitude of Australia, Canada, and South Africa.

Dominions Are Informed.

Officials refused to state whether any interchange of views had taken place with the governments of these dominions, but a copy of the British note to Dublin was forwarded to all dominions as a matter of mutual interest and dominion cabinet discussions are certain to have followed.

The imperial conference in Ottawa in July is closely bound up in the new imperial crisis and was the subject of pointed discussion in a speech today by Stanley Baldwin, president of the council. "It is too early to say what our hopes might be from that conference, but we hope, at any rate, that it will lay down the foundations of a much closer economic union than exists today," he said. "We are really at the crossroads of our imperial fiscal relations. We are bound either to move forward on a road leading to closer economic union or to take another road. The choice will lie before the nations of the empire at Ottawa.

"May Lead to Split."

"Never has a conference been held in which the opportunities have been greater, but if those opportunities should not be taken the course of events may lead us far apart. The natural destiny of our country is towards a world economic union with our flesh and blood, but if it cannot be accomplished we will be driven to look towards Europe. If we realize where the paths lead I am perfectly certain, whether the progress be great or small, it will be progress on the only lines that can keep together the British people's empire."

It was stated in one quarter this evening that no conference based on the proposal to abolish the oath is possible between the United Kingdom and the Free State government.

They were met at the La Salle Street station by Miss Frances Bosworth, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Bosworth of Evanston, and her fiancé, Dr. Trevor D. Stamp, son of Sir Josiah and Lady Stamp. Mr. and Mrs. Rufus C. Dawes also met them in the station and escorted them to the Dawes home, 1800 Sheridan road, Evanston, where they will stay during their visit here. Miss Bosworth and Dr. Stamp will be married on Tuesday.

ILLINOIS STUDENT PILOT KILLED AS PLANE CRASHES

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Racine, Wis., April 2.—[Special.]—Fog was blamed for the airplane crash today which killed Lyle Eldridge, 29, student pilot of Antioch, Ill., and critically injured his companion, Charles Landis, Waukegan, Ill., also an aviator. An investigation was begun tonight.

The plane was a Fairchild two place biplane with a Kinner five cylinder engine.

Eldridge is believed to have been piloting the ship, a Fairchild biplane owned by the Waukegan Flying club. He was instantly killed. Landis suffered a possible skull fracture and his condition was regarded as grave at St. Luke's hospital tonight. Until recently Landis was circulation manager for the Waukegan News-Sun.

The two men were flying from Waukegan to Milwaukee to have the airplane inspected when they encountered a heavy fog. They attempted to land on the farm of Phillip Rinke, about six miles north of Racine and just west of highway 41, but crashed on boggy ground. The ship did not catch fire, although the pilot had failed to turn off the ignition.

130 Political Prisoners in Cuba Begin Hunger Strike

PLAN S. AMERICAN AIR LINK WITH GRAF ZEPPELIN

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LIMA, Peru, April 2.—A German owned Junkers airplane of the Lloyd-Bolivian aviation service went out of Lima at 6 o'clock this morning headed for Pernambuco and Rio de Janeiro via La Paz and Santa Cruz, Bolivia, and Corumba, Brazil—a journey over mountain, jungle, and wilderness.

Junkers representatives here say their organization is working to establish air mail connections to all parts of the continent from Pernambuco, Brazil, to connect up with the Graf Zeppelin's regular air mail and passenger connections from Europe.

Yesterday two planes of the American-Peruvian controlled Faucett Aviation company brought into Lima seven passengers, including four women from Cajamarca in the central Andes mountains of northern Peru. Cajamarca is located beyond the 15,000 foot barrier of the western Andes. It may become a regular airport of call for the company's planes owing to the demand for mail and passenger aviation facilities from this remote section of the republic.

2 MEN KILLED, BOY INJURED AS PLANE CRASHES

Gainesville, Fla., April 2.—[U.P.]—Two men were killed, a boy seriously injured, and three others narrowly escaped possible death when an airplane crashed on the front lawn of a home here late today.

William Fowler, 24, pilot, and Robert Brasington, 17, passenger, were killed and Russell Mitchell, 14, son of Prof. W. K. Mitchell of the University of Florida, injured.

The plane, property of Carl Stengle, Gainesville aviator, was preparing to land at the airport when it brushed two trees and swerved into the front lawn of Roscoe McLane nearby.

Mrs. McLane was sprinkling the lawn with a garden hose at the time and stood 20 feet from where the plane landed. Nearby her two children were at play on the lawn.

STUDENTS HEAR MAYOR PROCLAIM CLEANUP DRIVE

Sixty high school students who called upon Mayor Cermak yesterday in his office heard him issue the official proclamation designating April 17 to May 1 as the period for Chicago's annual clean-up, paint-up, and plant-up campaign.

The young people marched to the city hall from the Hotel La Salle led by Evelyn Blazek, president of the High School Clean-up Campaign league. The league will spend the next two weeks preparing for the campaign, which is sponsored by the Chicago Association of Commerce.

"Beautiful and clean cities attract visitors, trade and prosperity, besides being sources of happiness and pride," Mayor Cermak declared in his proclamation. "All of our citizens participate in the enjoyment of this prosperity.

"It would seem therefore that there is a duty incumbent upon each and every one of our people, the housewife, the child, the storekeeper, industry, and all others to participate in this campaign."

NEWEST PLANES MAKE BOWS AT AIRCRAFT SHOW

Interest Centers on Navy and Army Ships.

BY HUGH SEXTON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., April 2.—[Special.]—New designs in aircraft were placed on display in the National Aircraft show that opened at noon today at Detroit airport. Planes for sportsmen, air transport lines, the army air corps and the navy are shown in conjunction with new types of equipment and instruments.

The greatest advance in design is apparent in the types of military aircraft which are shown publicly for the first time this year. The navy shows the new Vought scout, powered by a twin Wasp Jr. motor of fourteen cylinders, staggered in two banks. The motor develops 625 horsepower and is air cooled. This plane's performance is said to be astonishing, but naval officials refused to disclose the official figures.

Small Plane for Airships.

The other new navy plane is a small Curtiss pursuit model, the smallest fighting plane the United States has produced. Designed primarily to be carried inside the Akron and the Macon, the two navy airships, the diminutive fighter has gull wings and is powered by a 400 horsepower Wright motor, developing a top speed of 187 miles an hour.

The army air corps has on display its Berliner-Joyce two seater pursuit plane of the gull wing type powered by a Conqueror motor, the Boeing high altitude pursuit plane powered by a supercharged Wasp motor, and the new Curtiss Hawk low altitude pursuit plane that has a top speed of 210 miles an hour and is the fastest of all army fighters. It is also powered by a Conqueror motor.

Sport Planes Shown.

Curtiss-Wright is showing three new designs of sport planes, including the new Travelair speedwing powered by a Wright 240 horsepower motor that has a top speed of 187 miles an hour. Waco has refined its line of standard biplanes. Pitcairn displays a sport autogiro powered by a 150 horsepower Kinner motor; and Kellett has an autogiro with a convertible cockpit on view.

Fairchild has on display new open and cabin planes that resemble the Puss Moth. Stinson is showing the new Junior with a shorter fuselage and more streamlining. Many other standard makes are on view, with numerous refinements to last year's models.

New Transport Ships.

In the air transport class the new Stinson tri-motor plane is shown for the first time. The two outboard motors have been lowered beneath the wing to rest on stub wings, the center motor has been advanced and the cabin is larger and more comfortable. The three Lycoming motors are of 240 horsepower each. The air liner is said to cruise at 122 miles an hour with ten passengers and the pilot.

Ford is not showing his new forty passenger plane because it developed carburetor trouble at the last minute. It resembles a flying boat and is powered by three Hispano-Suisa motors, two of them placed within the wing and the other on top of the fuselage. The exhibit space holds instead a new de luxe Ford plane finely finished for the individual owner and a standard air liner.

Air Bus Is Exhibited.

Bellanca displays the air bus, and the American Airplane and Motor company the new Pilgrim. Both are single motor planes, using the Hornet motor and carrying large loads at normal speeds.

Three variable pitch propellers are on display. The Hamilton and Curtiss-Wright propellers are controllable, the first by oil pressure and the second by electricity. The Bendix propeller is adjusted automatically by pressure of the air on the blades.

AIR TRAVELER

MRS. GRACE MURRAY.

Mrs. Grace Murray, 83 years old, arrived in a plane at the municipal airport yesterday on a record breaking trip from Honolulu to New York. Mrs. Murray used a four and one-half day steamer from Hawaii to San Francisco, connecting with a 28 hour transcontinental plane service, thus making the journey in six days. She boarded another plane here for New York.

Mrs. Murray is returning to her home at Butman Heights, Conn., after spending six months in Honolulu and six months in Japan. She was a physician in New York for 30 years, retiring in 1916.

Charles Dickinson, also 83 years old, a Chicago capitalist, was a passenger yesterday on a new overnight limited plane to Dallas. Later in the day Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Brown, each 73 years old, of Hinsdale, purchased round trip tickets for a 4,000 mile flight to and from Los Angeles.

CORD SELLS ALL HIS PLANE LINES AFTER PRICE WAR

Aviation Corp. Takes Over Century Companies.

E. L. Cord, who has been something of a stormy petrel in the aviation business, yesterday sold his Century Air lines and Century-Pacific lines to the Aviation corporation. The announcement was made by W. A. Harriman, chairman of the purchasing concern, and was confirmed in Chicago by L. B. Manning, vice president of the Cord corporation.

The consideration, it was reported, was all in stock of the Aviation corporation. Harriman said that it was less than 140,000 shares. The stock, which is listed on the New York stock exchange, closed yesterday at less than 3, which would make the deal involve about $400,000.

Abolish Middle West Lines.

All the Century lines, except that from Los Angeles to San Francisco, will be discontinued as soon as state utility commissions grant permission, according to Harriman. Among those to be erased are the Chicago-Cleveland, Chicago-Detroit, and El Paso-Los Angeles.

At present Century Air lines is operating planes over routes that total 6,902 miles daily. Century-Pacific planes fly a total of 6,918 miles daily.

Cord, soon after the establishment of Century Air lines, started a price cutting war. First he reduced the selling price of planes made by his subsidiary companies. Then he slashed passenger rates and air express charges. His most sensational proposal was to carry all the air mail in the United States for 30 cents a mile—about half the current rate.

22 Pilots Discharged.

On Feb. 9 of this year, following a dispute over a wage cut, twenty-two pilots of the Century Air lines were discharged. They asserted that a flat hourly rate for flying, proposed by Cord, would cut their pay 40 per cent. This was denied. The discharged pilots were replaced by others willing to take the cut.

Less than a month ago Cord declared that he had fifty pilots and would have 150, enough to cover the country, in another year. The announcement of Aviation corporation indicates that with the acquisition of his twenty-seven planes a contraction, rather than an expansion, in air routes is contemplated.

ROBS NORTHWEST SIDE STORE.

A bandit selected a new pair of gloves and a hat yesterday in the Sarnoff-Irving Hat store at 3238 Lincoln avenue, then robbed the manager, Abe Persky, of $26.

How do you Weigh Value?

It is perfectly easy to size up relative automobile values.

An automobile is certainly not to be regarded as so much steel and other materials selling at so much a pound. It isn't wheelbase alone, or horsepower alone, or weight alone, or price alone—it isn't any one thing alone that determines a car's value, but the combination of everything.

That's why Chrysler value scales up bigger than any other value to be compared with it. Chrysler value is more extensive. Covers more things. Involves greater initiative in engineering. Includes a greater number of important and basic engineering developments. Entails greater results in car action, car ability, car comfort, car endurance.

It's what Chrysler does to the internals of a car that counts. It's what Chrysler does to make a car smoother, livelier, quieter and easier to drive. It's what Chrysler does to make a car stronger and safer and longer-lived.

Outstanding engineering developments such as Floating Power engine mountings—that give Chrysler cars the most fascinating performance there is. Great conveniences like an Automatic Clutch, a Silent Gear Selector and Free Wheeling—that make Chryslers effortless to drive.

Squeak-proof springs—distortion-proof frames—clash-proof gear shifting—shock-proof steering—self-equalizing hydraulic brakes—Centrifuse brake drums, providing five times the wear of ordinary brakes—balanced wheels—value features that build up Chrysler value to where it simply cannot be matched in today's market.

The best demonstration of Chrysler value is a demonstration of the car itself. Drive one and see.

Sales from January 1st to March 20th, 1932 increased 20.3% over the same period in 1931

STUDEBAKER is marching on to new success in 1932 . . . the Triumphant New Studebakers have met with a remarkable reception, Pierce-Arrow retains its unique hold on the fine car field and the Rockne Six has won immediate acceptance. As a result, passenger car sales of The Studebaker Corporation in the United States and Canada, between January 1 and March 20, were 20.3% in excess of the same period in 1931.

In two-thirds of the cities over 100,000 population in the United States, sales of Studebaker models alone increased in January and February from 17% to 600% over the same months last year.

From coast to coast and from border to border, remarkable gains have emphasized Studebaker leadership. In New York, in February, Studebaker models alone registered an increase of 101% over February, 1931. In San Francisco, Studebaker deliveries were 70% in excess of February last year. In New Orleans, 63% more Studebakers were sold. In Detroit, the gain was 97%. In St. Louis, 55%. In Buffalo, 63%. In Cincinnati, 62%. In Denver, 82%. In Toledo, 114%.

These are only a few of many new "highs" established in every part of America by overwhelming public approval and purchase of Studebaker's 4 great "buys."

Studebaker is taking month after month in stride because Studebaker has refused to stand still—because in 80 years of experience, and through 10 business depressions, the oldest vehicle manufacturer in the world has learned that the way to win out is to stand out—to do more and give more!

To do more . . . by pioneering such epochal advancements as Free Wheeling . . . by contributing Safety Glass in all windows and all windshields of all models at no extra charge—and again the industry is following Studebaker.

To give more . . . in cars of larger size and finer quality, replete with 32 startling betterments . . . yet drastically lower in price.

Today, all America is attesting Studebaker's leadership. Alert to value as never before, motorists are giving Studebaker one of the great sales records of its career. Studebaker sets forth this record as an invitation to thoughtful Americans to see and drive its triumphant new cars—the utmost in engineering genius and the ultimate in value. Arrange for a demonstration today.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Little Rock, Ark., April 2.—The White Sox, exuberant perhaps at the news that they are going to train in California next spring, looked better this afternoon than at any time this year. As a consequence, Tommy Thomas and Sam Jones collaborated with their associates for a three hit 8 to 2 victory over the Little Rock Travelers, last year's second placers in the Southern association.

Thomas not only held the home boys to two hits in five innings, but he also attained the goal of all pitchers. Tommy knocked a homer with the bases full to break a nothing to nothing tie in the second inning. Tommy also rapped out a smart single his second time at bat, thus making himself very happy.

The one hit which Jones gave up was a double by Harper in the seventh which came after the side should have been retired. The prolongation was due to the lone Sox error, a boot by Luke Appling.

Campbell's a Hero Again.

Bruce Campbell shared the happiness hour with the two pitchers. Bruce, benched because he hadn't made a hit in 17 trips to the plate, was restored to good standing today for the reason that he was a town hero here last year. The young man responded to the opportunity by clicking out doubles his second and third times at bat. He scored after each.

Carey Selph, out of the last game in Shreveport because of an injured finger, also returned to the lineup and socked a triple, as did Appling. Hayes got three singles.

The circumstances leading up to Thomas' big moment in the second inning were as follows: Blue was hit by a pitched ball, but was forced by Selph. Appling singled and Selph stopped at second. The runners then staged a double steal and Grube was intentionally passed to fill the bases. Thomas then lined one to center and it bounded past Wally French to the fence, a homer.

Gets Break; Doesn't Need It.

Campbell's first double came with one out in the third inning. Bruce went to third on Blue's out and scored on a wild pitch, a break that wasn't necessary, for Selph forthwith followed with his triple.

Campbell's second double, in the fifth, led to the Sox's sixth run. After the double he scored when Nicolai picked up Blue's grounder and threw it away.

Anderson walked with two out in the sixth, stole second, took third on Hayes' single and scored on a wild pitch. Appling's triple and an infield out produced run No. 8.

Windup Series Today.

The game was the first played in the new Traveler stadium, one of the finest layouts in the south. The second and final game of the series will be played tomorrow, after which the Sox will move on to Memphis for one contest.

It was announced today that the White Sox will train in Pasadena, Cal., in 1933. Brookside park, with a seating capacity of 4,000, will be the scene of their spring operations. Better weather on the coast and the scarcity of opponents in Texas, where the Sox have trained for several years, were the reasons for the change.

HOSPITAL DENIES DEL BISSONETTE'S INJURY CRITICAL

New York, April 2.—[U. P.]—Reports from New Orleans, where the Brooklyn Robins baseball team is playing an exhibition series, that Del Bissonette, star first baseman, is in a critical condition in the New York Hospital for Crippled and Ruptured, were denied by hospital authorities tonight.

"Bissonette is here," they said, "suffering from an operation for a torn tendon in his leg. But reports that blood poisoning has set in and that Bissonette is in a critical condition are absolutely ridiculous."

Dr. Royal Whitman, Bissonette's personal physician, is out of the city for the week-end.

COACHES ADOPT RULE TO CHECK BASKET STALLING

Stalling in basketball is reduced to a minimum by a radical rule adopted at yesterday's session of the National Association of Basketball Coaches at the Shoreland hotel. The rule requires that the team in possession of the ball advance across the center of the court within ten seconds after receiving it.

A line will be drawn across the center of the floor and the referee is empowered to penalize the team which fails to cross it within the required period. The penalty calls for loss of the ball out of bounds.

Once the ball is passed beyond the center line it can be passed back only once.

Elect Olsen President.

The recommendation will be placed before the rules committee, which meets in New York next Thursday and Friday. The fact that a number of the coaches at the meeting yesterday are members of the rules committee created an opinion that the new rule had a fair chance of being adopted.

Harold Olsen, coach at Ohio State university, who suggested the new rule, was elected president of the association to succeed A. A. Schabinger of Creighton university, Omaha. Other officers elected yesterday were:

Vice presidents—Roy Mondroff, Georgia Tech; Howard Ortmer, Cornell university; A. C. Lonborg, Northwestern university, and H. C. Beresford, University of Colorado. Board of directors—Forrest Allen, University of Kansas; H. C. Carlson, University of Pittsburgh; L. P. Andeas, Syracuse university, and Schabinger.

Lonborg Favors Change.

Coach Arthur [Dutch] Lonborg of Northwestern university, a vice president of the association, stated that the new rule, while drastic in its effect, was nevertheless a decided step forward.

"The rule certainly will speed up the game," Coach Lonborg said. "It will give the defensive team more confidence to come out and attempt to get possession of the ball, since the offensive team cannot retreat into the back court. This will eliminate the delayed stalling game, which has proved so unpopular with the public."

In the WAKE of the NEWS

BASEBALL IN 1932.

BASEBALL, in the past, has suffered less from hard times than most any other sport or industry. That does not imply that our national game is not affected in any way or that it is "depression proof"—depression proof having proved a fallacy to several industries heretofore regarded immune. But the ardent fan usually will dig up, even if not as often, or even if he sits in less expensive seats.

LOU GEHRIG.

There is no question, however, that the current depression, which cannot lift before the National and American league pennant races are well on their way, will have some effect. Club owners have anticipated that by slashing salaries and inaugurating other economies. In the final analysis, however, The Wake thinks the pennant races themselves will determine attendance to a large degree.

If estimates of critics that Cardinals and Athletics will repeat their 1931 triumphs are borne out, and if they secure commanding leads early, other clubs will find decreasing crowds passing the turnstiles. It is not certain, of course, that any such thing will happen. Violations of "dope" are what makes baseball.

If St. Louis and Philadelphia do repeat emphatically, what teams are best equipped to combat lessening interest? Our answer is that it will be those outfits with "personalities" on their squads. That trend has been evident in recent years. New York Yankees have not won a pennant since 1928, but Babe Ruth still is worth $75,000 a year, not so much for his playing ability as his attendance impelling personality to fans who hope to see Babe hit a homer. If Babe doesn't, perhaps Lou Gehrig will.

With the prestige of championship dimmed somewhat by the world series, Connie Mack still has Bob Grove and George Earnshaw as pitchers, Al Simmons, and Mickey Cochran.

On the National league side the world champion Cardinals have as a colorful character young Pepper Martin of world series sudden renown, and others. Brooklyn may be and probably will be fortunate in having on its roster Hack Wilson, who was somewhat ignominiously dismissed from the Chicago Cubs. Hack is nothing if not colorful. But his color, of course, is blue if he fails to put those long drives over the fence.

Another possibility for the older league is What-a-Man Art Shires, once of the White Sox. Shires became too colorful for local baseball, what with his exploits in the professional prize ring, but it is a question whether the White Sox, now a somewhat drab outfit, were wise in losing their option on him. Shipped off to Milwaukee, Shires came back and was deemed worthy by the Boston Braves.

Neither our Cubs nor Sox have outstanding personalities for publicity at present writing, unless Babe Herman comes to the Cubs by way of trade or cash. Rogers Hornsby is colorful, but probably will not play regularly. Burleigh Grimes is a possibility, but it is hard to bill pitchers in advance and convince fans they may not be shifted by the exigencies of the occasion. A strong hitter like Hack Wilson or an eccentric like Art Shires, whom fans boo or cheer alternately, are likely to afford more excitement.

All we are trying to prove is that personality in a baseball player, a personality susceptible to publicity, is an asset, financial at least, to any ball team. Let's hope new players of "color" will arise this year.

TORONTO BEATS MAROONS, 3-2, TO ENTER CUP FINAL

TORONTO, Ont., April 2.—[U. P.]—The Toronto Maple Leafs qualified for the Stanley cup finals tonight by defeating the Montreal Maroons, 3 to 2, in an overtime game.

The Leafs will meet the Rangers in New York Tuesday night in the first of five games for the cup.

The two game series between the Leafs and Maroons was decided on a total goal basis. The first game ended in a 1 to 1 tie.

Leafs Score First.

Toronto's winning goal was scored by Gracie, a spare wing, after 18 minutes of overtime. Gracie picked the puck up near center ice, broke through the Montreal defense line, and drove a high shot past Walsh.

Toronto gained the lead after 3 minutes and 21 seconds of play when Horner, a defense man, slipped one past Walsh. Three minutes from the end of the second period the Maroons sent five men down the ice. Ward picked up the puck in a scramble in front of the Toronto net and beat Chabot with a short drive.

Maroons Take Lead.

Montreal took the lead soon after the opening of the third period on Smth's long shot from center ice. Copying the Maroons' strategy, the Leafs sent down five men, Day scoring after a short solo dash.

Cubs Send Welch to Angels; Bell Goes to Colonels

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., April 2.—Two athletes were separated from the Cub roster this afternoon. Manager Rogers Hornsby announced that Pitcher Johnny Welch had been turned over to the Los Angeles club under option and Lester Bell, veteran infield, released unconditionally to Louisville of the American association.

Welch has been with the Cubs, off and on, for the last three seasons, having been farmed out twice before to the Reading International league team. Bell, who played third base for the Cardinals in the world series of 1926, was purchased by the Cubs from Boston before the 1930 season. An ailing throwing arm kept him from being of any value to the Chicago team last year.

Phillies Beat A's in First Game of City Series, 8 to 4

Philadelphia, Pa., April 2.—(AP)—The Phillies and their old rivals, the American league champion Athletics, opened their annual spring city series here today with a victory for the National leaguers, 8 to 4.

A crowd of 10,000 saw the local baseball season open with heavy hitting on the part of the Phils.

Don Hurst, the Nationals' first baseman, poled two home runs over the right field wall, each time with a man on base, and Pinkey Whitney upheld his captain's rôle with a pair of homers that sailed into the lower left field stand.

Except for those long distance shots, the Athletics outbatted the Phils, making 11 hits off Phil Collins and Ray Benge, to the seven the Phillies got off Joe Bowman and Sugar Cain.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., April 2.—The Cubs seemed to be suffering this afternoon from a sort of April Fool's day hangover. Their work was filled with jokes. The infielding was bad in several instances and the outfield showed at least one case of being stationary at a critical moment. These mistakes, coupled with an appalling quantity of enemy base hits, permitted the Pirates to win the third of the exhibition series, 8 to 4.

The Cubs also failed to get a profitable return from their batting efforts. At least not until after they had kicked away the decision by giving the Pirates five unearned runs off Bob Smith in the sixth.

Pirates Score in Third.

Jurges became all tangled up in his shortstopping in the second inning and the Pirates almost used him as a means to their first runs. Jurges fumbled Traynor's grounder and a moment later knocked down Suhr's hard drive. Herman was slow about covering second and Jurges, instead of making a throw to first, held the ball. Piet's sacrifice moved the two runners along but Smith proved equal to the emergency. He fanned Thevenow, and Finney was stopped on a grounder to Hack.

The Pirates didn't need any poor fielding to assist them when they decided to get after Smith in the third. After two were out, Paul Waner caromed a three base hit off the front of the bleacher in right, and scored when Comorosky hit the left field wall with a double. There was another limited revolt against Smith in the fourth. Suhr opened with a two bagger to center and raced home on Thevenow's single to right.

Cubs Rally Nipped.

For the first three innings, there was hardly any indication that the Cubs knew anything about using their bats. When they started something, only to be stopped by a dazzling bit of fielding. Cuyler scratched a hit off Brame's glove and Barton walked. Stephenson aimed a bulletlike drive toward second, but Mr. Piet, who deleted the Roski from his name to make it fit a box score, dug the ball out of the dirt. A double play was consummated, leaving Cuyler the only surviving base runner. Jurges rolled to short for the third out.

Cubs' charity more than Smith's ineffectiveness gave the Pirates the chance to turn loose their five run splurge in the sixth. H. Taylor dropped Smith's throw on Suhr, Piet sacrificed, and Thevenow singled. Jurges erred on a possible double play grounder by Finney, and Suhr scored. Brame was out on a fly to center, but

Breaking Into Baseball

Every baseball player who reaches the big leagues has a different story to tell. Most of them never dreamed of becoming a star in the big leagues. They started out in some trade or business. Then suddenly they found themselves in a baseball uniform and on their way to the major leagues.

Irving Vaughan and Edward Burns are collaborating with Chicago's major league players on a series of articles on "How I Got My Start in Baseball," telling how Charley Root, Burleigh Grimes, Tommy Thomas, Ted Lyons, et al, broke into the game.

In tomorrow's Tribune you will find the first of this series on how the White Sox and Cubs got their start.

GOLF'S HERE, AND SO ARE CHANGES IN BALL, CLUBS

Unpainted Sphere Ready for Chicagoland Test.

Equipment, as essential to a golfer's alibi as it is to his game, will offer several innovations of official and unofficial character when the season opens in Chicagoland within the next fortnight.

The most significant, of course, will be the new ball authorized by the United States Golf association as the standard for championship play. But other alterations pertaining to ball and club construction have been introduced in an effort to stimulate the interest and business that lagged slightly in the 1931 season out of sympathy with general economic conditions.

The new standard ball, which combines the size of the unpopular one last year with the weight of the ball used prior to 1931, should have the desired effect on the golfing business, at least at the outset of the season, but its ability to arouse interest in the game is a matter of conjecture among manufacturers.

1931 Ball Unpopular.

By what was described as "public demand," the U. S. G. A. ruled last year that the old ball, which was 1.62 in size and 1.62 in weight, should be larger and lighter. The size was increased to 1.68 inches in diameter and the weight decreased to 1.55 ounces.

This "public demand," one manufacturer said, was a case of either spending millions on the country's golf courses to make them more difficult or change the game to prevent the crack players from making the courses look ridiculously easy. Believing that the courses already were difficult enough for most golfers, the latter alternative was adopted.

This ball change was expected to make it harder for the professionals and crack amateurs, but lower the score of the so called dub or "100 or better" golfer. Good golfers as a rule found the ball a trifle light for true flight in long drives on windy days, and the dub listed various complaints. In the main, however, scores remained the same.

Authorize New Size.

But the clamor for another change was so great that the U. S. G. A. promptly ordered a new ball for this year, authorizing the 1.68 size with the 1.62 weight. This worked little hardship on the manufacturers, who had gone to great expense last year to make new molds for the larger ball, since the size remained the same. They merely wind the rubber ribbon innards a little tighter this year, thereby boosting the weight from last year's 1.55.

Manufacturers viewed last year's complaints merely as alibis, and there is little that a golfer cherishes more than his alibi. In 1931 many golfers declined to play the 1.68-1.55 ball and stuck to the old one. This year they are expected to welcome the 1.68-1.62 type. Less balls are left over in stock from last season than there were the season before.

Eliminate Painted Covering.

One of the principal unofficial changes in the ball will be the elimination of the painted covering through a process developed by one prominent manufacturer. After three years of experimenting, in which engineers have developed a covering that will remain glossy, be easy to clean, and white through to the wrappings, it is claimed that the new process adds from five to ten yards to a drive and increases the accuracy of the ball's flight.

By eliminating the customary paint, which is applied in four thin coats to preserve the appearance of the ball, the cover indentations, whether dimple or mesh, are made much sharper and more uniform. It is in this fact that the manufacturers have their arguments for truer flight. This is the first golf ball without a painted cover ever marketed in America.

The most interesting club change was designed by another manufacturer, with particular attention to the needs of the dub, although a winter's tourney play in California with the new irons has won over many professionals. The principal claim for the clubs is that they will eliminate the duffer's hacking and preserve the courses.

Weight Concentrated in Head.

To accomplish this one manufacturer has concentrated the weight of the club in the club head, with most of it centered in the sole of the blade directly back of the center of impact. The soles of the blades are formed on a radius, so that a curved surface rather than a sharp edge comes in contact with the turf. This gives the club a skidding rather than a digging tendency.

MISS MORRILL CAPTURES INDOOR TENNIS CROWN

Brookline, Mass., April 2.—(AP)—Marjorie Morrill of Dedham, Mass., sixth ranking American player, today gained the national indoor singles tennis championship by defeating the defending titlist, Marjorie Sachs of Cambridge, 3-6, 6-2, 6-2, on the Longwood Cricket club's covered courts.

Miss Sachs played superb tennis against her higher ranked opponent, but she was unable to check the steady and well assorted stroking of Miss Morrill in the last two sets. Miss Morrill was top seeded and was favored to win the tournament. Although she was last year's winner, Miss Sachs was dropped to third seeding in the draw this year.

Two more defending champions fell in the doubles final when Miss Morrill, fresh from her singles conquest, teamed with Mrs. John Van Ryn of Philadelphia, another "first ten" player, to upset Mrs. George W. Wightman and Miss Sarah Palfrey, both of Brookline, 6-3, 6-0.

Mrs. Wightman and Miss Palfrey had held the title four years, and their elimination was considered the greatest upset of the tournament.

Mrs. Van Ryn, who has but little experience on indoor courts, played the best game she has displayed this week.

TRIANGULAR MEET.

Quincy, Ill., April 2.—[Special.]—Springfield, Quincy and Decatur High schools will engage in a triangular track and field meet here Saturday, April 9.

Shamrocks vs. Duluth Tonight in Title Series

Championship hockey as played in the American league will be introduced to Chicago at the Stadium tonight when the Shamrocks and Duluth Hornets open a five game series for the league title.

The Shamrocks qualified for the championship playoffs by finishing first in the regular season's play, while Duluth entered the finals by defeating Kansas City, the second place winner.

Duluth and the Shamrocks will play the second game of the title series here Tuesday night. The third and fourth games will be contested in Duluth and the fifth game, if necessary, will be played at the Stadium. The series and championship is decided on the best three out of five games. All ties will be played out on a sudden death basis.

Shamrocks Hold Season Edge.

Despite the fact that Duluth is considered the league's strongest team at present, the Shamrocks enter tonight's game and the series as the popular favorite. The Chicagoans hold an edge over the Hornets in the regular season's play, having won seven of ten games.

Duluth, however, played the greater part of the year without its full strength. It entered the runner-up playoffs against Kansas City with its team intact for the first time, but lost the first two games, 1 to 0 and 2 to 0. The strength of the team was to win the third game, 3 to 0, and the fourth, 2 to 1, giving it the series on total goasl, 5 to 4.

Right now the Duluth six is at the top of its game. The Shamrocks finished the season in a succession of victories that reached nine straight and twenty-three out of the last twenty-eight played. It is presumed that somewhere along the line a team traveling at such a pace must have a letup. Such a letup might quite naturally follow a ten day layoff, which fell to the Shamrocks as a reward for their first place finish at the end of the regular season.

Rely on High Scoring Line.

The Shamrocks will depend largely upon their kid line of Riley, Wiseman and Prelesnik, the leading scoring combination in the league. Wiseman and Riley also are the leading individual point getters for the season. Against this trio Duluth will play Leswick, Forslund and Merrill, claimed by managers to be the best passing combination in the league and one of the best in hockey. It was this trio which defeated Kansas City in the semi-finals.

There is little to choose between the defense men on the two teams, but in the nets the Shamrocks are conceded the advantage with Mike Karakas, the youngest goalie in the league, having a better record than Turner, the oldest. Karakas has recovered from the head injuries sustained during practice the night of the Shamrocks' last league game ten days ago.

Want a Showdown.

A Shamrock victory in the series will reopen the three year controversy between the American league and the National league over the Stanley cup, symbolic of world's supremacy. The Shamrocks have definitely decided to challenge as a team if they win. The trustees of the cup have already decided that the American league challenge "was filed too late" this year, but the Shamrocks nevertheless intend to issue their challenge to the winner of the cup at the end of the present playoffs in the National league.

The purpose of the challenge, it is understood, will be to force a showdown with the National league teams and the cup trustees.

The lineup for tonight's game will be:

SHAMROCKS.		DULUTH.
Karakas	Goal	Turner
Buswell	L.D.	Stuart
Taylor	R.D.	Davis
Riley	C	Leswick
Wiseman	L.W.	Forslund
Prelesnik	R.W.	Merrill

CHAMPION POLO TEAM WINS AS TOURNEY OPENS

New York, April 2.—(AP)—Led by their nine goal star, Gerard S. Smith, Los Nan Duces opened the defense of their national indoor open polo championship tonight with a 12½ to 3 victory over the Brooklyn Riding club.

Except for the opening period, when the elder Earl Hopping scored two spectacular goals to put the Riding Club in front, the champions had things their own way. They piled in six goals in the second period, and the result was never in doubt thereafter. Smith contributed seven of the winners' goals. Other results:

Class C—Princeton, 10; Pennsylvania M. C., 2½.

Class C—West Point Officers, 15½; Squadron A, 2.

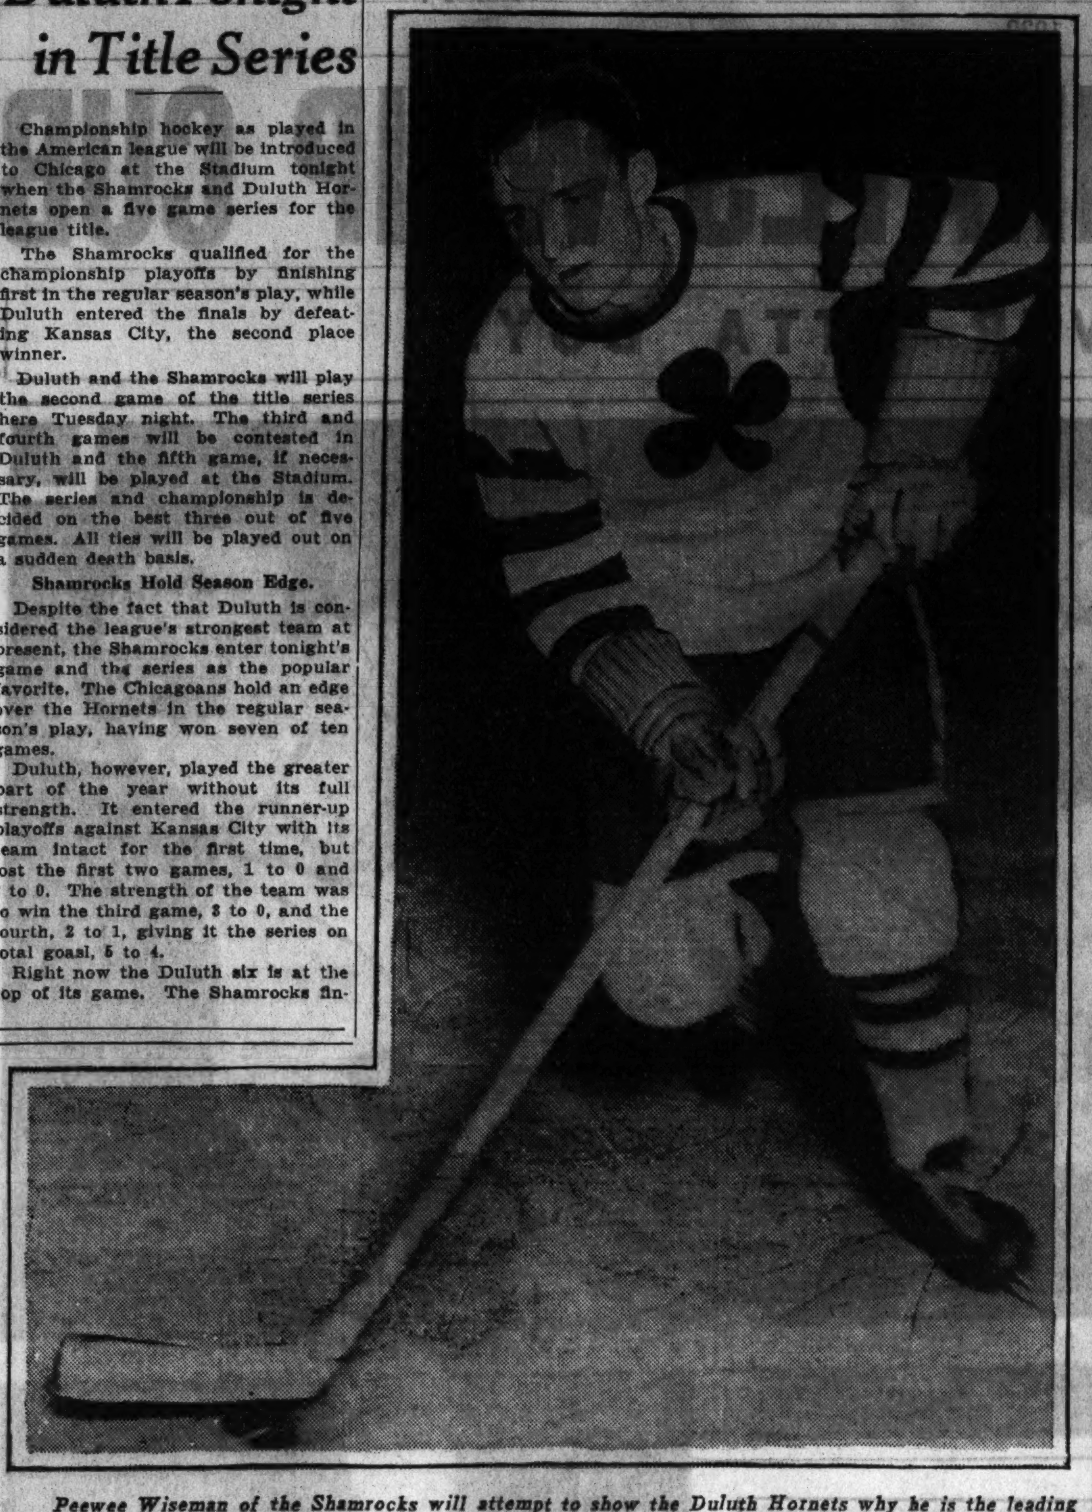
Class D—Ramapo Valley, 10½; West Point Officers, 3.

Class D—Squadron C, 8; 109th Field Artillery, 7.

MISS ORCUTT KEEPS TITLE ON LAST 2 HOLES

Pinehurst, N. C., April 2.—(AP)—Sinking putts of more than 20 feet to win the 17th and 18th holes, Maureen Orcutt, Englewood, N. J., star, overcame a one hole deficit to defeat Mrs. Opal Hill of Kansas City, 1 up, today for the north and south championship. Her victory brought her the crown for the second successive year.

DEFIES NEST OF HORNETS



Peewee Wiseman of the Shamrocks will attempt to show the Duluth Hornets why he is the leading scorer of the American Hockey league tonight at the Chicago Stadium. Shamrock followers are depending upon him to lead the Chicago sextet to the league championship, which will be decided in a five game series.

Final Hockey Scoring Records

Point making honors for the season 1931-'32 in the National Hockey league go to Harvey Jackson, left wing of the "kid line" of the Toronto Maple Leafs.

Jackson scored 28 goals which, with his 25 assists, give him 53 points. Another member of the kid line, Joe Primeau, was second, with 13 goals and 37 assists.

Red Dutton, defense star of the New York Americans, led the penalty parade of the entire league with 107 minutes in the box, exceeding the total of Ching Johnson of the New York Rangers by one minute.

Change Grid Rule on Illegal Use of Hands

New York, April 2.—[U. P.]—The penalty for illegal use of the hands by defense linemen this fall will be 15 yards instead of disqualification as was agreed upon by the national football rules committee at its annual meeting in February, W. S. Langford, secretary of the committee, announced tonight. The change, Langford said, was made recently by telegraphic vote.

The committee members felt that if the penalty was disqualification, referees would hesitate before inflicting such a severe fine. This, the committee agreed, would retard the elimination of such dangerous blows as the rabbit punch.

Disqualification Not Just.

"Like everybody else interested in football," Langford said, "we know that illegal use of the hands by the defensive lineman must be abolished. The committee felt so strongly against this unsportsmanlike phase of the game that in our February meeting in Canada we, without any great deliberation, agreed to punish offenders by immediate disqualification.

"Since then the committee has formed the opinion that disqualification is not a just penalty, in view of the fact that many of the players have been taught to use their hands in such a manner on defense and will need time to overcome the habit. Too, referees will hesitate to put a man out of the game, whereas they will inflict a 15 yard penalty whenever they see a violation of the rule. In the long run, the committee believes the lesser penalty will have the greater effect."

Langford also pointed out that the change would lessen the likelihood of prolonged arguments when a referee calls a penalty for illegal use of the hands.

Aim to Prevent Arguments.

"It's going to be quite a task for an official to decide when a defensive lineman is violating the code and when he is not. You can well imagine the howl that would go up in a close game if a team's star player was banished from the game for roughness the crowd failed to see."

300 YARD MEDLEY RELAY—New York A. C.

100 YARD FREE STYLE—Maiola Kalili, Los Angeles, A. C.

New Haven, Conn., April 2.—(AP)—A crack trio of swimmers wearing the winged foot symbol of the New York Athletic club posted a new world's mark, its second of the day, to win the 300 yard medley relay race in the national senior A. A. U. championships tonight.

The team of Leonard and Walter Spence, brothers, and George Kojac clipped a full second off its own world's mark of 3 minutes 2 1-5 seconds set in the preliminaries a few hours earlier.

Four Champions Successful.

Seven new titleholders were created during the meet, while four champions successfully defended their crowns.

In winning team honors, the Los Angeles A. C. took six championships, with four going to the New York A. C.

Clarence [Buster] Crabbe, Los Angeles swimmer, won his third title by beating a fast field tonight in the 500 yard free style race. The west coast star, holder of the 1,500 meter free style and 300 yard medley crowns was timed at 5 minutes 38 3-5 seconds. A thrilling burst of speed during the last 50 yards gave him a four yard lead at the finish over Ted Wiget of the Athens A. C., Oakland, Cal., who placed second.

Kalili Finishes Third.

Another Los Angeles A. C. ace, Maiola Kalili, also holder of two titles, finished third.

The race was a close one during the first 450 yards, the lead shifting repeatedly among the first three finishers and Kalili's brother, Manuella, who slowed up considerably to finish fifth.

Crabbe, swimming in the Yale pool before the largest night crowd of the four day meet, became the only triple titleholder by virtue of the victory. His achievement also assured his club unofficial team honors. It was the west coast club's sixth victory of the meet.

Dick Degener of the University of Michigan, dethroned Mickey Riley of the Los Angeles A. C. as the high board diving champion.

Gets Perfect Score.

The Michigan undergraduate, who piled up 166.04 points, brought the crowd to its feet with his running front two and a half somersault with a tuck, the only dive of the night given a perfect score of 10 by all seven judges.

Riley, holder of the title in low board diving was given 152.12 points and Harold [Dutch] Smith of the Los Angeles A. C. was third with 149.2. Degener's victory took the high board diving crown out of California for the first time in 11 years. Summaries:

500 YARD FREE STYLE—Won by Clarence [Buster] Rabbe, Los Angeles A. C.; Ted Wiget, Athens A. C., second; Maiola Kalili, Los Angeles A. C., third. Time, 5:38 3-5.

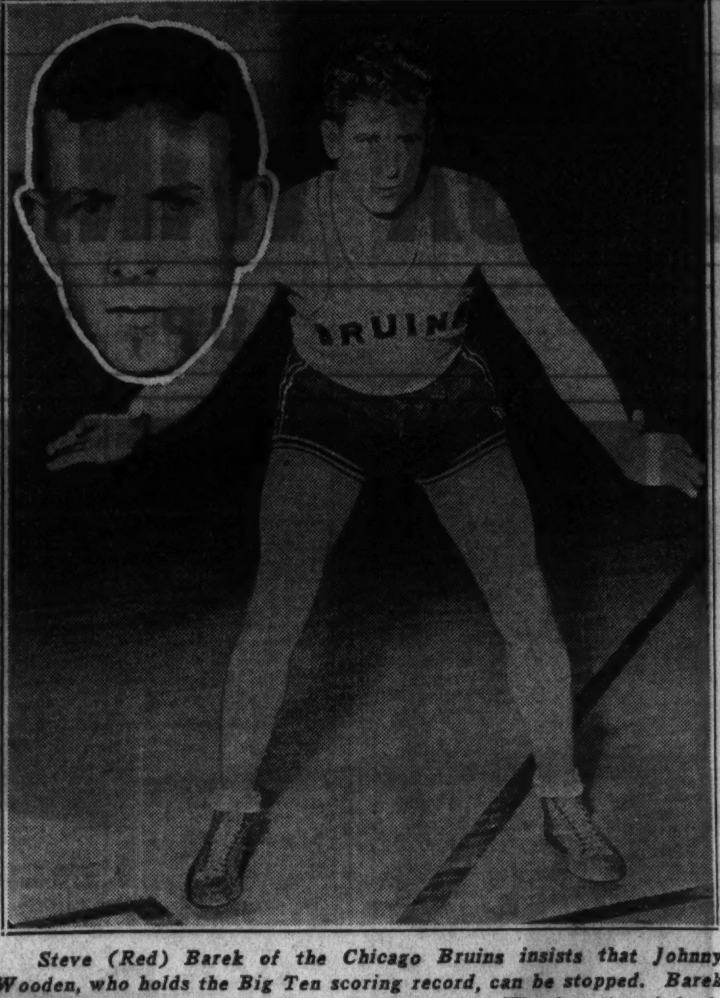
TAKE CASE TO COURT



Steve (Red) Barek of the Chicago Bruins insists that Johnny Wooden, who holds the Big Ten scoring record, can be stopped. Barek will try to demonstrate his theory tonight when Wooden (inset) leads the Purdue All-Stars against the Bruins at Rainbo fronton.

Bruins Face Wooden and Stars Tonight

Johnny Wooden's Purdue All Stars will go up against professional competition for the first time tonight when they battle the Chicago Bruins at the Rainbo fronton, Clark street and Lawrence avenue.

The game should prove a test of what a representative college team can do against a strong pro five. The team Wooden will lead is the same one that claimed the national championship in 1929 and 1930.

The opening match of the night at 8 o'clock will bring together the Taylor Trunk girls, and the Wishbone A. C., a quintet made up of deaf boys.

Coaches to Attend.

Among the spectators tonight will be several noted critics, including members of the National Association of Basketball Coaches, members of the Purdue Alumni association and players of the 1931-'32 Loyola and Northwestern university fives.

Coaches who have been meeting here during the week will have a chance to study some of the finer points of the professional game. The game will be played under college rules with some of the professional features retained.

Bruins to Watch Wooden.

Bruins' hopes for victory, it is believed, rest in the ability of the guards to stop Wooden. Johnny rang up an all time conference record last season by scoring 154 points. The lineup:

BRUINS.		ALL STARS.
Skurnick	R. F.	Wooden
Wickhorst	L. F.	Harmeson
F. Murphy	C	S. Murphy
Barak	R. G.	Boots
Miller	L. G.	Porter

TWO RECORDS ARE BROKEN IN GOPHER RELAYS

Minneapolis, Minn., April 2.—[Special.]—The Minnesota track team captured four of seven first places in the university class of the fourth annual Minnesota relays tonight. Two meet records were broken and two tied.

Clarence Munn, Gopher football captain in 1931, set a relay shot put record with a toss of 48 feet 10¾ inches, surpassing the mark of Sammy Behr, Wisconsin star last year, by 1½ inches.

Iowa university's one mile relay team was timed in 3:25.4 to surpass its own record of 3:28.6, set in 1929.

Other Gopher victories came in the 60 yard dash event, pole vault, and 70 yard high hurdles. Harold Thompson ran 60 yards in :06.3 to tie the record set by Johnny Hass in 1930. Elton Hess won the pole vault with a leap of 13 feet tying the record of George Otterness of Minnesota, Canby of Iowa, and Tommy Warne of Northwestern.

Wisconsin won two firsts, the university distance medley relay and high jump. Bob Murphy gave the Badgers their victory in the high jump with a leap of 6 feet 2 inches.

Read This to a Stray Cat and Watch Him Run!

BY BOB BECKER.

Bird fans in the United States have been no little interested in a recent announcement that the problem of stray cats is about to receive considerable attention from a nation-wide organization. The International Cat society is out to establish license laws for cats similar to those in force for dogs, and the organization is frank in saying that this is its first active move toward abolishing all stray cats in the cities and country.

Organized last August in the Astor hotel, New York, with offices in Park avenue, the International Cat society has a governing board of prominent New York business men. It is reported that George D. Pratt, executive of a large oil company and well known as a conservation authority, is a member of the board. Until recently the society confined its activities to educational work. Now it plans to muster its forces in support of cat license measures which already have been agitated in Connecticut and Pennsylvania.

One of the things that the society is calling attention to concerns the relation of stray cats to wild birds. It points out that experts in the United States department of agriculture and state conservation departments have branded straying and night hunting house cats as one of the greatest obstacles in the efforts to increase bird life in urban and suburban communities.

It is the belief of the society that measures compelling cat owners to license their pets is a logical step toward the control and reduction of unwanted homeless pets and strays that are allowed to roam at will.

In this connection it is interesting to note what students of bird life have discovered about the cat as a menace to bird life. Although there are two enemies of the quail in Georgia capable of doing more damage to the bob whites, Stoddard, the acknowledged authority on the southern quail, says that the cat is the only animal capable of successfully stalking a setting quail.

In determining the quail's worst enemies he did place the cat third in the list. Other authorities, however, are inclined to present a very strong case against the roving cat, because of its destruction of song birds, and many states carry on a year round program to reduce the number of stray cats in the fields and woods.

OAK PARK WINS RELAY TITLE; NEW TRIER IS SECOND

Victors Get 26½ Points; Joliet, Senn Are 3d.

Table of Points

Oak Park	26½	Deerfield	4½
New Trier	13	Roosevelt	4½
Senn	10	Libertyville	4
Joliet	10	Bowen	3½
Peoria Central	8½	Galesburg	3

Mount Morris	5

Oak Park High school's track team, state champion, won the second annual Oak Park relay carnival last night by scoring 26½ points at the Oak Park fieldhouse. Second to the villagers was New Trier of Winnetka with 13. Joliet and Senn tied for third place with 10 points. Peoria Central finished fifth with 8½ points.

Leading Oak Park to victory over 40 of the outstanding squads of northern and central Illinois were Randall Herman, the national 100 yard dash champion, and Phil Burling, co-holder of the fieldhouse 50 yard record.

Five Records Cracked.

Five meet records were broken and two marks were tied in the finals. The first record to fall was the 50 yard dash event, which was won by George Quinlan, star sprinter of New Trier. Quinlan covered the distance in 5.5, better his own record of 5.6 which he established last year.

Quinlan, one of the leading sprinters in the state, in winning the 50 yard dash, defeated Phil Burling of Oak Park by several inches. Herman was third. Bobe Grieves of Glenbard took fourth place, and Trakes of Austin was fifth.

Oak Park finished second in the sprint medley relay, which was won by Maine of Des Plaines. Oak Park was disqualified when John Johnston dropped the baton after receiving it from Burling. Englewood was moved to second and Schurz took third place.

Morrie Beltzener of Joliet soared 12 feet to establish a new mark in the pole vault. The former mark was 11 feet 6 inches, set by Romeis of Elgin last year.

Eight Lap Record Falls.

The eight lap relay record tumbled when New Trier's squad, composed of Wanger, Weinsteck, Pavlincek and Quinlan, finished in the time of 3:08.1. Trailing them was Oak Park and Galesburg.

Freddie Pollard, Senn's Negro hurdler, who led the team to the Chicago Public High School league championship two weeks ago, broke the 60 yard high hurdles record and tied the 60 yard low hurdles mark. Pollard competed in the 60 yard events for the first time in his career.

HEH-HEH! JUST AS IF YOU COULD DISGUISE UMPIRE!

The Boys Will Report Early to Catch Gamblers.

1,041 Straight

LOU GEHRIG, first baseman for the New York Yankees, will start the 1932 season with a record of having played in 1,041 consecutive games. He started June 1, 1925, and has been in the Yankees' lineup every playing day since. Everett Scott holds the record with 1,307. Joe Sewell is second with 1,103, and Gehrig ranks third.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Little Rock, Ark., April 2.—There is a feeling among ball players that the major league officials did not go quite far enough when they ruled that in 1932 umpires must be on the job at ball parks one hour before game time.

The purpose of this early arrival, as you perhaps know, will be to give the umpires an opportunity to enforce the rule against players communicating with spectators.

The players, or some of them, argue that if the umpires appear in the stands wearing their misfit blue serge suits and their funny caps they readily can be spotted by all culprits, and their police efforts, as a consequence, will be thwarted.

How Can You Disguise Umpire?

It is the belief of some who have studied the problem that the umpires should be disguised as peanut venders, pop bottle openers, cushion purveyors, and assistant groundkeepers. This, the players admit, would throw players in an uproar, giving them no idea as to a way to communicate with their friends.

Players to whom we have talked on the subject have certain subterfuge jobs picked out for favorite umpires, but we are no trouble maker, and will not dwell on this matter here.

The reason for the rule forbidding players from conversing with spectators is sound in its ideal conception. It is said that one of the prime purposes of the regulation is to prevent gamblers from obtaining club secrets pertaining to the starting pitchers, the way they warm up, and other dope which bettors consider more or less essential to their success.

There's Work to Do, Lads.

A matter of secondary interest is that the players have plenty they can do before game time other than chatting with persons in the stand. If they are not actually engaged in the pre-game practice it is deemed advisable that they study the actions of the batters in the batting practice of the opposing team, etc., etc.

Another element has been vested in the thought that the players themselves will be spared some annoyance if the ruling rigidly is enforced. It has been our personal observation, however, that such sought after stars as Babe Ruth, Hack Wilson, and other autograph experts rarely have shown any irritation at the clamor for their penmanship, or because of enthusiastic salutations from fans designed to bring an acknowledging pleasantry from the players.

Returning to the first reason for the rule we may say that we have known few players who had any commerce with gamblers in the matter of pregame tips. The only one we know of positively was shunted to the minors when caught disseminating bull pen information. And he was not caught by an umpire in disguise, but by a fellow player.

Signals Would Be Easy.

Supposing there are a few who would chat with gamblers were the rule against communication not in effect, does it not follow as obvious that a semaphore system might reasonably be arranged which would fool even the most lynx eyed umpire-policeman?

Baseball is built around a lot of sly signals, and there is not a player in the majors who could not devise a code which would serve as effectively as the spoken word.

But it's a matter that shouldn't cause you to lose sleep if you are not a gambler. Surely you can put in your time better than you would if you consumed minutes asking a ballplayer, "How's every little thing?" or requesting him to put his name in your albums.

Milwaukee on Top in A.B.C. with 3,101

Detroit, Mich., April 2.—[Special.]—Scoring games of 1,040, 1,054 and 1,007, the Verifine Ice Cream of Milwaukee shot into the lead in the five man event of the American Bowling Congress tournament here tonight with a 3,101 series. The count has been good enough to win 29 national meets and should win here.

Hank Marino, former Chicago star, helped to put the Milwaukee lineup in front. He opened with 188, but shot 235 in the second game. Then, with his teammates, aside from Billy Sixty, faltering, Marino hung up seven consecutive strikes and a 245 game.

Eight of the twelve Chicago teams carded came up with totals which will qualify in the prize division. Idle Hours topped the Windy City lineups with 2,897. Close behind were the Baby Ruths of the Randolph league with 2,892.

Primo Carnera Pays Back U. S. Gold in Raspberries

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 2.—Listen to Primo Carnera broadcasting for nearly a column's worth on the front page of the London Evening News, which has the largest afternoon circulation in the whole of Great Britain and one of the biggest in the world.

He is discussing his adventures in America [where, incidentally, he made a good many thousand of dollars] and apparently talks without prompting, for the quotations run uninterrupted for several hundred words.

"It is the strangest country in the world," he said. "I have many friends there and many among the racketeers who consider themselves my dependents"—he shrugged his shoulders—"it is simply ununderstandable, my friend.

"A man stopped me one day in the street in New York and asked me for a thousand dollars. I told him I didn't even know him.

"'You give me a thousand bucks or I sue you,' he said quite calmly. I told him to go and join his friends.

"All right, but the next day I got a writ. The next day I was in court. I had to pay the thousand dollars! Would you believe it? He produced some witnesses to say that I owed him this money, although I never had seen or heard of him in my life. And I had to pay!

And Yarn No. 2.

"It is a wonderful country. Some of those racketeer promoters over there would like to get hold of me because they would make money with me. They want to get me away from Mr. See. He is father and mother to me. I would not think of leaving him.

"One day some ugly fellows came into our hotel in Chicago. They told Mr. See they wanted to get me under their management. He laughed. Then they said, 'Listen, life is sometimes awful short in this town.' Mr. See nodded sympathetically. 'Folks sometimes are alive in the morning and dead at night.'

"The man touched his pocket, in which, of course, there was a gun.

"Mr. See shrugged his shoulders and said quite quietly: 'Listen, my friends. I was in the war from beginning to end. I should have been killed about six times. I wasn't. All right then, every day I have lived since really does not belong to me. I should be dead. But I am alive fourteen years after I should be dead. So, you see, I cannot lose. If I die today, I am still fourteen years to the good. What do I care, therefore, when I die? Go away. You cannot frighten me.'

"They went away. That sounds like romance, doesn't it? It is true."

Here Comes No. 3.

Here the interviewer interjects that Carnera's smile was eloquent.

"Another time I had finished a fight," Carnera resumed. "I had won. I tried to clear the people out of my dressing room so that I could dress. All went except two. They told me they were detectives who had come to arrest me because some one was suing me for money.

PRIMO CARNERA.

"I had never been in the town before. I told them I had killed nobody. I had robbed nobody ever, so I refused to go to jail. I gave them permission to sleep outside my door at the hotel if they liked, but I would not go to jail and it would take more than those two to get me there. Eventually they agreed and, in the courts next day, I was able to prove I had never even dreamt of the man who was suing me.

"It is incredible—I like that word, incredible, good word.

Well, Well and Well!

"They even planted pretty girls in little vaudeville acts in which I played so that they could afterwards sue me for breach of promise or something like that. They tried to maneuver things so that I was in a room with them for even half a minute, and then have some confederate come along and start the trouble.

"If Mr. See was not an old hand at this game I should be in so much trouble now that I should be dead."

Fan Must Pay Tax, Baseball Magnates Say

New York, April 2.—[U. P.]—Baseball fans will bear the burden of the 10 per cent tax on admission tickets if the revenue measure now before congress is adopted, it was indicated today.

Club officials pointed out the bill provides that the tax be passed on to the ticket purchaser.

Sam Watters, vice president of the Pittsburgh Pirates, said his club "couldn't do anything but follow the stipulation of the government if the tax is passed. The bill specifies that the tax is to be paid by the public and must be added to the admission price."

Sidney Weil, president of the Cincinnati Reds, said the public will have to pay the tax even if the bill should be amended to allow absorption of the tax by the club.

10 Per Cent Too Much.

"A tax of 10 per cent would mean more than the clubs can carry," Weil said. "A 10 per cent cut off what some clubs take in would be more than some clubs make in a season."

Both Frank Navin, owner of the Detroit Tigers, and Alva Bradley of the Cleveland Indians asserted that major league club owners already have agreed to pass the tax on to the public. Of course, none of the clubs enjoy the prospect of taxation. One club especially opposed to the measure is the Chicago White Sox.

Jerry Nugent, Phillies club secretary, said officials of his club have not discussed the tax but that "the only salvation would be to pass it on to the customers as our club can't operate on less revenue."

Cards to Boost Prices.

While the tax bill may require that the tax be charged, the clubs could absorb the taxes by lowering admission prices. For example, a club that charged $1 per ticket could establish a price of 90 cents, and a ticket with a 10 per cent tax would cost 99 cents.

St. Louis fans will pay the tax if the bill is passed.

Phil Ball, St. Louis Browns owner, said that "we are loaded down now until our backs are broken—we'll have to pass the tax on to the customers."

HAIER CAPTURES STATE FENCING CHAMPIONSHIP

Otto C. Haier, Oscar Barab, and Howard Plaut qualified for the national fencing meet by winning places in the foils championships of the Illinois Fencers' league yesterday afternoon at Bartlett gymnasium.

The final round resulted in a triple tie for first place. Then Haier defeated Barab, 5-3, and Plaut, 5-2, to break the tie and win the Illinois championship. Barab defeated Plaut, 5-4, to win second place. Haier and Barab are from the National Fencing academy and Plaut is from the Franco-American National Academy of Fencing.

The Illinois division epee and saber championships will be held next Saturday afternoon at the National Fencing academy, 3403 North Halsted street.

Cards Made Even Money Choice to Repeat, Macks, 6-5

New York, April 2.—[U. P.]—Jack Doyle, Broadway's leading betting commissioner, rates the Philadelphia Athletics better than even money to retain the American league championship. He regards the St. Louis Cardinals as an even chance to repeat and will pay $1,000 on a $1 bet if the Cincinnati Reds or the Chicago White Sox win.

Doyle's odds, in many respects, agree with those already announced. But in some ways they differ widely. The Yankees are the second choice in the American league, held at 9 to 5. The New York Giants, the second choice in the National league, are 5 to 2.

Washington's Senators and the Chicago Cubs are the third place selections, each at 3 to 1. Cleveland, at 12 to 1, is the fourth place bet in the American league, and Brooklyn, at 30 to 1, in the National.

Doyle's figures are:

AMERICAN.	First.	Second.	Third.

U. OF C. FACULTY, FORT SHERIDAN WIN POLO GAMES

The University of Chicago faculty polo trio won its first game in the round robin tournament for the Maj. Gen. Frank Parker trophy last night by defeating the 124th Remount association, 6½ to 6, at the 124th Field Artillery armory.

In the second game Capt. Bronson led the Fort Sheridan trio to an 8½ to 8 triumph over the 122d Field Artillery by scoring four goals.

Cubs' Errors Help Pirates Win, 8 to 4

Lloyd Waner doubled to left, sending in Thevenow and Finney. Paul Waner was hit by a pitched ball and followed his brother across the plate on a fluke triple by Comorosky. Stephenson thought the ball was going over the fence, so didn't start back for it until too late.

There's Life in the Boys Yet.

Cuyler opened the Cubs' half of the sixth with a single. Brame walked Barton and Stephenson singled to center. This scored Cuyler and put Barton on third. Jurges forced Stephenson, Barton scoring. H. Taylor lined a single into center and Jurges went to third, whence he scored on Zack Taylor's long fly. Gudat, in the rôle of pinch batter for Smith, then delivered a hit, but Hack was unable to prolong the rally.

Tinning's two innings of work were marked by a Pirate run in the eighth. Finney led off with a hit and scored eventually on Lloyd Waner's fourth safety. The Cubs picked up one off Spencer in the ninth on Herman's double and a couple of outs.

INDIANA STARS WIN 5 EVENTS IN ARMOUR RELAYS

Brocksmith Outdistances Mile Field in 4:14.1.

Indiana's team of Big Ten champions closed the indoor track season and the most successful track season in its history last night at the University of Chicago fieldhouse by dominating the Armour Institute relay carnival. A crowd of 3,000, the largest turnout for an indoor meet in several Chicago seasons, watched the Hoosiers perform against representatives of 26 other central western colleges and universities.

Though no team points were recorded, Indiana won five of the 13 events in which university athletes competed and placed in five others. Illinois State Normal, Little Nineteen champion, led the field in the college events.

Hornbostel Sets Record.

Henry Brocksmith, Indiana distance star who clipped eleven seconds off the conference mile mark three weeks ago, provided the best race of the evening with a 4:14.1 mile, one and one-sixth seconds slower than his Big Ten record. Brocksmith was handicapped with a slight cold, but finished 60 yards ahead of the second place man, Popejoy of Purdue.

Chuck Hornbostel, Indiana's 880 champion, bettered the time he made in the conference meet by running the half mile in 1:56.8.

Records were also broken in the 440, high jump, and one mile relay. Indiana captured the university one mile relay in 3:25.1, won the new university two mile relay event and placed second in the new university distance medley.

Of the three relay races for colleges, Illinois Normal won the mile and the half mile and placed second in the two mile. The Teachers' two mile team of Bremmer, Wallace, Fricke, and Hutton took second in the university two mile race and repeated in the college class 15 minutes later. Murray, Mitts, Johnson, and Nicol were the winning Normal combination in the mile and 880 races.

Brooks Wins Hurdles.

Largely on the performance by John Brooks, colored sophomore star, Chicago made the next strongest showing. Brooks placed third in the 70 yard dash, won the broad jump at 23 feet 10¾ inches, and then led the low hurdles over 70 yards, an unusual distance for the small bariers, in :07.6.

Capt. Bill McCormick, Notre Dame, won the 70 yard dash in the excellent time of :07.2. Ray Burns of Butler beat Norm Heyne of Northwestern and Ivan Fuqua of Indiana, by a yard in the quarter mile, finishing in :50.4.

PHAR LAP PROVES BLOOD WILL TELL IN TURF BATTLES

He's from Family with That Victory Habit.

THE ten leading money winners in the history of racing, with amounts won, follow:

Sun Beau	$376,744	†Donovan	$277,215

*Australian. †English. Others Americans.

BY FRENCH LANE.

There doesn't seem to be anything wrong with Phar Lap, the Australian turf champion, so far as blood lines are concerned.

Ever since he won the $50,000 Agua Caliente handicap and became a most dangerous threat to top Sun Beau's world's money winning records, our greatest authorities on pedigrees have been digging deep into the affairs of Phar Lap's family. They have opened the doors leading into the dark closets in the house of Phar Lap and couldn't find even a skeleton to shake or rattle.

So their opinion is that Phar Lap is a blue blooded fellow whose ancestors came from England and that there isn't anything surprising that a horse of his blood lines should amount to something.

His Folks Are O. K.

Phar Lap is a son of Night Raid-Entreaty. They were somebodies, any person who wants to investigate them will find.

Night Raid, bred in 1918, is of the most fashionable English blood, although he was sold in England as a yearling for $800. He couldn't win as a 2 year old, so was put up at auction again in 1920 and sold this time to Peter Keither of Sydney, New South Wales. Then he took the long trip from England to Australia. He stood the trip so well it was good evidence that all members of his family might be good travelers. Phar Lap has surely proved that he is a good traveler.

Not long after Night Raid reached Australia he was put in the stud in New Zealand, and from the beginning his sons and daughters became noted on the turf of Australia.

Radium Is Phar Lap's Granddad.

Night Raid's daddy was Radium, and Radium was the best staying son of the famous Bend Or. The only noted distance races in England he failed to win were the Ascot Cup, in which he finished second to The White Knight, and the Coronation Cup, in which The White Knight gave him another trimming.

Entreaty, the mother of Phar Lap, also traces back to England. She is a daughter of Winkle. The latter was a son of William the Third, out of Conjure, one of the two foundation mares of Lord Astor's famous Cliveden stud.

Pilgrim's Progress, a son of the noted Isonomy, was the daddy of Prayer Wheel, the maternal granddam of Phar Lap. Pilgrim's Progress won the Royal plate and was closely related to some of the finest thoroughbreds England has ever produced.

Has a New Brother.

St. Simon's blood runs through Phar Lap's veins and there is a double cross of Musket in his pedigree through Spearmint and through Maxim, one in the upper and the other in the lower half of his pedigree.

Entreaty now has at her side a suckling colt which is a full brother to Phar Lap. There is a full sister to him now racing in Australia.

A yearling full brother to Phar Lap was sold in Australia in January and has been shipped to Ceylon, an island off the tip end of India.

JERRY JONES IS NAMED COLUMBIA COLLEGE COACH

Dubuque, Ia., April 2.—[Special.]—Jerry Jones of Tulsa, Okla., a Columbia alumnus, was appointed head football, basketball, and track coach at Columbia college here today. He succeeds Johnny Armstrong, who resigned Feb. 18.

During the last year Jones has been line coach and instructor in physical education.

Jones played guard on the undefeated Columbia eleven, coached by Gus Dorais, now at the University of Detroit, in 1916. He is considered one of the best line men Columbia ever produced. He also played at Notre Dame, where he was a teammate of Jimmy Phelan, University of Washington coach, and Charley Bachman of the University of Florida.

Jones was a member of the Great Lakes Naval Training station team which won the service championship in 1918. He has played professional football with the old Chicago Hammonds, the Canton Bull Dogs, the Rock Island Independents, and other teams. He has served as line coach at Xavier university, Cincinnati, O., and at the University of Missouri. He was head baseball coach at Missouri in 1922.

BOELTER SIGNS AS ASSISTANT TO SOLEM AT IOWA

Iowa City, Ia., April 2.—(AP)—The same coaching combination that enjoyed success at Drake university was assured for the University of Iowa today with the signing of Bill Boelter as assistant to Ossie Solem.

Boelter was Solem's assistant in drilling the Drake teams the last few years and in addition handled the basketball squad. Boelter's appointment is effective Sept. 1.

WRESTLERS OF 3 STATES ENTER A. A. U. TOURNEY

The first day's returns of entry blanks for the Central Amateur Athletic Union wrestling meet, Friday and Saturday at the Interfraternity club, 106 South Wabash avenue, shows interest in the event on the part of playground, Y. M. C. A. and college wrestlers in Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

The Franklin park playground sent in four entries. They are: Mandy Cross in the 115 pound class, who has held the west park championship for three years; Sam Garbell, west park champion in the 152 pound class last year; Joe Lieberman, runner up in the 1924 Olympic trials in the 158 pound class, and Central A. A. U. champion in the same weight in 1930, and Walter Maurer, 1920 Olympic champion at 158 pounds, will compete this year at 181 pounds.

Roy Willigeutti of Green Bay, Rolf A. Udshien of Kenosha, and Kenneth W. Brown of Eau Claire are Wisconsin entries.

Julius Rosenbloom of the Unemployed Shelter in Chicago sent in his entry in the 145 pound class.

The south park commissioners have indicated that they will pay the entry fee of boys in the south park, and coaches at the Universities of Chicago, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Northwestern and Illinois are planning to enter men in the meet.

And Was He Full of Hops? No Toad Could Catch Him

Palm Springs, Cal., April 2.—[U. P.]—Champions and favorites of the toad racing world were in disgrace today, eclipsed by the feat of Yellow Gold, a dark outsider which scurried across the finish line yesterday to win the international horned toad Derby before a distinguished gathering.

The fickle favorites such as Arizona Bill, entered by Gov. George Hunt of Arizona, and Sunshine Ike, entry of Gov. James Rolph Jr. of California, failed to place in the qualifying heats.

Yellow Gold, entry of George F. Mieding of Los Angeles, nearly lost the race a foot from the finish line when he stopped a moment for breath.

The audience of more than 500 included film notables, society folk and the governors of California, Arizona, Sonora, Mexico, and Baja California, Mexico.

FULLER AGREES TO BOX BERG IN N. Y. MAY 9 OR 13

New York, April 2.—[Special.]—A 12 round return match between Jack [Kid] Berg and Sammy Fuller is planned May 9 or 13, the first available dates after the circus in Madison Square Garden. Dan Carroll, manager of Fuller, has already agreed, and Sol Gold's consent for Berg is regarded as a formality.

They drew $26,000 net when they fought a draw last night. The arguments and disagreements which followed the bout are the best selling points for a return match, and Jimmy Johnston expects their next meeting to attract between $40,000 and $50,000.

INDIANA PREPS DRILL.

South Bend, Ind., April 2.—[Special.]—St. Hedwige's Football team held its first spring workout today under the direction of its new coach, Caesar Janesheski, a director of physical education at Notre Dame.

Air Pilot Sets Track Record in Bowie Win

Bowie, Md., April 2.—[Special.]—Air Pilot, second last year in the Breeders' futurity at Churchill Downs, and an eligible for the Kentucky Derby on May 7, made an impressive 3 year old debut here today when he captured the Capitol handicap from eight other smart 3 year olds in time that set a new track record.

Bearing the colors of the Mereworth Stud, which is the name of Walter J. Salmon's Kentucky farm, the son of Swift and Sure and Snowcapt was timed in 1:01 flat for the five furlongs, lowering by a fifth of a second the mark set in 1914 by J. B. Harrell, a 2 year old running under 104 pounds.

Track Not in Best Condition.

Air Pilot had up 110 pounds. The performance was the more impressive in view of the condition of the track which, while drying out after recent rains, still was far from being at its fastest. The Salmon colt also is an eligible for the Preakness, which will be contested at Pimlico on May 14.

The result was a surprise to many in the big crowd and the winner returned $20.90 for $2 when he drove home by three-quarters of a length over William Jeigler Jr.'s Phantom Legion, another long shot. Mexico, owned by the Maryland breeder, Sylvester W. Labrot, got third, a length back of Phanton Legion.

Indian Runner Is Seventh.

Backed into favoritism was Hal Price Headley's Indian Runner, which in his last previous start ran second to Top Flight in the Saratoga Special at Saratoga Springs. Indian Runner is by Dis Dono, as is Top Flight, and is considered by many to be a dark horse for the Derby, but he finished seventh today after being pinched back in the early stages.

The order of finish after the placed horses was Indicative, Portam, Regula Baddun, Indian Runner, Late Date, and Snobfut. Jockey A. Robertson was the winning rider, and he scored a double on the day, having piloted Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's Hell Diver home first in the Aspirant Purse, the juvenile test, which was second on the program.

MACCABEES TO PLAY OLYMPIA ELEVEN TODAY

Two games that have an important bearing on the championship of the National Soccer League of Chicago will be played today. The Maccabee All Stars meet the Olympias at 47th avenue and 19th street, and the Jugo-Slavs tackle Sparta at Sparta field, 21st street and Kostner avenue. Sparta is leading the league.

George Coughbrough, a former Chicagoan who played for the famous Glasgow Rangers, Scottish champions, will be in the lineup for the Maccabees, replacing Alec Smith, who left for Scotland last week. Coughbrough is a forward. Frank Keberle, center who scored three goals last Sunday, will lead the Olympias.

Two players who learned their soccer in Scotland will operate on the right wing for Sparta, J. B. Smith and Jimmy Gallaher. Chris Brock will play center for the Jugo-Slavs. Brock is a goalie, but he hasn't much chance of displacing Louis Pagiliari, the Italian who has been performing so well for the Jugos since coming to Chicago from South America.

LIGHT HEAVIES AWAIT CALL TO MAT TOURNEY

2:15 p. m.—Perez, south division, vs. Loyola-Hyde Park, south division.
3:15—Lafayette, central division, vs. Hennepin-Shields, west division.
4:15—Santa Maria, south end division, vs. Madonna, central division.
5:15—Damen, west division, vs. Quigley, central division.

Eight survivors in the struggle for the Knights of Columbus basketball league championship will pair off this afternoon in the quarter final round at the 132d Regiment armory, Madison and Rockwell streets.

Three clubs representing the central division, two from the south, two from the west and one from the south end remain in the running. Today's four winners will play in the semifinals Thursday night at the armory, with the losers playing in the consolation bracket.

South Division Rivals Clash.

Each of the four games today promises to bring out good basketball. The opening contest, in which the two south division survivors hook up, is expected to be one of the most thrilling. The teams, Perez and Loyola-Hyde Park, met a week ago to decide a tie for the south division title. Loyola-Hyde Park won by one point.

Hennepin-Shields, a former league champion, meets Lafayette in the second game, which will be a duel between Tom Cunningham of Hennepin, one of the league's leading scorers, and Ted Chmielewski of Lafayette, former guard at Wisconsin.

Santa Maria and Madonna, two of the dark horses of the final round, meet in the third game. Both are divisional champions, the former of the south end and the latter of the central.

Damen Makes First Start.

The 5:15 o'clock game will mark the first start of Damen, the defending champion. The titleholders have a real task ahead of them to stay in the running, their opponent being the Quigley club, which provided the big upset of the first round by defeating the powerful St. Cyr club. Damen has a veteran team, which fought its way to the west division flag this season, and with Barak, Jesen, Doody, Kluchinskas and Budrick in its lineup, is counted on to make a real fight to repeat.

JOHN MORRILL, BASEBALL STAR OF '80S, IS DEAD

Boston, Mass., April 2.—(AP)—John Morrill, 77 years old, manager and first baseman of the old Boston Nationals when they won the pennant in 1883, died today. He resigned last November as manager and treasurer of a Boston sporting goods firm. Morrill had been ill ten days with pneumonia.

Morrill started playing baseball at the age of 19 with a local amateur team. He played every position on the diamond. To hundreds he was affectionately known as Honest John. He was one of the last barehanded catchers, and made a reputation for himself in that position.

In 1889 Morrill became manager of the Washington team, but resigned after a few months. For a time he wrote sports for the old Boston Journal and later opened a sporting goods store. He was chairman of the New England Senior Golf association.

Morrill leaves a widow and four daughters.

ASK EXPLANATION ON EXPULSION OF COLUMBIA EDITOR

New York, April 2.—(AP)—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, will be asked for an explanation of the expulsion from the university of Reed Harris, senior and editor of the Columbia Spectator, the publication's managing board announced today.

The full staff of 60 members will meet Monday to decide their attitude in the situation.

Reed, who was threatened with disciplinary action last November when he charged in an editorial that football at the university was a "semi-professional racket," now says he was expelled by the dean last night without an opportunity to be heard in his own defense.

The notice of expulsion said material published in the Spectator during the last few days "is the climax of a long series of discourtesies, innuendoes and misrepresentations which have appeared in this paper during the current academic year and called for disciplinary action."

Navy Gymnasts Capture Eastern Collegiate Title

Annapolis, Md., April 2.—[U. P.]—Outclassing the field in every event except tumbling, naval academy gymnasts today won six of the seven eastern intercollegiate gymnasium association championships. Curtze of Navy, won the all around championship, leading his nearest competitor, Shotzbarger of Springfield, by a wide margin. Shotzbarger nosed out Jukes, Navy captain, for the tumbling championship.

Urges Dunes Relief Road as Memorial

BY HAL FOUST.

The American Legion of Chesterton, Ind., is proposing that the Dunes relief road become a memorial to the war dead of Indiana. The new forty foot pavement from the Michigan line, around Michigan City to Gary, would be landscaped with trees and shrubbery, marked with appropriate bronze tablets, and named the "Hoosier Memorial highway."

The relief road, costing approximately $1,000,000, will be completed this year with the construction of three railroad grade separations. The landscaping could likewise be done this summer so that motorists from the east en route to the World's Fair next year could fully enjoy the beauty as well as the utility of a modern superhighway.

Detours Not Good.

The new highway is now open to travel by using three detours. However, the Chicago Motor club recommends that traffic remain on the old, narrow, and rough Dunes highway because the detours are in poor condition.

THE TRIBUNE scout car recently traveled the new route. It's a scenic drive. The broad pavement swings on a wide right of way through wooded hills and across brown meadows typical of the dunes country.

The roadside is free of billboards, hot dog stands, and other such eye sores that blot the scenery on almost all of the main highways of Chicagoland. It's worth the trip just to see what a clean landscape looks like. It's a decided contrast to the slums that invest several places along the old dunes road.

Finished Job Being Done.

The Indiana highway department is doing a finished job with this road. The dirt shoulders are broad enough for safe parking to repair a tire. At the edge of the concrete is a strip of gravel bound with asphalt so that a machine forced off the pavement will not be tossed into a ditch.

Just south of the Dunes state park is a grade separation with Ind. 49. There is another two level intersection just west of Michigan City, the crossing of the new road with the old U. S. 20, the Michigan City-South Bend highway. These structures are designed to separate turning traffic as well as the cross movements.

This superhighway is destined to become the most important traffic artery of Chicagoland. It connects Chicago with the resort areas of Michigan and northern Indiana. It connects Chicago with the populous cities of the east.

Legion Posts to Give Trees.

The American Legion plans that the new road should also become the most beautiful in Chicagoland. A good beginning has been made in the engineering of the highway.

"Our plan," said Royal Atkinson, past commander of the Chesterton post, "is for each of the 10,000 Legion posts in the United States to donate a tree for the memorial. The local post will furnish the labor in the planting. The Chicago Regional Planning association has offered the services of a landscape architect.

"We hope that the Indiana highway department will accept our suggestion."

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

ONE EYED AUTOS.

Chicago, March 31.—There have been a number of items in your paper recently regarding the operation of automobiles with only one headlight. While driving on the outer drive recently from 11th street through Jackson park I noticed a great number of one headlight cars and by actual count in the one-half mile from the bridge at the southwestern corner of the yacht harbor at Jackson park to 69th street and South Shore drive I passed seven of these "one headlight cars."

Is it not true that because of the present depression the police department do not wish to put automobile owners to additional expense for what they may consider a minor infraction of the law, but which, however, is a very dangerous one?

To meet this condition and to correct it at a minimum cost to the offender I want to suggest the following procedure: The officer should give to the person found operating without the proper lights a special ticket returnable at the station from which the officer operates, which should order the offender to appear within twenty-four hours at said station with all legal lights in proper order for inspection by some one designated at that station. If report is not made within twenty-four hours a summons could be issued in the regular way for appearance in court.

I know that a special ordinance would be required for such a procedure, but I believe that with the present depression the aldermen will realize the necessity for such enactment and that such an ordinance will be passed with a minimum of resistance at this time.

Will you please use your best efforts to secure enactment of such an ordinance? HARRY VESTED.

1931 LICENSES IN GARY.

Chicago, March 31.—I read your article about 1931 licenses in Indiana and that they are arresting Illinois motorists for still having them. I would like to see this printed and sent to them.

I was in Gary, Ind., recently with a friend and we saw the city trucks with 1931 Indiana plates on. They were truck No. 1, license No. 4981; truck No. 8, license No. 5059; another city truck, license No. 5062. C. HAZZARD.

NEWS AND VIEWS

This is to be a week of strenuous effort on the part of the automobile industry to break the buyers' strike.

General Motors this week has a special exhibit at the Merchandise mart, Wells street and the river, drawing crowds with famous orchestras, intensive advertising and generous prizes.

Walter P. Chrysler today announces the new Plymouth with a longer wheel base, 65 horse power engine, floating power, free wheeling, automatic clutch, easy shift, silent second transmission, hydraulic brakes, steel body, and a rigid-X double drop frame. It is designed to compete with Henry Ford.

The new Fords, a V-eight and a four cylinder model, were introduced last week with the improved four selling $40 cheaper than the old models and with the V-eights selling at $50 more than the new fours. The entire industry expects to benefit by this presentation since many motorists were postponing replacements until they could see the latest product from Fort Dearborn, Mich.

General Motors' low price cars, the Chevrolet and the Pontiac six, announced price cuts. The reduction on the Chevrolet ranged from $55 to $10 and on the Pontiac from $50 to $30. The new base price of the Chevrolet is $445 f. o. b. Detroit.

Hupmobile today is slashing the prices on its six cylinder jobs. The cuts are as high as $280.

Studebaker is conducting a "Call of the Open Road Week" with a slogan "A New Car Is a Badge of Honor." Roy Faulkner, vice president of Studebaker sales, believes that a new car owner should be proud that he has contributed to the return of normal economic conditions through the purchase of an automobile.

Auburn is concentrating on the promotion of its exclusive dual-ratio rear axle, demonstrating its quick acceleration in the lower gear ratio and its speed and economy in the higher ratio.

CLINKSTOCK AND SZNOSKY SIGN FOR KRONE SHOW

Jim Clinkstock, Oklahoma Indian, will meet Steve Sznosky, youthful Polish star, in one of the matches on Promoter Doc Krone's heavyweight wrestling championship card at the Coliseum the night of April 11.

The main event will have Jim Londos defending his title against the German, Hans Kampfer.

Clinkstock is one of the biggest men in the game, standing 6 feet 5 inches, and weighing 245 pounds. His body scissors is difficult to break.

Sznosky made his Chicago debut at the last Fronton show when he lost a decision to Pat O'Shocker. This is the third of five matches to be made, the other one being between Kola Kwariani and Frank Bronowicz.

PRO GOLFERS TO PLAY AT ST. PAUL AUG. 30-SEPT. 4

St. Paul, Minn., April 2.—(AP)—The National Professional Golfers' association tournament will be played over the Keller course here, Aug. 30-Sept. 4.

H. K. Miller, chairman of the St. Paul junior association of commerce commission, said the dates were selected today in a conversation with A. R. Gates of Chicago, representing the golfers' organization. The meet was awarded to St. Paul yesterday.

Finals were set for a Sunday to increase attendance, Miller said. Usually dates have been arranged to provide a Saturday windup.

Stuhley Eyes Baima as Ring Victim No. 47

The only professional boxing show in Chicago this week will be held at White City tomorrow night with Young Stuhley of Kewanee, Ill., meeting Johnny Baima of Lawndale in the ten round main event at 156 pounds.

Fans expect Stuhley to whip Baima and go on to bigger matches. The Kewanee youngster has compiled a record of forty-six victories in forty-seven combats, including the eight matches he won in Chicago. He is a natural welterweight, and if he is successful against Baima he will seek a bout with Jackie Fields, welterweight champion. Fields' co-manager, Ray Alvis, said yesterday that he will send Jackie against Stuhley provided the Kewanee boxer defeats two or three topnotchers.

In his last start Stuhley gave away an advantage in weight to Kid Leonard of Moline, Ill., and won.

In the last year no one has been able to solve Stuhley's style. Maybe Baima will. Johnny usually wins when he is expected to lose.

PING-PONG, ONCE MILD PASTIME, BECOMES SPORT

Folks Who Come to Scoff Remain to Play.

BY STEWART OWEN.

Ping-pong has outgrown the dining room table.

After three decades of contention against more ridicule than has been directed against any other genteel sport with the possible exception of tiddledy-winks, the game of table tennis has found its place in the sun—or at least its place in the flood lights.

What skepticism may remain as to its right to be classed among the major sports probably will be promptly dispelled by the announcement that the first national amateur ping-pong tournament will be conducted by the American Ping-pong association at the Waldorf-Astoria in New York on April 15 and 16, with 256 of the best ping-pong players in the country competing. Chicago will be represented by the Interfraternity club team of six members, several of whom already hold championships of varying degrees of importance.

Introduced in 1903.

Although ping-pong apparently has swept the country by storm in the last two years, its development has been anything but sudden. It has been struggling along trying to gain the popular favor since 1903, when it was first introduced as a mild pastime to be played upon the dining room table or any other table that might be available. All that was needed was a net, a ball, and a couple of rackets and the dashing young sportsman of the day was ready to go ahead.

There were no standards of play then. The size of the playing area was restricted only by the size, number of mouths to be fed in the player's household, and the concomitant number of leaves inserted in his dining room table. The game had a vogue for a year or two, comparable to that of miniature golf two years ago, and, perhaps because of the similar lack of standardization of equipment, died out almost as speedily. It may have been possible to find a ping-pong addict somewhere in the years that intervened before the outbreak of the war, just as it may be possible to find a miniature golf player somewhere today, but rate of probability was certainly no greater.

Immediately after the war ping pong was revived in Europe. The game was standardized, uniform equipment was introduced and its development was rapid. In the United States, however, where it had to contend with that popular brand of humor which for many years provided its exponents with hearty guffaws over the terminology and apparel of tennis, its development was backward. It was not until a half dozen years ago that it began to grow into a genuine sport, and even today, despite the numbers who play it, it is not entirely out of the phase through which tennis was going when white trousers were regarded as an infallible sign of foolishness, if not of effeminacy.

Exceeds Tennis in Popularity.

Since its revival in America, however, it has stridden along at a rapid rate and manufacturers of sporting equipment estimate that there are more ping-pong tables in use in Chicago now than there are tennis courts. If their estimate is not unduly overenthusiastic, it is not at all improbable that there are more persons in Chicago engaged in the business of whacking a little white ball into inaccessible corners under odd pieces of furniture than indulge in any other form of athletic or gymnastic activity.

This popularity may be attributed primarily to the ease with which the game may be played. Gentlemen of sedentary dispositions who would shudder at the thought of accoutering themselves in golfing togs or riding breeches and faring forth a distance of several miles for healthful exercise will heave themselves up out of their armchairs and, with no suspicion of what they are letting themselves in for, take up ping pong, motivated largely by the primitive desire to knock things around in which most of our modern games had their inception.

Once the virus gets into the blood there is no saving the ping pong novice; he becomes an addict immediately. It is like eating peanuts; one game, instead of satisfying the desire to do a little knocking, merely stimulates the appetite for more.

It's Painful to Miss.

At first the player probably will be quite proud of himself and satisfied with his ability if he manages to hit the ball. It doesn't matter, really, if he misses it; in fact, the amount of activity involved in the game is in indirect ratio to the ability of the player. The more he misses the ball the more he will find himself doing daily dozens under the buffet, the living room sofa, or in the coal bin, depending upon where his table is located, trying to retrieve the most elusive object ever invented.

Once he has mastered the art of bringing the racket into contact with the ball, he will concentrate on keeping his returns on the table and that is the stage to which most of the modern ping pong players advance, with little ambition to go further. The average ping pong addict feels that he has mastered the game if he is capable of keeping even a small percentage of his returns in the immediate vicinity of his opponent's court, which after all is no mean achievement, when one considers that the regulation ping pong table is only nine feet long and five feet wide, and that the court at which he is aiming is only four and a half feet by five and is guarded by a net whose top edge is 6¾ inches above the table. This net at times seems as insurmountable as the Matterhorn.

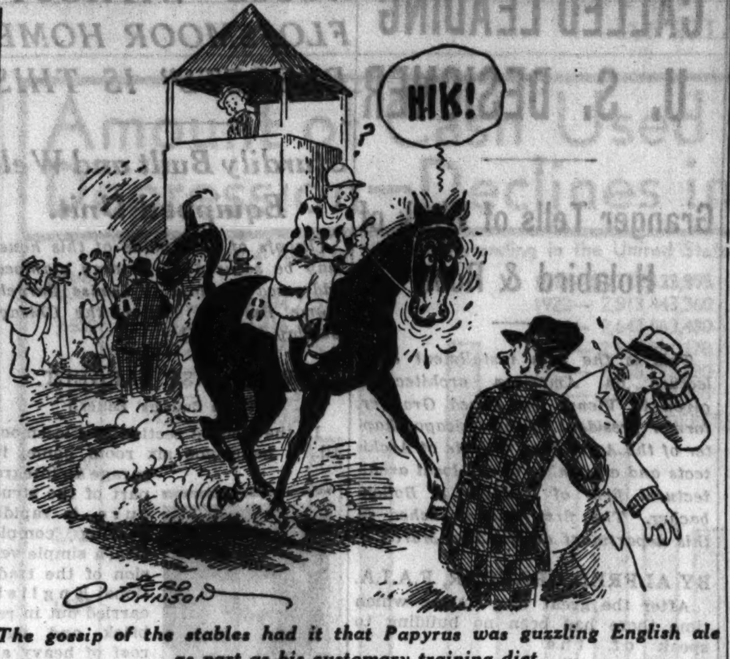
Ruppert and Kenosha Teams Play Tomorrow

Matt Ruppert and Lefty Pecnik of Kenosha will meet in a pitchers' battle tomorrow when the Ruppert All Stars and Kenosha, Wis., clash at the Rainbo Fronton. Ruppert and Pecnik have each won one game by scores of 1 to 0. In a preliminary game the Aragon 400 club will battle the Trianon 400 club for the Joseph H. Donahue trophy.

NOBODY'S BUSINESS—BY WESTBROOK PEGLER



The gossip of the stables had it that Papyrus was guzzling English ale as part as his customary training diet.

NEW YORK, April 2.—Amos W. W. [W. W.] Woodcock, the director of prohibition, has warned the French Olympic officials that their athletes will be accorded no special privileges with respect to the prohibition laws when they come to the U. S. A. next summer to participate in the games at Los Angeles. Marcel Delarbre, the general secretary of the French committee, has said that if the boys are not allowed their ration of wine he will have to file some sort of protest.

Filing protests is one of the dearest privileges of general secretaries of various Olympic committees, and I would not wish to interfere with M. Delarbre's pleasure, but if it is a mere matter of some wine that he has in mind I think he ought to be warned that one of the principal problems of strangers coming to this country under festive conditions is not to obtain a little alcoholic beverage now and again, but to keep sober enough to know what day of the week it is and what week of what year.

Papyrus Brings Over His Own Drinking Supply.

Papyrus, the English horse, when he came over here to run against Zev, was accompanied by large sealed cans of drinking water dished out of his own trough, and I also heard that he brought with him several great balloons of English air to breathe. But a week or so later, while he was in training at Belmont Park, the gossip of the horse barns had it that Papyrus was guzzling English ale as part of his customary training diet, and that either those tanks or those balloons had been filled, not with English water or English air, but with Bass' ale.

At any rate, Papyrus staggered all over the horse track on the afternoon of his race against Zev, his performance summing up very much like the homeward course of the host of honor from a bachelor supper, and came across the finish line sidewise. Some people said he was Sweet Adeline. You may imagine the scandal this caused in the little intimate circle of those who really know what goes on at the horse tracks, a scandal which I may say I never subscribed to because it has always been my belief that if there had been any ale in those cans or those balloons poor old Papyrus would have been the last one to receive any snits or smell or drop of the same, with all those imported and domestic hostlers, swipes, and whatnots hanging around the barn with their tongues drooping like red neckties and their mustache bristles twitching like compass needles at every mention of any such refreshment.

That was in the early days of prohibition, however, and I might say that if Papyrus or one of his progeny were to visit this land this year for a series of races, and required any refreshment for himself and party there would be those who could arrange to pour it all over horse and man with a three inch hose. They would need bring no coals to Newcastle in 1932. I might also say that if M. Delarbre of the French committee seriously means that his young men must have wine next summer, the facilities are now such that they may have to swim their way out of it because, bless us, doesn't he know what happened last spring when the French amateur boxers came over to fight the Golden Gloves champions in Chicago?

Dr. Sebenq Takes a Little Satchel Back to France.

If not, then this is what happened. The good Docteur Sebenq of the French Boxing federation, far from demanding wine for his athletes, was not very long ashore in the U. S. A. before he had to decide on a teetotal policy for his young men in order to save them from the DT'S, so many and urgent were the opportunities to hoist a little wine. There were offers of wine from all sides, and so insistent was this hospitality that an extraordinary thing happened on the night when the French boxing team left Chicago, starting the journey back to France.

There was a large parade on Michigan avenue that evening. The motor cars engaged for the French guests could not get through the jam and, as a desperate resort, it was decided that all the young fighters and Docteur Sebenq would have to walk a half mile from their club to the railroad station, carrying their hand baggage. The boxers were not unwilling to walk, but Docteur Sebenq was a little loath, so I, very jolly and useful in an emergency, offered to shoulder one of his satchels, a vessel the size of an automobile crate, and carry it for him. I carried it the half mile and put Docteur Sebenq aboard his train and as the brakemen yelled their musical cries of "Board" he leaned from his compartment window and said: "That portmanteau, Pegler, that portmanteau is one great joke. It was ver' 'eavy, was it not? Ver' well, then, Pegler. This is the joke. That portmanteau contains a contents of two cases of burgundy which 'ave been present to me by the French citizens of the beautiful Chicago. I shall take her, these wine, back to France with me. I 'ave not the opportunity to drink the wine in America. In America it is all the time 'six ol'-fashion cocktye, make mine the same.' Au revoir, Pegler. Vive Chicago."

Just Step Up, Boys, and Name Your Poison!

Never, may I say to M. Delarbre, in all my experience at athletic meets of international character in this country have I seen any foreign athlete embarrassed by any lack of the wine or stronger medicine to which he was accustomed back home.

At the tennis tournaments there is cognac for the French and Scotch for the English; the European golfers have straddled the dressing benches with the makings before them and a good song ringing clear wherever they have played, and the professional fighters from over the water have been seen to hoist their little drams between rounds without concealment, pretense, or molestation everywhere from California to Bangor.

The European bobbers at the winter Olympics boomed their stein songs in the Cellar A. C. until the light bulbs fluttered in their sockets and the weary little waiter developed shin splint tearing around the tables with foaming replacements and, altogether, unless it is some extra special sort of drink which M. Delarbre demands for the French track and field men in Los Angeles, I should say that they need'nt even ask for it. All they need do is pick up, for it undoubtedly will be set within their hands' reach, and if it is too much trouble to pick it up the Americans, with their hospitable, have-another nature, doubtless will be glad to inject it under the skin with a needle.

Here Is Case Where Password Sounded Like "Vino."

When Dino Grandi, the Italian minister of foreign affairs, came over here last fall there occurred an incident which I think might reassure M. Delarbre of the French Olympic committee, although I am not certain that he is as anxious about his athletes' wine as he is about his own right of protest, which, I repeat, is one of the dearest rights of Olympic officials. It may be remembered that Mr. Grandi was subject to some booing and face-making from the antifascists in the United States, and so one night when a large banquet was being given for him the New York police were very careful indeed to inspect all motor care driving up to the Central Park casino lest some one deliver a satchel of TNT to the distinguished guest. This vigilance was in force when a young man wheeled into the drive and was stopped by a whole group of cautious officials who said, "What have you in there?"

"Only a half dozen cases of wine for the banquet," said the young man in charge.

"Okay," said the captain of the detail. "Drive right in, boy."

So that is how the wine situation is and anything which Mr. Woodcock may tell M. Delarbre to the contrary is told him strictly for the hearing of the W. C. T. U.

URGE ACTION TO STOP RECEIVER RENT SLASHING

Realtors May Ask Aid of Chancellors.

Ther are only seven judges who act as chancellors and can appoint receivers of property in Cook county. They are: Denis E. Sullivan, Robert E. Gentzel, and William J. Lindsay, all judges in the Superior court of Cook county; Philip J. Finnegan, Michael Feinberg, Joseph Burke, and Chief Justice Stanley H. Klarkowski, all judges in the Circuit court of Cook county.

Following the recent statement by Arthur Kruggel, chairman of the board of governors of the renting and management division of the Chicago Real Estate board, that the forcing down of rentals through incompetent or indifferent receivership competition is one of the worst evils realty owners have to face today, the real estate securities committee of the board yesterday adopted resolutions urging definite action by the board of directors to remedy this situation.

Wilbur E. Howett and Edgar N. Greenebaum, members of the committee, compose a subcommittee of two which has drawn up resolutions which have been approved by the securities committee and presented to the board of directors of the Chicago Real Estate board. The latter body will meet this coming week to act on the resolutions. It is understood the directors will approve a plan to act at once.

Mr. Howett's suggested solution to this rent problem is to have the Chicago Real Estate board ask the chancellors [the judges who appoint the receivers] not to approve of any lease by a receiver for less than a fair rental; this to be determined by a responsible real estate firm in the neighborhood without cost.

The resolutions sound the warning that unless such a method is adopted many apartments buildings not now in trouble will soon be placed in foreclosure as a result of cutthroat competition by receivers.

Rap Chancellors and Receivers.

Incidently, the resolutions severely rap both the receivers for their incompetence and the chancellors for playing politics in appointing them. They declare it would be a hard thing to find even one out of ten receivers who knows anything about renting and management. This unfortunate situation is brought about, the resolutions declare, by the appointing of a receiver usually being made a political issue without any attention being paid by the judges as to his qualifications.

The resolutions point out that the Chicago Real Estate board has two important problems at issue, perhaps the two most important problems ever faced by the board in its history, and that if they are dealt with properly and forced to a conclusion, will directly bring about a return of real estate properties to the basis on which they belong. One of these, as stated, is the foreclosure and receivership situation. The other is the proposed adjustment of real estate taxes.

"The first problem relates directly to receivers and their methods of renting and managing apartment buildings," the resolutions read. "It would be very difficult to find one receiver in ten appointed by the chancellors who understands renting and management."

Says Judges Play Politics.

The appointing of a receiver is usually made a political issue, without regard to the qualifications of the man, the result being that the receiver is interested in renting the apartments in the building under his supervision for any amount offered, disregarding entirely operating costs, taxes, interest on the mortgage, value of the property or any other important factor necessary and essential to properties not in trouble.

"The immediate results of the receiver's action is broadcast throughout the neighborhood of the troubled building. The tenants in other buildings are appraised of the fact that they can obtain a four room apartment in the receiver's building at $35 per month, whereas the owners or managers of other buildings not in trouble must receive $45 or more per month for the same apartment in order to just break even.

"Under normal conditions, rents are governed by supply and demand. When there is a surplus supply of apartments, the rents are naturally lower and when there is a shortage, the rents are naturally higher. Under the present situation, we have a surplus of apartments attributed to the fact that many families have doubled up. However, an approximate 15 per cent improvement in unemployment would create a shortage of apartments such as has not been experienced in this city for many years.

Can Be Corrected.

"Untroubled properties should be entitled to receive a fair rental without creating a deficit in the cost of operation and these properties would receive a fair rental even under present conditions, if it were not for the fact that so many apartment properties have been placed in receivership and rented for ridiculous amounts, disregarding entirely any disasterous results which might be reflected and are being reflected on untroubled properties.

"This chaotic condition can be corrected immediately by the Chicago Real Estate board soliciting the cooperation of the chancellors [the judges who appoint the receivers], whereby these chancellors would not approve a lease made by a receiver for less than a fair rental, which rental would be certified to be a responsible real estate firm having their offices in the neighborhood of the building and this service would be rendered free of cost to the chancellors.

"The neighborhood real estate firm would prepare for the chancellors a complete rental schedule for each of the apartments in the troubled building, and the receiver would be compelled, by order of court, to adhere to that schedule.

"This procedure would place the troubled building on a better production basis for the security holders, eliminate the cut throat practices of the receivers, and save untroubled buildings to a large extent from eventual and inevitable foreclosure.

Speedy Action Urged.

"We wish to impress upon you at this time that if such a procedure is not inaugurated immediately, many valuable apartment buildings which are not in trouble at this time will very soon be placed in foreclosure and such a situation can be directly attributed to the present acts of the receivers.

"Our real estate situation will become gradually worse, owners will lose their valuable properties; prospective buyers will lose interest in the purchase of real estate; insurance companies and other lending agencies will back away from first mortgage loans and present security holders will have lost their investments.

"We are not directly criticizing the receivers, but we are criticizing ourselves for not previously getting such a plan before the chancellors for their action, for after all, the chancellors are responsible for the actions of their receivers, and we are firmly convinced that the plan proposed here would receive the sincere cooperation of all the chancellors."

The members of the Real Estate Securities committee are: D. Avery Kimbark, vice president of the realty board in charge of this body; J. Frank Lindsay, chairman; Wilbur E. Howett, Edgar N. Greenebaum, William G. Lodwick, Arthur Kruggel, Paul Caspers, Elmer A. Claar, Cary E. De Butts, Newton C. Farr, Claude Morris, and John G. Wittboldt.

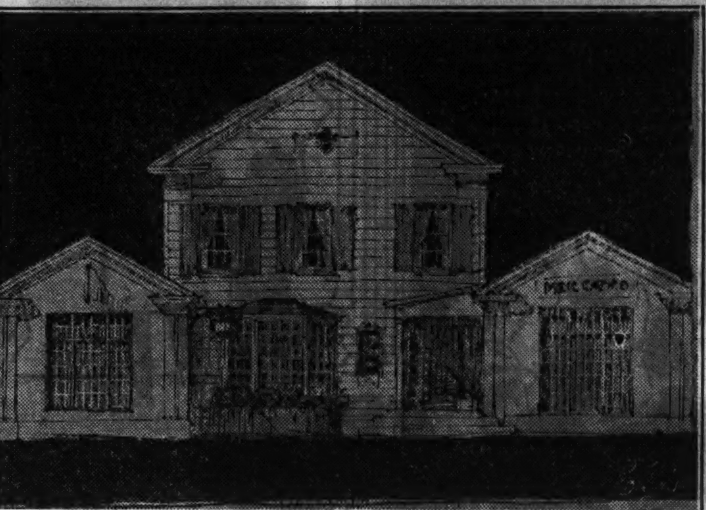
Walker & Angell, Glen Ellyn architects, responsible for many of Du Page county's most attractive residential and business structures, designed the above old English type of structure which R. V. Spalding is erecting at 481-483 North Main street, in Glen Ellyn. Completion is set for May 1. The A. & P. have leased the north half of the main floor for ten years at a graduated rental and will operate a new type of semi-self service, with all metal equipment. It will replace the store directly opposite. The south store will be occupied by the Western United Gas and Electric company. The second floor will contain offices. The building will be of face brick, with variegated slate roof and with all windows of plate glass.

MODERNIZING IN EVANSTON



Allen & Webster are architects of the above remodeling and enlarging of the real estate office of Mrs. Gretta P. Fuller and William J. Pickard, at 1618 Chicago avenue, Evanston. Brick wings, painted white, are being erected on each side of the two story main structure, which is frame. The main unit sets back twenty-five feet from the sidewalk. The wings will extend to the sidewalk, thus making a front court, which the sketch fails to show. More is told in another column of this section.

Earle G. Krumrine Heads New Public Service Realty Trust

EARLE G. KRUMRINE.

Earle G. Krumrine, former president of the Chicago Mortgage Bankers' association, was elected president of the newly formed Public Service Realty trust at its first regular meeting held at its offices in the First National Bank building, it was announced yesterday. Postmaster Arthur C. Lueder and William C. Regelin were elected vice presidents. L. B. Harris is treasurer and Benjamin L. Coolidge, secretary. Nathan Manilow was elected general manager and Niels N. Veirup will be superintendent of buildings and property management.

Mr. Krumrine established his real estate and first mortgage business in 1901 at 112 West Adams street. He is now and for the last thirty-nine years has been mortgage loan representative of the New England Mutual Life Insurance company of Boston. He is a former vice president of the Chicago Real Estate board and was treasurer of the National Association of Real Estate Boards in 1929, 1930, and 1931, and is now serving as a director until 1934.

Vice President Lueder has been postmaster of Chicago since 1921 and was first established in the real estate and mortgage business in 1890.

Vice President Regelin started in the real estate business in 1895, became senior member of Regelin, Jenson & Co., and in 1913 organized the Logan Square Trust and Savings bank, serving as its president until 1916. He then resigned to continue his real estate business, now at 10 South La Salle street.

"Announcement will be made shortly of the properties and bond issues that the board of managers have accepted," said Mr. Krumrine. Other properties have been appraised and investigated to determine the position of the equity owner as well as the bondholder, all with a view to avoid foreclosure and receivership.

"It is planned by efficient management to thaw out and reorganize on a sound basis even properties that were overvalued and overfinanced. The trust is not affiliated with any bond house issuing or that may have issued any mortgage bonds."

MRS. FULLER MAKES HER REALTY OFFICE MORE ATTRACTIVE

Work is under way on an interesting remodeling and extension of the real estate office building of Mrs. Gretta P. Fuller and William J. Pickard, at 1618 Chicago avenue, Evanston, from plans by Maurice Webster of Allen & Webster, Chicago architects. Brick wings are being constructed on each side of the main two story frame building, extending forward 25 feet to the sidewalk. The main structure sets back 25 feet. This will give a front court which next summer will be embellished with small tables and gay colored umbrellas.

The north wing will be used by the Mercatino Italian shop, which will have windows facing on the court. The south wing will be used by Mrs Fuller for her real estate activities. The main two story building is frame and will have a bow window installed just south of the main entrance. The wings, as stated, are brick. Both main structure and wings are painted white. Shutters are green. Completion will be in about thirty days. Brun Reichenbach of Evanston has the general contract.

HOWARD J. HAGER.
[Toloff Photo.]

Active renting this spring is predicted by Howard J. Hagen, vice president of Baird & Warner and manager of that firm's Evanston office at 522 Davis street. He also anticipates that many persons will be seeking quarters at lower rentals rather than asking owners to take further reductions in rentals. A readjustment in the rental outlay will follow curtailment in other lines of expenditure and this curtailment can best be accomplished through movement to less expensive quarters, he believes.

DUBIN RESIDENCE TO BE SHOWN AT HOUSE EXHIBIT

HENRY DUBIN.

For five years the House Beautiful magazine has conducted annual nationwide competitions for the best houses of from six to twelve rooms built recently in the United States. Each year a group of fifty mounts, showing photographs and plans of the best houses selected from the work of leading architects from all parts of the country, are made into a traveling exhibit.

This exhibit of houses selected from the fifth annual small house competition will be shown at the Builders' exchange, Builders' building, from April 4 to 16. It will include a house designed by Henry Dubin of Highland Park and a member of the architectural firm of Dubin & Eisenberg, which was awarded honorable mention.

John Hogan, vice president of the Continental Illinois, represented both parties in yesterday's transaction.

The lessee operates the William Penn and Fort Pitt hotels in Pittsburgh, the Seelbach at Louisville, the Fontenelle hotel at Omaha, and the Alexandria at Los Angeles. The Elms accommodates about 450 guests.

John R. Thompson Co. Rents West Madison Space

The John R. Thompson company has leased the store at 4012 West Madison street, in the Garfield State Bank building, for a fifteen year term at a guaranteed minimum rental and a percentage of gross sales. GILBERT HALL CALLED LEADING U. S. DESIGNER

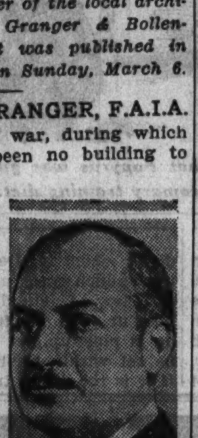
Granger Tells of Work of Holabird & Root.

This is the fifth installment of a lecture on American architecture given in Vienna by Alfred Granger, former president of the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects and a member of the local architectural firm of Granger & Bollenbacher. The first was published in this department on Sunday, March 6.

BY ALFRED GRANGER, F.A.I.A.



GILBERT HALL.

After the great war, during which time there had been no building to speak of, the architects, like every one else, felt a new sense of freedom. Self-expansion for nations and for individuals was the slogan of the day. The architects, some of them at least, determined to break away from the shackles of rigid classicism or flamboyant Gothic. Old traditions of law, of government, of religion were being discarded and thrown aside, building restrictions were revised especially as to the height of buildings—men were free. How best express this freedom?

How different men answered this question can best be shown by the pictures I propose to show you. Goodhue, in his Nebraska capitol, had done away with cornices, why not discard them on all buildings? They were meaningless on buildings over four stories high. When man once begins to eliminate it is astonishing how much he finds he can do without. Freed from the necessity of using established motives and ornamental details, the architects of America began to think logically as the European architects had done for some years before the war.

Calls America Conservative.

While America is regarded in Europe as a nation disregarding law, it is at the same time the most conservative among the nations. It took the American architect a much longer time than it has his European brother to realize that he dared think for himself and create his own art.

Because his country was new and had no centuries of culture to look back upon, he worshiped art with a capital A as something to be reverently handled, treasured but not changed. Clinging to this ideal and yet striving earnestly to meet the demands of an ever changing civilization, he produced buildings which were really absurdities, being neither copies of the old nor yet true expressions of his day.

After the war the American architect felt himself free to think logically. He had been taught, either at the Ecole in Paris or at one of the several very fine architectural schools in his own country, to begin with his plan and let the plan determine the design of his building.

Names the Leaders.

In New York the leaders in this real renaissance were and are Messrs. Voorhees, Gmelin, and Walker, who designed the Telephone building and the Irving Trust bank at No. 1 Wall street; Arthur Loomis Harmon, designer of the Shelton hotel and co-designer with Shreve and Lamb of the eighty-five story Empire State building; Raymond Hood, designer of the famous Tribune Tower in Chicago and the American Radiator building in New York; Cass Gilbert, whose New York Life Insurance building and Woolworth building are as well known as Notre Dame cathedral; John Mead Howells, who did the Panhellenic tower and who was Mr. Hood's associate on the Tribune Tower; Albert Kahn in Detroit, Benes & Hubbell in Cleveland, Mauran Russell & Crowell in St. Louis, Bliss & Faville in San Francisco, and Holabird & Root in Chicago.

I mention this firm from my own city last because I have more to say of them. I have spoken of the firm of Holabird & Roche as designers of the Tacoma building, the second steel frame building ever built, and also of the great firm of Burnham & Root.

Says Hall Is Leader.

The partners in the firm of Holabird & Root are the sons of Col. Holabird of the older firm and of John Root of Burnham & Root. They have built up an organization of very able men, chief of whom is Gilbert Hall, who, to my mind, is the most brilliant designer of tall buildings in America.

The output from this office in the last ten years has been tremendous. I consider their Daily News building on the banks of the Chicago river the most classic modern building in America, and I use the term classic purposely because the distinctive characteristics of the so-called "moderne" style both in Europe and America is the characteristic of the architecture of ancient Greece, the elimination of the superfluous.

I am glad to be able to show several examples of the work of this brilliant and able firm. While the men whom I have mentioned have completely broken with the past, many of the older men, who love tradition and cling to precedent, have adapted themselves to the demands of our day and have expressed these demands in the old architectural language. As an example of how this can be done I show a picture of the Savoy Plaza hotel, one of the latest creations of the office of McKim, Mead & White.

In the next installment Mr. Granger will tell about the Tribune Tower architectural competition, of which he was chairman of the jury of awards.

CHICAGO FIRM IS BIGGEST BUILDER OF U. S. HOSPITALS

The Henry B. Ryan company of Chicago is the most extensive builder of federal government veterans' bureau hospitals in the United States today, it was stated yesterday. Last Sunday in this section a story was published showing Chicago as leading the nation in construction of federal government buildings. In listing the projects under way, contracted for, and recently completed, several important jobs of the Ryan company were inadvertently credited to the Joseph A. Holpuch company.

To correct this, we'll give a list of what the Henry B. Ryan company is now doing and has recently completed, all of them being veterans' bureau hospitals.

A $600,000 group of five buildings at Oteen, N. C., is about 40 per cent completed. At Johnson City, Tenn., two hospital buildings, costing approximately $250,000, are 65 per cent completed.

The Ryan company is just completing a $1,000,000 hospital group of sixteen units at Waco, Tex. A $700,000 hospital group of eight fireproof buildings overlooking the Gulf of Mexico about half way between Gulfport and the Edgewater Gulf hotel was completed last November. It also finished last fall a $400,000 veterans' hospital at Camp Custer, Battle Creek, Mich. It was low bidder on a $375,000 veterans' hospital at Aspinwall, Pa.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

HOUSE "WITHOUT FLOSSMOOR HOME REGRETS" IS THIS

Sturdily Built and Well Equipped Unit.

[Proofs of floor plans of this house may be secured by sending stamped, addressed envelope to Louise Bargelt, Home Builders' Editor, the Chicago Sunday Tribune.]

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders' Editor.]

LOUISE BARGELT.

In the wooded section of Flossmoor, Ill., a handsome six room home, its garage an integral part of the structure, is rapidly nearing completion; a simple version of the traditional English, carried out in red brick and dark roof of heavy asphalt shingles. The gable ends are of asbestos boards, shellacked and painted, with white sand thrown on, thus gaving the appearance of stucco.

The content of this home, 27,000 cubic feet, the cost, $10,000. Not for many years have we had such values as exist today offered us. A concrete instance, this home, which, five years ago, built of the same materials and given the same interior finish and equipment, would have cost between $13,000 and $14,000—perhaps even more!

The architect of this home is William J. Lindstrom of Flossmoor and the house is being built for Paul Willis Jr., also of Flossmoor.

A Difficult Art.

To create a truly satisfactory, livable home, is a complicated and difficult art. Whether we buy a house, such as this one, designed by an expert architect to be sold, or whether we engage an architect to design a home according to our own particular needs and desires—and there doubtless will always remain two definite groups of people, one group preferring to buy something which "stands and can be seen" and the other group choosing to "build its own"—the good architect who has spent years in education and more years in actual practice can insure a safe investment of money spent. An investment home owners have wanted since time immemorial, but which they desire now more vigorously, than ever before!

Wide English Fireplace.

This house stands on a 66 foot lot—the cost of the lot is $2,200, making the total value of the home and grounds $12,200—but it has been so designed that it can be built on a lot which is only 50 feet wide. The frontage is east and the exterior gives an appearance of pleasing width. The garage at the extreme right is heated and fireproof.

The entrance is to an oblong reception hall which leads directly into the living room, 14x20 feet 6 inches. Here the walls are of softly textured plaster, the floor of oak, and there is a wide English fireplace, coal or wood burning. From the center hall, reached from this living room by another entrance, are the stairs leading to the second floor, and also a guest closet with an outside window.

Beyond the living room is the dining room, 12x14 feet, with generous allowance for wall space, and at the right is the kitchen, 11x13 feet. This kitchen is conveniently arranged for service to the dining room and has abundant space for cupboards, mechanical refrigerator, small breakfast nook, sink, and range. The floor is of linoleum and the color scheme buff and soft green.

A screened porch is reached from this kitchen, with exposure to the west and north. Such a porch is an ever extended welcome to the family to come out of doors during the warm weather months. Here eating on the porch would be a simple matter, because of its proximity to the kitchen and its general secluded position. Rain, of course, can be easily kept out by curtains and awnings.

Three Large Bedrooms.

On the second floor there are three large bedrooms, each one with two closets and windows on two sides. Overall of these rooms is 14x15 feet, 14x14 feet, and 10x17 feet. This last oblong bedroom has windows on three of its sides.

The entrance to these bedrooms as well as to the bath, with its wainscot and floor of tile, is from a compact hall in which is located a clothes chute and linen closet. Moreover two of the bedrooms are given open book shelves—an idea for every book lover! It may be a lamentable habit to read in bed, but a large number of us have it, so why not humor it if we don't want to stop it, and give ourselves nice shelves and good reading light over the bed?

In the basement, which is so laid out that a recreation room may be finished if desired, is installed an oil burning steam plant, a portable gas fired incinerator, water heater and water softener and a well lighted laundry room with tubs. This above equipment, together with complete landscaping, is included in the house cost.

Walls and Roof Insulated.

The walls and roof of the house are well insulated, and the basement walls are monolithic concrete and then plastered inside. Steel girders and posts are used and all sheet metal gutters and downspouts are of copper.

The basement morover contains a toilet, access to which is gained by a stairway from the first floor and also a door which leads from this same stairway to the garage. Lives there a mother with children young or half grown to whom this separate basement entrance is not an unmitigated joy?

A house "without regrets" is such sturdily built, well equipped structure—regrets which can rise up in the months following occupancy of a poorly designed and constructed dwelling—regrets which can continue through the years like the ghosts of dead hopes. Regrets that are the more pitiful because they spring from those need-not-have-happened things of life.

No, there is no need for buying or building anything but a good and honest house these days, if one only proceeds carefully under intelligent guidance, securing always the brains and workmanship of reputable, capable men.

Sevilla-Biltmore Hotel, Havana.

Kindly give me what information you can on the Sevilla-Biltmore bonds which have defaulted interest payments.—L. S. S.

Halsey, Stuart & Co. write that they are advised by the secretary of the bondholders' committee that the property has not been operating, not even during this winter season, due to unsettled conditions in Cuba and the difficulty in securing the necessary working capital. Insurance and taxes on the property, it is reported, have been paid to date. According to the figures of the corporation as of Aug. 8, 1931, the date on which the hotel was closed, the statement of operations from Jan. 1, 1931, to that date showed a net loss of $118,392.

"Eighty-nine per cent of the bonds have been deposited," Halsey, Stuart & Co. state. "This places the committee in a strong position to take definite action as soon as any opportunity presents itself.

William B. Henderson of the Central Republic Bank and Trust company states that the owner still is in possession of the property and that a bondholders' protective committee is being formed and bonds will be called for deposit with the Central Republic.

The building contains thirty-seven suites of one, two and three rooms and six stores. The occupancy is now said to be 81 per cent.

incident in municipal history la week was a broadside from Bosto In that the Massachusetts city se tself up as the best governed ci n the country and proceeded to sh holes in Milwaukee's assertion of ancial perfection. The citizens' bu u of Milwaukee had exploded the m of the high rating given by the m to his city's finances. Now a B n banker in an analysis of his ci finances points out some weak sp and sounds a warning.

review of the operations of the ci of Boston in 1931 is not par- ti rly reassuring to the taxpayers w hope for a radical reduction in ex ses, and at present there is n ng to indicate lowered taxes in 19' the banker states. "Further- m in 1931 the city had a cash su us at the beginning of the year of ,630,000, while at the beginning of 932 the city had a deficit of $2 ,000."

Revenues Drop 10 Millions?

e Boston banker states that it is es ated the reduction in revenues w amount to approximately $10,000,- 00 including the deficit. However, h ys there likely will be a decrease of ome $4,800,000 in expenditures th gh various savings, which "will in ate a deficit of about $5,200,000 in evenue under 1931, which will n sitate an increase of $2.60 in the ta ate if the budget is to be bal- a ."

t is obviously impossible to make a definite estimate of what the ac- tu increase will be, since changes in p y may be made which will make it ssible to borrow funds for ex- p itures heretofore taken care of b xation, ordinarily an undesirable p y," he continues. "Deferring ta by borrowing only defers the bi to the taxpayers, and reacts a nst the city's credit."

ssibly Boston's officials are not u rgoing the nervous strain suf- fe by officials of other cities in en- d ring to meet financial problems, b deficits spell trouble, as reports fr municipalities and other govern- m s all over the country testify. A impaired credit means further b ns on the taxpayers through in- c ed interest charges for loans to m ordinary operating costs.

Seattle Troubled, Too.

om the other side of the country c s a story of a municipal head- a at Seattle. There the authori- ti are struggling with problems in c ection with the city owned street ra ay system. Manager Brown says th system will fall about $1,250,000 sh in meeting all obligations falling du during this year. At the same ti the city controller has issued $1 397 in pay roll and expense war- ra , payments on which will be de- fe , bringing the total outstanding u id warrants to $637,197.

an effort to reduce the losses B n announced a plan for curtail- m of service, whereupon commu- ni club members raised a howl. T Mayor Elect Dore jumped into th racas with an injunction to halt th roposals. In the meanwhile the pr nt incumbent, Mayor Harlin, qu s Dore as saying that if he fails to lve the traction problem he, Dore, wi jump into Puget sound.

lsa furnishes a bit of news in a re t that its mayor, suffering from a of nerves, struck and knocked d a newspaper reporter who so ht to question him on the city's fi ces. The city has been finding di ulty in meeting its pay roll be- ca of the stand taken by local ba s in refusing to accept additional w ants until tax protest suits tying u ity levies have been settled. Later th banks agreed to accept March w ants, but what is to happen with re d to future months has not been de ed.

for Detroit, the noises emerging fr the council chambers of the m r capital are strangely reminis- c of the disturbances raised in the C ago council. Here is Detroit's p lem: How to get through the rest o e fiscal year, which ends June 30, w it unlikely that the banks will lo any more money. How to reduce th new $76,000,000 budget sent the c cil by Mayor Murphy to allow f he expected tax delinquency and y avoid increasing the 1932 tax levy.

e Detroit council, in what was d ribed as the most stormy session in decade, turned down the recom- m dation of the mayor's joint finance c mittee for a 33 1-3 reduction in s ies of all employés. One proposal m e was that the employés take s t term bonds in lieu of cash. R h Stone, chairman of the finance c mittee, warned that such action w d be tantamount to placing the ci on a scrip basis and it would m e it impossible for the city to bor- r money or sell bonds to investors. T city has been proposing to refund $3 00,000 in obligations coming due th year.

Rail Earnings Show Need of More Traffic

BY SCRUTATOR.

At the time of the railway wage negotiations in January a hurried attempt was made to compile figures showing how the carriers fared financially in 1931. A preliminary figure of $89,000,000 was agreed upon as a fair estimate of the combined earnings available for dividends.

On the basis of complete returns it now develops that class 1 railroads last year in the aggregate earned $141,000,000, instead of $89,000,000, for their stockholders. This compares with net income of $523,000,000 for 1930 and $897,000,000 for 1929.

These figures refer to the amount left for dividends or reinvestment—profit after all charges. Railway income accounts contain a number of terms that are often confusing. "Net operating revenue" refers to earnings before fixed charges. "Net railway operating income" is income after taxes but before interest on the funded debt.

Interpreting the Figures.

Monthly figures on railway earnings usually refer to operating revenue and therefore do not give an accurate picture. In January, for instance, combined net operating revenue of class 1 railroads dropped only 36.3 per cent from the corresponding period of 1931. But after deductions for taxes "net railway operating income," the amount available for interest, was nearly 66 per cent lower than in January, 1931.

The figure for net income, after all charges, was not shown. It would, of course, have evidenced an even more pronounced drop, because of the rigidity of the interest item.

February and March were not much more encouraging than January, although the wage reduction began to help somewhat and the downward trend in carloadings showed a tendency to flatten out a little in March.

It becomes increasingly evident, however, that the business of the railroads has got to improve if their combined earnings are to show anything at all for the stockholders in 1932.

Lowest Since Year 1897.

Last year's net income for class 1 railroads was the lowest reported since 1897. In 1929 net was $977,000,000 and in 1916, $735,000,000.

One of the chief reasons for the financial troubles of the railroads in depression years is the heavy burden of fixed charges, composed principally of taxes and interest on funded debt. Neither of these items can be pared down when ability to pay diminishes. Last year taxes consumed 7.3 cents out of every dollar of gross revenues.

While the railroads were growing they naturally were increasing their funded debt. Since the period of rapid expansion ceased they have been unable to cut down funded debt. It could be reduced through the sale of additional stock or retired out of surplus earnings. But the average of railway earnings has been too low to encourage investors to buy railroad stock and likewise too low to leave much for the retirement of bonds.

And when a railroad develops, as did the Southern Pacific, a plan whereby it may lower rates so that they will fill empty cars and provide at least something to help pay fixed charges it may be forbidden to publish those rates because they are "noncompensatory."

Question: When the combined net income of all railroads falls into the red aren't the majority of rates "noncompensatory?"

CHICAGO STOCK TRADING QUIET; PRICES STEADIER

Selling dried up yesterday in the Chicago market with transactions falling off to 36,000 shares for the two hour session. Final quotations represented slight change from Friday's last prices.

Trading in the Insull securities was slower in common with the general trend. Moderate net gains were chalked up for a few issues, notably Commonwealth Edison, which was bringing 80¾ when the day ended. Middle West common hovered around $1 as the debentures moved irregularly in New York. The June maturity advanced moderately, but other series showed losses. Insull Utility debentures struck a new low of 3¼ and recovered only slightly.

A compilation on comparative market values showed that 50 representative shares on the Chicago exchange shrunk $34,863,641 during the last week, which was a decline of 5.33 per cent. At the close yesterday the 50 issues had a quoted value of $618,630,534, against $653,494,175 at the end of the previous week.

A reorganization committee for the Empire Public Service corporation has been formed. Edward C. Delafield, vice president of the City Bank Farmers Trust company, is chairman. The company has been in receivership since October, 1931.

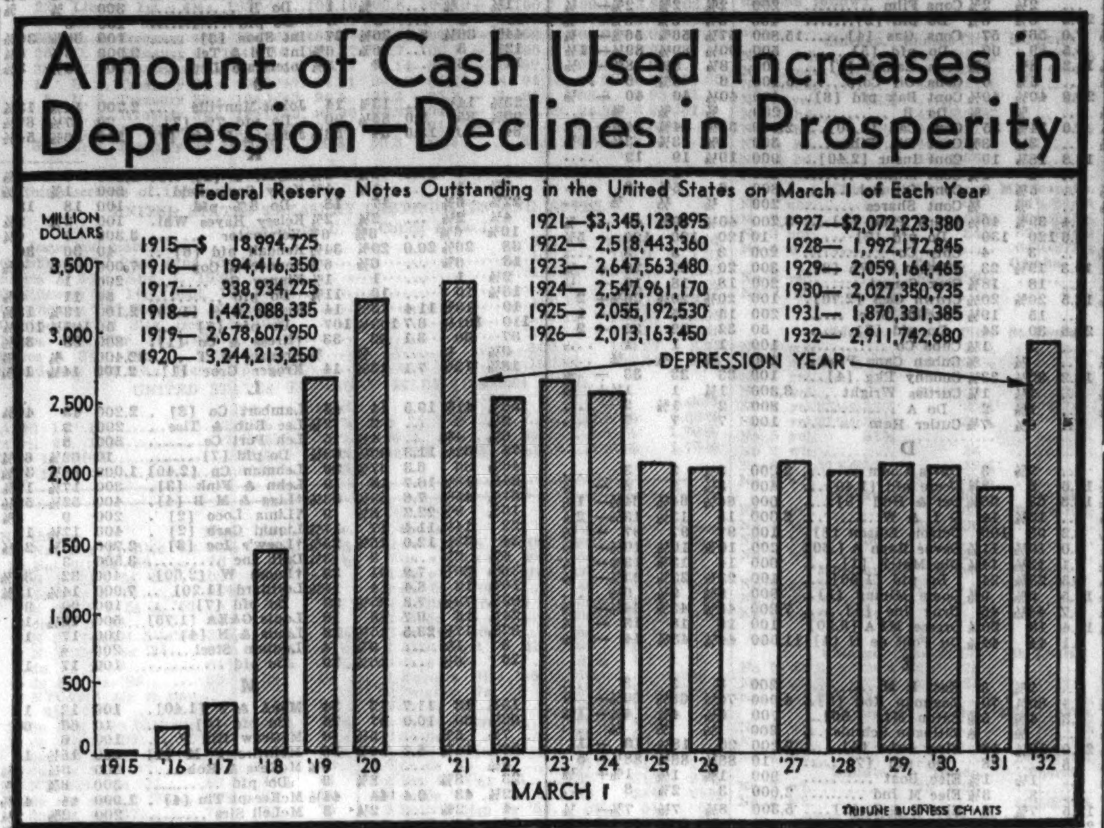
NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE SEATS LOWEST SINCE 1924

Nek York, April 2.—(AP)—A new low record since 1924 for the price of stock exchange seats was registered today with arrangements for the transfer of a membership at $98,000, compared with the previous sale of $101,000.

In 1924 the seat price range was $101,000 to $76,000. From the low price of that year seat values rose steadily to the top level of $625,000 recorded just before the stock market collapse in the autumn of 1929.

In the last week or so seat prices have declined rather sharply and Wall street believes that many of the sales have been occasioned by fears that the tax proposed on stock transactions will sharply curtail the already small speculative and investment interest in the market.

Amount of Cash Used Increases in Depression—Declines in Prosperity



ANOTHER LINE SHOWS DECLINE FOR YEAR 1931

Milwaukee Road Tells of Conditions.

The effects of general depression on earnings of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad last year were augmented by usual drought in a portion of the company's territory. Total operating revenues for 1931 declined 21.8 per cent from 1930, and even a decrease of 20.5 per cent in operating expenses was insufficient to overcome the sharp loss in gross revenue.

Freight traffic revenue last year was the smallest since 1917, totaling $91,392,070, and comparing with $115,638,093 in 1930. As the result of a smaller amount of travel because of general conditions and competition of motor vehicles, the number of passengers carried dropped to 4,638,081 last year, compared with 6,078,523 in 1930, and passenger revenue declined to $8,952,421 from $12,681,664.

Decreases Nearly Half.

Net railway operating income for 1931 was $8,334,406, compared with $15,954,547 in 1930. But the railroad suffered a final deficit of $13,822,736, compared with a deficit of $4,894,816 in 1930. Last year's deficit, coupled with surplus adjustments, resulted in wiping out a previous surplus of $8,034,911 and substituting a surplus deficit of $7,582,030.

"In comparison with the decrease in operating revenues of the company in 1931 of 21.8 per cent, the decrease for all other roads comprising the northwestern region was 24.2 per cent and for the western district 21.7 per cent," President H. A. Scandrett says in his annual report, issued yesterday. "Comparing the decrease in operating expenses of the company in 1931 of 20.5 per cent the decrease for all other roads in the northwestern region was 19.1 per cent and in the western district 18.6 per cent.

Rate of Return 1.07 Per Cent.

"The rate of return earned on investment in road and equipment, including materials and supplies and cash at the beginning of the year, was 1.07 per cent, compared with 2.12 per cent for 1930 and with 5.75 per cent fixed by the interstate commerce commission was a fair rate of return. For the entire western district the average rate of return for 1931 was 1.86 per cent, compared with 3.14 per cent for 1930. For the northwestern region, in which the company is grouped, the rate of return for 1931 was 1.19 per cent, compared with 2.56 per cent for 1930.

"The deficiency in the fair return for the western district for 1931 was $436,278,000, compared with $288,837,000 for 1930; for the northwestern region $165,878,000, compared with $115,960,000; for this company $36,349,000, compared with $27,397,000 for 1930."

Trading One Utility Stock for Another Is Progressing

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 2.—About 1,000 persons had exchanged 5,000 shares of American Commonwealth Power corporation preferred stock for participation units of the Minneapolis Gas Light company by March 28. That represented an exchange of about $500,000 in Commonwealth stock out of about $2,500,000 which, it is estimated, had been sold at or through the gas company's offices. No time limit has so far been set on the exchange of securities, but officers of the gas company hope to have completed it within sixty days.

Cotton Sales to Orient Boost U. S. Farm Exports

Washington, D. C., April 2.—(AP)—Thanks to heavy cotton shipments, February American agricultural exports were the largest for that month since 1927.

The cotton trade, chiefly to the orient, brought the index level to 117 of the prewar average, a gain of six points over January.

Total cotton exports for February were 1,022,000 bales, of which 53 per cent went to the orient. Japan alone took 412,000 bales.

CHICAGO BANK STOCKS AT NEW LOW LEVELS FOR CURRENT YEAR

Several Chicago bank stocks established new 1932 lows last week on a fair volume of trade. Continental Illinois Bank and Trust eased some 8 points to low sales of 117 and closed at 118½ bid, 119½ asked. First National continued easier and the close of 192 bid, 195 asked, reflected a loss of 15 points. Central Republic Bank and Trust also worked into lower ground and at the close was offered for sale at 84 with buyers at 82, off 6 points.

Northern Trust continued firm and unchanged at 295 bid, 300 asked, as also did Harris Trust and Savings at 295 bid, 300 asked. Peoples Trust and Savings was offered 5 points lower at 95 without attracting interest among buyers. Terminal National was fractionally easier at 9 to 10. Chicago Bank of Commerce was unchanged at 14 to 15.

In the miscellaneous group, Chicago Title and Trust, after opening earlier in the week at 200 bid, 203 asked, improved to high quotations of 217 bid, 220 asked, from which price it reacted to a low and close of 200 to 203. Chicago Daily News common was easier at 9 bid, 9½ asked. The preferred was 6 points easier at 46 bid, 49 asked.

HORSES GAIN IN VALUE AS FARM DEMAND RETURNS

BY PAUL POTTER.

As spring work gets under way on the farm those who maintain we are fast approaching a horseless era are surprised to learn that of all farm crops or animals the work horse alone is showing an increase in value over that of a year or two years ago.

While census figures continue to show a declining horse population, it is found that there is no actual shortage of good horses on farms, since fewer trucking firms and city deliveries make a demand for horses than in former years. In fact, the shipment of work horses to eastern markets has been almost entirely replaced by shipment into middle west and southern farming areas this winter.

In Iowa steps are being taken to increase the output of the 1,088,000 head of horses and mules in the state, valued at about 75 million dollars. By use of special hitches, four to eight horses are being harnessed together to obtain better work without strain on any one horse.

Last week in Chicago the best pairs of work horses were selling at the stockyards horse auction for $350. The individual top horses went for $180 and the bulk of sales between $50 and $100 per head. Practically the only demand is from farmers, with the bulk of sales by truck and carlots going to Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan. Only two loads went to Pennsylvania and none to New York. About 500 horses a week are being sold in this one market alone.

UNITED LIGHT PLANS 14 MILLION IN REFINANCING

In his annual report to stockholders, issued yesterday, President William Chamberlain of the United Light and Power company states that concern will have no difficulty in meeting its maturities this year. Maturities of $14,000,000 will be paid when due, he stated. The interest rate on the necessary refinancing will be somewhat higher than on the maturing issues, he stated.

President Chamberlain said while the securities of the company declined to abnormally low levels last year in common with the general market there was no attempt on the part of the company to support prices.

Northern Pacific Asking to Reduce Auto Rates

St. Paul, Minn., April 2.—(AP)—The Northern Pacific railway today announced it had asked interstate commerce commission permission to make "drastic" reductions in freight rates on automobiles from Duluth, Superior, and the Twin Cities to points several hundred miles distant to "win this class of business back from trucks and country dealers who are driving new cars to interior communities." In some instances reduction by more than half is asked. Earlier this week the Northern Pacific joined five other lines in seeking reductions on live stock shipments to the south St. Paul market in an effort to regain this business from trucks.

HENRI, HURST & M'DONALD OPEN NEW QUARTERS

Henri, Hurst & McDonald, Inc., Chicago advertising agency, who moved on Friday from the Garland building, where they had been for the last fourteen years, to new, more modern and larger quarters in the McGraw-Hill building, 520 North Michigan avenue, will have a formal opening all day tomorrow (Monday). There'll be a reception with refreshments in the new advertising headquarters, which occupy all of the eleventh floor, part of the tenth and considerable space on the Grand avenue level.

W. B. HENRI.

According to W. B. Henri, president of the Henri, Hurst & McDonald, Inc., the eleventh floor will be used for the creative copy and art production, sales and service, finance and billing, media and research, all arranged to obtain the maximum efficiency.

A feature of the new advertising quarters will be a unique radio audition room for producing private auditions for clients. It will be sound proof and acoustically treated.

In announcing his original lease, negotiated last January, which was the first large office building lease of 1932, Mr. Henri stated that business for his firm was better in 1931 than during 1930, and, as a majority of his customers expect a considerably better volume of profits and sales during this year, the present expansion program was decided upon.

DURANT MOTOR OF NEW JERSEY IN COURT BATTLE

Trenton, N. J., April 2.—(AP)—Vice Chancellor Bigelow today ordered the Durant Motor Car company of New Jersey, with headquarters at Elizabeth, to show cause on April 12 in Newark why a receiver should not be appointed. Stuart A. Young was named custodial receiver under $25,000 bond. The complaint was filed by the National Newark and Essex Banking company of Newark.

Receivers for Browning-King.

New York, April 2—(AP)—Federal Judge William Bondy today appointed Howard Osterhout, an attorney, and John C. Niemeyer, industrial engineer, equity receivers for Browning, King & Co., clothiers. The appointment was made upon application of William Browning, who set forth that $486,611 loaned by him to the corporation is due and unpaid. According to the papers, liabilities total $1,427,000 and assets $2,538,500. The corporation consented to the appointment.

New York Banks Show Increase in Deposits

New York, April 2.—(AP)—The weekly statement of the New York clearing house shows: Total net demand deposits [average], $101,022,000 [increase]; time deposits [average], $6,631,000 [increase]; clearings week ending today, $3,604,798,406; clearings week ending March 26, $2,707,339,492.

MARCH COLLECTIONS OF INCOME TAXES RUN FAR BELOW YEAR AGO

Washington, D. C., April 2.—(AP)—Income tax collections for March dropped $139,329,391 as compared with March, 1931.

The treasury, in its statement for March 31, showed that income tax collections for the month were $195,410,823, as compared with $334,830,214 last March. They brought the total from this source for the fiscal year to $853,523,165, as compared with $1,506,261,238 in the same period of the preceding year.

At the end of March the government had a deficit of $1,885,283,713, having collected from all sources $1,601,934,948 and having spent $3,487,218,662. In addition to the sharp decline in income tax, miscellaneous internal revenue dropped $8,000,000 in March and $41,000,000 for the fiscal year. Customs duties declined $8,000,000 for the month and $20,000,000 for the fiscal year.

On March 31 the gross public debt was $18,506,729,307, against $18,125,633,155 at the end of February and $16,582,868,436 on March 31 a year ago.

Damage News Shoots Wheat Prices Upward

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Sensationally bullish crop damage reports from the west and southwest and active foreign demand for cash wheat proved to be an irresistible market influence yesterday. They violently swept prices upward.

Profit taking and other selling had little effect.

Prices were on the upgrade to the close.

Final sales were at net gains of 2⅜@3c, with May wheat leading. The latter finished at 56⅜@56½c, with old July at 58⅝@58⅞c and old September at 60⅝@60¾c.

General short covering and buying was in evidence in wheat, with the trade having an impression a leading local professional had started to cover a large line of short grain put out much higher up. There was also buying by operators who had daily and weekly offers sold. The debacle in the stock market was ignored, although it caused a little hesitation early.

Southwest Buys Wheat.

The decidedly pessimistic feeling which was so much in evidence earlier in the week was entirely absent yesterday, and even the pronounced weakness in the New York stock market was ignored. Houses with southwestern connections poured buying orders for wheat futures into the local pit and sentiment swung sharply to the bull side.

Sensational crop damage reports were received from the dry areas in the west and southwest, and one report claimed that a section of the country which raised 150,000,000 bu in 1931 would only secure 35,000,000 bu this season, based on the conditions which prevail at the present time. Dust storms were reported from parts of Kansas, Nebraska, and eastern Colorado during the day.

High temperatures which have prevailed for the last few days are regarded as having disclosed more damage in many sections than anticipated. Messages from the southwest indicated that there was a rather marked expansion in the area from which damage complaints were being received, including some from northeastern Kansas, which has heretofore sent only favorable comments.

Foreigners Buy Cash Wheat.

Bullish enthusiasm was heightened by a rather marked change in the apparent trade sentiment abroad. Liverpool ignored the decline in North American wheat markets late Friday and closed ¼@½c per bu higher. An increase of 5 per cent in the French foreign wheat quota to 45 per cent, the highest since the regulations went into effect in December, 1929, with a general improvement in the demand for cash grain from importing countries being the main influence. There were also unfavorable crop reports from France. The better feeling abroad was reflected in active buying of North American cash wheat, with sales in all positions estimated at 1,250,000 to 1,500,000 bu.

Based on reports from the seaboard and from other sources, it is estimated that sales of American hard winter wheat the last week were in excess of 2,000,000 bu, the largest total in a number of weeks. Winnipeg followed Chicago and closed 2@2⅛c higher, with May at 62½c in Canadian funds. Buenos Aires was 1c higher at the last, with May at 47¼c.

Corn Rallies After Break.

Liquidation was on in corn early, with the May breaking ⅝c to 34½c, a new low for the season, but all deliveries rallied later with corn to above the finish of the previous day and closing trades were at net gains of ¾@1c, with May at 36@36⅛c, July 39¼@39½c, and September 41⅛c. Trade was largely of a local character, with routine news ignored after the market started upward.

There were no purchases to arrive from the country, the first time such a condition has been reported in a considerable period, while shipping sales were 10,000 bu. Buenos Aires closed ⅛c higher, with May at 30¾c.

Oats showed fair active demand and closed ¼@½c higher, with May at 24c and July at 24½c. Seeding of the new crop is making rapid progress and is under way in Indiana.

While rye failed to fully reflect the strength in wheat, net gains were @1½c, with May closing at 48¾@ ⅞@1½c, with May closing at 48¾@ Commission houses were persistent buyers and the seaboard intimated that a liberal export business had been done. However, there were no figures given. The German government was said to have been a buyer of cash rye late Friday.

STATE AND CITY BONDS LEAD IN WEEK'S OFFERING

New York, April 2.—State and municipal issues monopolized the new offerings of bonds this week. Seventeen issues of that classification totaling $18,012,222 were placed on the market.

There were no new offerings of corporation bonds of any description. This was the first week since mid-February that no new public utility financing was done. Last week's new financing amounted to $32,056,000, and a year ago the total was $125,005,000.

This week had nine issues calling for $1,000,000 or more. Most of these offerings were well received and in some instances the subscription books were quickly closed. The declining tendency of the market for corporation bonds of course precluded new financing of this category this week.

Although the state of New York apportioned a new issue of $50,000,000 9½ months' 3¾ per cent notes among 35 banks and banking houses this week at a price of par, the financing was in the nature of a private banking transaction, since only a comparatively few blocks of the issue were offered to the public. No syndicate was formed on this issue, since it was sold by Controller Tremaine by allotment.

Several new pieces of public utility financing are being considered for public offering by bankers as soon as the general market demonstrates its ability to absorb new bond issues. During the week, $9,000,000 of Argentine government 6 per cent notes, due April 1, were refunded without public offering.

Offerings of bonds in the New York market, by groups, for this and last week, follow:

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 2.—Stocks of all descriptions went to new low ground for the long bear market in the trough of a fresh selling wave today.

Deepening gloom over tax legislation at Washington continued to motivate operations. Effects of the stock dividend tax written into the house bill loom up particularly ominous in the Wall street outlook, one commentator of standing going so far in his appraisal of the measure today as to predict that it would set the brokerage business back twenty years and work hardship for no fewer than 60 million people interested in corporation securities. Less pessimistic observers continued to hope that the senate would be moved to set aside some of the more obnoxious provisions of the bill.

In addition to the tax burden, the railroad shares had to contend with predictions of additional receiverships for different roads if the proposed new restrictions on government loans to needy carriers are adopted. Selling in this group was the heaviest. Long line of one time favorites, such as Atchison, New York Central, Union Pacific declined to new lows on losses of from 1 to 4 points or more.

Railroads Lead Decline.

The rails have been plumbing fresh depths almost daily for the current reaction which began a week ago and are now several jumps below the bottoms they established with the rest of the market on Jan. 5. The utilities followed them through the old lows and on the face of some sets of averages the industrials also established new lows today. Although various individual issues of the group broke through, the averages for the section still had a slight margin to spare above the line on the more widely studied averages.

Some of the pivotals of the group no doubt owe their escape to banking support which was evident in various directions when pressure became the heaviest. United States Steel dropped to 38½ but was rallied slightly and closed a good 4 points above its bear market minimum. American Can also had several points to spare thanks to "pinch hit" buying.

Auto Price War Talk.

Talk of a threatening price war among the leading automobile manufacturers of the country added to the troubles of the motor shares already strongly in disfavor on account of the manufacturer's tax imposed in the house bill. General Motors dropped to a new low of 14¾, and Nash, Hupp and others sought lower ground. Chrysler touched its old low.

Case Threshing Machine was a weak specialty dipping to 28⅝ and finished nearly 3 points below its close of yesterday. As yesterday, the trading community blamed a large measure of the day's selling on the professional bear crowd. Brokers reported a heavy overnight accumulation of selling orders and expressed the opinion that a majority of them represented frightened liquidation.

BOSTON, PROUD OF FINANCES, FACES DEFICIT

ell merchants who have been carrying city accounts for 4 months have had their December and January accounts settled. The city's obligations are now paid up to Jan. 31, with the exception of the teachers' pay. City employés have been paid to Feb. 6.

From Cohoes, N. Y., comes a report that mill owners are considering a refusal to pay 1932 taxes because the administration refuses to lower 1932 municipal expenditures. Elmira, which ran out of funds late last year, has borrowed $250,000 from Boston banks to tide it over until taxes start coming in in July. It is stated $100,000 borrowed from the school fund if not returned will result in the schools closing in November. New Rochelle has cut the pay of its employés. Its cost of government has increased from $21.56 per capita in 1917 to $78.75 in 1930.

Too Poor for Hospital.

Philadelphia gives the low state of its funds as answer to a suit to compel it to start work on a hospital. More than 100 contracts for municipal construction have been held up because of the financial stringency. From Pittsburgh comes news that Wilkinsburg borough employés encountered a brief delay in getting their salary checks which Burgess Walker intimated was due to the banks' distrust of the borough financial situation. The borough owes about $250,000 to the bank.

Akron's council is beset by financial difficulties. Taxes have been slow and the city has more than $7,000,000 in bonded debt obligations to be met during the year. Some $500,000 in special assessment notes were defaulted two months ago and the city is scraping to meet salaries of employés. There is talk that employés later may have to be paid in scrip.

Campbell, Ohio steel city, is more than $350,000 behind in payment on bond and interest charges. During 1931 it defaulted on $501,132 in short term notes, $21,057 in general bonds, and $24,034 in special assessment bonds. So far in 1932 it has defaulted on $4,900 in general bonds, $5,600 in special assessment bonds, and $10,000 in interest. The city has only $1,562 available in its general fund for the rest of the year. Police and firemen, unpaid for seven months, have given the city until Tuesday before taking a decision on quitting.

Youngstown Suffers, Too.

The mayor of Youngstown, O., says April will be a critical month in the city's finances. The city faces obligations of $385,000 with a cash balance of $87,000. Detroit Lakes, Minn., teachers' salaries have been reduced. St. Maries, Idaho, employés and those of Tacoma, Wash., have agreed to take a ninth of their pay for the rest of the year in noninterest bearing warrants.

Tennessee is back negotiating with New York bankers for a loan of $9,000,000, for which it must pay 6 per cent interest. The legislature of Kentucky adjourned without enacting new taxes sufficient to take care of appropriations. A proposal has been made in Minnesota for the abolishment of the rural credits bureau, which has lent $60,000,000 on farm mortgages. New Mexico's board of finance votes to place various state organizations on a semi-cash basis as of July 1.

The United States deficit on March 30 was $1,861,772,728. Last year's pay roll amounted to $1,341,670,431 for 741,775 civilian employés and 290,913 in the military service.

It is reported that Canada's deficit for the current year may be $75,000,000. Argentina proposes a $125,000,000 "patriotic loan" to be used to pay back salaries of government employés and to clear up other obligations. Interest is to be at 6 per cent. The government has concluded negotiations with New York bankers for extension of about $18,000,000 in notes. Greece has announced that sinking fund payments on the internal debt will have to be suspended for a year and interest reduced.

COTTONSEED OIL.

NEW YORK, April 2.—(AP)—Bleachable cottonseed oil closed easy today at 1 to 5 points net decline. Further scattered liquidation and poor support promoted by the easiness of stocks and steady cotton and lard markets, accounted for the decline. New low levels for the season were established throughout the list. Crude oil was 2⅝c bid in the southeast and the valley and 2⅝c in Texas. Bleachable spot closed 3.60c. May 3.67c, July 3.84c, September 3.96c. There were no sales in the prime summer yellow contract with closing prices as follows: Spot—May 3.50c, July 3.70c, September 3.80c.

LONDON STOCK PRICES ERRATIC; STERLING FIRM

Pound's Rise Supplies Foundation.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 1.—The Easter vacation and international influences dominated market developments this week.

The tone was more unsettled and at the conclusion of the week's session, which marked the end of three weeks' account, a sudden and unexpected weakness set in on heavy liquidation from abroad, with Paris, Amsterdam, Brussels, and New York unloading shares, international industrials experiencing the full force of the selling. Market leaders are becoming nervous regarding the continental position and prices reached lowering standards in the long list.

British Bonds Decline.

Sterling's continued rise failed to stimulate gilt-edged securities and for the first time in several weeks British government funds dropped appreciably towards the close. Domestic issues and home influences remain comparatively steady but with the continental uncertainty, the irregularity as a result of the conjuncture of fluctuating exchanges and weak Wall street prices brought a disappointing change from the cheerfulness of the last month.

The treasury's statement of the end of the year's national accounts disclosing a budget surplus is regarded as satisfactory in the city and financial circles, but the surplus expectations have been discounted.

With any assurance of some reduction in taxation the stock markets would feel more comfortable regarding the approaching budget, but speculators still remember the chancellor of the exchequer's recent warning against too much optimism regarding reliefs from existing burdens and that Great Britain is not yet out of the woods.

Kreuger Affair Still Echoes.

The Kreuger & Toll catastrophe still is having deflationary effects upon the market and there is overwhelming evidence that the forced liquidation arising from it has not yet run its course.

Meanwhile the money market remains easy, with technical and financial conditions becoming more favorable, and, provided some means can shortly be found to bolster up the continental position, especially in central Europe, the continuance of easy money rates seems inevitable.

The city is closely watching developments in the United States congress dealing with its serious budget situation and is favorably impressed by this week's drastic action to raise the necessary additional taxation.

Confidence in the dollar therefore is returning following the mild flight recently occasioned by the nervousness concerning America's national finances.

Ford Motors [English company's] results for 1931 were regarded here as disappointing and the market marked down the price of its shares when the annual report was issued announcing that no dividend would be payable. It was generally known that Henry Ford's genius could not avert the heavy fall of profits, but the actual shrinkage greatly exceeded expectations.

WEEK IN PARIS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, April 2.—The strength of the pound and the fiscal drama in America preoccupied the Paris bourse this week to the exclusion of local influences. Accordingly, the market, which for a few weeks had shown unusual symptoms of autonomous development, became once more a mirror reflecting the tendencies of the English and American exchanges.

Significantly there was one attempt at self-assertion in the direction of a sharp rise Thursday which lasted until cables from Wall street began to arrive just around closing time. The next day the contagion of the American slump was found to be irresistible and the whole list tumbled despite the absence of any concentrated selling.

The dollar fell off sharply the early part of the week, but recovered buoyancy on the strength of the expressed determination of congress to balance the budget at all costs.

HIDE FUTURES

Prices on the New York Hide exchange continued the downward trend and new record low levels were again established during the week ended April 1, active futures showing declines of 50 to 65 points for the period. The downward movement in values was accompanied by brisk trading, the turnover being the largest in several weeks, sales for the 5 day period totaling over 12,000,000 lbs.

A lull in activity in leather and shoe manufacturing circles coupled with the declining movement in the spot hide markets and weakness in the securities market brought forth liquidation and hedging. Trading Saturday was slow with sales of 440,000 lbs. Prices were 5@15c lower. Closing bids: June, 5.15c; September, 5.70c; December, 6.20c; March, 6.65c.

COTTON AVERAGES LOWER

Lighter trading with a narrow range of prices and a close with net losses of 3@6 points on futures in Chicago and 4@8 points off in other markets featured the trade in cotton. Spot markets were off 5 points, New York being 6.25c, New Orleans 6.15c, Galveston 6.20c, and Houston 6.10c. Liverpool closed 6 points net higher with sterling exchange lower. Exports for the season to date aggregate 6,882,826 bales, or nearly 1,250,000 bales in excess of a year ago. Professional traders were bearish on the break in the stock market but their operations were somewhat restricted by the strength in grains. Efforts are being made to restrict production among southern mills. Trade sentiment is greatly mixed, being influenced largely by the unsettled political developments. Prices follow:

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The chief function of the Reconstruction Finance corporation is to mobilize credit and facilitate the refunding of obligations outstanding as they mature.

"Its purpose," said President Hoover in his message proposing the formation of this organization, "is that by strengthening the weak spots to thus liberate the full strength of the nation's resources."

The corporation is in many respects similar to the War Finance corporation. It represents the federal government's increased participation in the investment banking business. The best explanation for its existence is that the government believes there are a lot of corporations, banks, railways and farmers that are good for loans but can't get them through the normal channels because of the frozen condition of credit.

The corporation has an original capital of a half billion dollars supplied by the federal treasury and the authority to issue $1,500,000,000 of debentures if needed.

It may lend money to financial institutions, railroads and other corporations. As much as $200,000,000 may be used to aid in rehabilitation of closed banks or banks in liquidation. Funds may be allocated to the department of agriculture for loans to farmers or to joint stock land banks, federal intermediate credit banks, agricultural credit corporations and live stock credit corporations.

The corporation is authorized to accept drafts and bills of exchange, when guaranteed by banks, to aid in the financing of export shipments, except war materials.

Loans may be made at any time up to two years from the date of organization, and may run from three to five years maturity. The corporation must be liquidated and dissolved in ten years. It is intended merely to bridge a credit emergency.

The Reconstruction Finance corporation cannot be considered as a step toward inflation as long as it follows a sound loan policy and does not lend large amounts for unproductive purposes. It is designed to free existing credits, not to create new credits. The act forbids its making loans for financing any enterprise not initiated prior to the passage of the act. All loans must be "fully and adequately secured."

The corporation is not entirely fool proof. Its success will depend largely on the loan policies of its directors. Much is left to their discretion.

The plan has other shortcomings, not the least of which is that it leads to more government financing and increasing competition for private borrowers in the money markets. It should, however, help to keep soundly financed institutions out of the sheriff's hands.

WARNS AGAINST TAXING BUSINESS OUT OF CHICAGO

Elmer Rich, president of the South Central association for the last six years, has been nominated for another term of office. The election will be held on Tuesday, April 5. Edmund F. Mansure is named for treasurer, succeeding Rodney T. Badger; John P. Mentzer, Arthur Jones, and George M. Atwell, vice presidents; George F. Iliff, secretary.

In a statement issued to the members last night President Rich warned against driving business out of a community through overtaxing and pointed to Wisconsin.

"In a neighboring state many large manufacturing institutions already have moved their headquarters elsewhere," he said. "Capital does not hang around to be taxed out of existence. That day has about arrived in Chicago. We have plenty of vacant manufacturing plants, many empty apartments and stores, but we want no more.

"The city that cleans house first and makes itself attractive to business and capital is the one that is going to have the big business and prosperity for the future."

WINDOW SASH OF ALUMINUM FOR FIELD BUILDING

Will Use 150 Tons for 3,300 Openings.

BY AL CHASE.

Details of the interior construction of the new Field office building at La Salle and Adams, announced yesterday for the first time, disclose several innovations in the skyscraper world, so far as Chicago is concerned. For the first time in the middle west solid aluminum windows will be used in a tall structure. The 3,300 to be installed will require 150 tons of aluminum for their construction.

According to D. V. Nelson, superintendent of the Marshall Field estate, aluminum windows were chosen because of their resistance to corrosion, low cost of maintenance, added light because more glass can be used, and for their trim appearance.

Concealed Radiation.

The Field building, it is claimed, will be the first in Chicago to have entirely concealed radiation. This will be in a metal enclosure with a baked on enamel finish grained to harmonize with the wood trim and built in flush with the walls so there'll be no projections into the office. All heating pipes, both risers and laterals, will be completely enclosed and hidden from view. There'll be about 3,500 such enclosures.

American walnut has been chosen for all typical trim through the building, including casings, bases, cornice molding, picture molding, and all other exposed woodwork in rental areas, corridors, and public spaces. There'll be approximately 3,000 walnut doors. The rough walnut lumber required amounts to approximately 600,000 board feet. About 250,000 board feet of thick walnut veneers will be used for the doors and 200,000 board feet of thinner walnut veneer for panels and other purposes. This contract amounts to close to half a million dollars. The finish will be natural walnut.

Hard Maple Floors.

Hard maple will be used for floors with sleepers of spruce. About one million board feet will be required at a cost of approximately $500,000.

The public corridors above the second floor will be finished with a light green terrazzo with a dark green border, a dark green Tinos marble base, and Italian Arni vein marble five foot wainscot.

The main arcade and entrance lobbies, two stories high, will have fluted marble pilasters full height. Shop fronts and entrances to the arcade shops and elevator lobbies will be of white bronze. The lobby floors will be of terrazzo, divided by metal strips.

According to Robert Carpenter, manager of the building, if the present speed of construction keeps up the first unit will be ready for occupancy by fall, as promised. Date of completion of the entire structure, which will be 535 feet high, is set for May 1, 1934.

"Two Years ago I'd have said it Couldn't be Done"

WALTER P. CHRYSLER TELLS ABOUT HIS NEW PLYMOUTH

I PRODUCED the first car that ever carried my name in 1924—only eight years ago. It sold for $1800 and caused a SENSATION.

The New Plymouth that I am introducing this week is exactly the same SIZE. It is just as POWERFUL. It is FASTER. It is ten times as SMART. And it is priced as low as $495.

Two years ago, if anyone had told me such a thing could happen, I would have said it couldn't be done. It still seems fantastic, but nevertheless it is TRUE.

The depression has caused much hardship, but it has also brought us many benefits. It has made men THINK. And being forced to think, we have found new ways to overcome obstacles.

In creating the New Plymouth we had the problem of incorporating many new and important engineering improvements in a bigger and better automobile for less money.

In prosperous times we never could have done it. But under the pressure of adverse conditions we discovered necessity was the mother of INVENTION and that the seemingly impossible COULD BE DONE.

When you see this car, I ask particularly that you note its larger, roomier body. It is a BIG car, a more beautiful car, with longer wheelbase, with increased power, speed and performance. You will find that the 1932 Plymouth includes every feature that the most modern car can have. Above all it has one advantage found in NO OTHER car in its price class . . . Patented Floating Power.

This is a revolutionary engine mounting that does away with vibration completely. It was created by Chrysler engineers exclusively for Plymouth, DeSoto, Dodge and Chrysler cars.

I think you will be impressed by the wonderfully easy-riding qualities of the New Plymouth. In my opinion you will find it is the most comfortable car you have ever driven.

Also you can't help but be impressed by its extreme ease of handling. With the new Automatic Clutch it is almost effortless to drive. The Hydraulic Brakes make you safer and surer.

But I am really publishing this advertising to get you to go and SEE this car. After all, seeing is believing, and like myself you never would have believed it possible.

The New 1932 Plymouth is now being shown for the first time by 10,000 DeSoto, Dodge and Chrysler dealers all over America.

High Priced Beauticians

Marinello trains beauticians for the most expensive shops, where women spend liberally to obtain the highest grade of work. In these shops the operators, managers and owners naturally make the most money. The work they do must be of the highest order to meet the exacting standards of a wealthy clientele. But—that's where the big money in the field of beauty culture lies.

Why Not Train for Big Money

Let other girls worry along in small, poorly patronized, poorly paid side street shops. Protect yourself from such a fate by studying the Marinello System.

BIG SHOP OWNERS WANT MARINELLO GRADUATES. THEY FEEL SAFE EMPLOYING MARINELLO OPERATORS AND KNOW THAT THEIR CUSTOMERS PREFER MARINELLO BEAUTICIANS.

Among those that we enroll you will find high salaried secretaries, trained nurses, actresses, school teachers and social workers. A Marinello training increases their earning capacity.

You, too, can reap the benefits of a Marinello training. We want girls right now to fill positions in beauty shops.

Day and evening classes now forming. Tuition payments made easy. Come in to see our school. Talk to our Counsellor or write for full particulars.

Get rid of that inferiority complex!

Knowing more than one language—learning another language is mental stimulating. It brings you confidence in yourself . . . makes you the equal of whoever you may contact. No need to feel embarrassed when some one in your crowd begins conversing in French for instance. Don't be awe-struck. Talk it yourself.

You CAN—right from the FIRST lesson—by the famous Berlitz Conversational Method. Spanish, German, and Italian, too!

Try it and see! A free demonstration lesson will prove amazing and delightful. Either call, write, or phone Harrison 0392.

I Offer You GROCERIES AT WHOLESALE

AND A WONDERFUL CHANCE TO MAKE

BESIDES.

Yes, I'll give you groceries at rock-bottom, wholesale prices and a chance to pocket $15 in a day besides! Just send me your name and I'll give you some money-making, money-saving facts that will amaze you. I'll show you how L. C. Van Allen of Illinois quit a $23-a-week job, took hold of my proposition and shortly afterward reported earning $125 in a single week. Gustav Karnath of Minnesota — farm laborer — made $20.35 the FIRST 5 HOURS. And Mrs. B. L. Hodges of New York says: "Making more money than ever before—from $18 to $20 a day." Of course, some people make more than others. But these big earnings of a few of my representatives prove the wonderful opportunities. And today I offer you a proposition EVEN BETTER than I gave these people.

No Experience Necessary.

With groceries at wholesale and $15 a day in your pocket, you would have cash to pay your bills, to buy new clothes, a radio, house furnishings or take pleasure trips. You positively don't need any capital. You don't need any experience. You don't have to take any course of training. YOU CAN START RIGHT IN MAKING GOOD MONEY THE VERY FIRST DAY.

$15 a Day for Pleasant Work.

All you do is call on your friends and my established customers in your locality and take care of their orders for my line of groceries and other household necessities. This is very pleasant work. Your own home will be your headquarters. You set your own hours and work as you please. All orders from my customers must go through your hands because I never sell through stores. You alone get all the profits. In addition I will supply you with groceries, toilet goods and household necessities at our LOWEST ROCK-BOTTOM WHOLESALE PRICES. Thus you have a wonderful opportunity to SAVE BIG MONEY as well as to MAKE BIG MONEY.

SEND NO MONEY.

If you want to, you can keep your present job and start in spare time. Oscar Stuart of West Virginia reports $18 profit in two and one-half hours' spare time. This shows the wonderful possibilities. So get the facts at once. YOU HAVE EVERYTHING TO GAIN. It costs nothing to investigate. In addition to giving you groceries at wholesale and a chance to clear $10 to $15 in a day, I also offer you a brand new Ford Tudor Sedan as an extra bonus—IN ADDITION to your large cash profits. Here's a chance you can't afford to miss. Mail coupon now for these amazing new facts.

MEN $1,554.00.

This is the actual amount of money made by one of our men for this past 4 weeks' work. You doubt that—don't you? Well, listen, brother; since the beginning of time we have had lots of people in this world who have been doubting Thomas's. They have resisted every strange thing and any new ideas that came along. Right here in this country a little over 80 years ago some states and cities passed ordinances and laws forbidding the bath tub. One state put a $25.00 tax on it. The learned men of one city claimed it wasn't healthy to take a bath in a tub in winter. See the resistance? Just a few hundred years ago they put a very learned man in prison because he was telling people the world was round, and they wouldn't let him out of prison until he signed a pledge that as long as he lived he never would tell any one again the world was round. See the doubt and resistance? Do you know that just a little over 100 years ago some students wanted to debate the question of the practicability of the locomotive, and the school board of one our nearby middle western states wouldn't let them do it. They said it was too absurd to debate in a school. The idea of a train moving 15 miles an hour through space ever being practical, and if the Lord had wanted us to have trains he would have made them. See the resistance?

So, you see, when you doubt and say it can't be done you are like the majority of people, resisting and doubting all progress—but has it made you any money?

Listen to this, then find the time to come in and allow us to prove our statements. We have a product that is selling fast. It has appeal. We have a national and international organization of over 6,000 men. Some of them were lawyers, preachers, brokers, engineers, contractors, clerks, mechanics; in fact, men from most all trades and professions, making good here. They are not crying the blues and hard times. They are making a good living and are happy.

We are going to choose 20 men who have plenty of intestinal fortitude, who are workers and of good character references, living in Chicago or within 50 miles of same, to represent us. This ad will not appear Monday, so save it now and come in and see for yourself. We will tell you truthfully if you will do for this work. If you are chosen you don't have to invest anything or put up any money and you will be carefully trained in the work by experienced men. Call Monday, 9 to 12 and 1 to 4, entire 10th Floor, Mather Tower Bldg., 75 E. Wacker-dr. Ask for Employment Mgr.

MEN.

SALESMEN AND MEN WHO ARE QUALIFIED TO LEARN HOW TO SUCCESSFULLY REPRESENT THIS COMPANY.

This is an unusual business opportunity that requires no capital, no investment or expense. If you are diligent and handle your business right it is yours permanently and your initial earnings will steadily increase with weekly pay checks, and bonus-and-savings fund will be set up for you.

This plan has enabled acceptable men throughout the entire country to double and triple their highest previous earnings and to share in our extraordinary gains in business last year. For example, as Ralph Love stated: "I am happier than I ever have been in my whole life. I would not sell my future in this business today for $20,000.00 in cash."

If mutual investigation warrants our employing you, you will have certain tasks to do every day—things which are simple enough for the average man to learn, but he must pursue them exactly as taught, with honesty of purpose and with perseverance, to merit success. You will have no investment in stock, no office expenses, no service or collection work. We sell you nothing.

New men must take the time to learn and acquire skill, but our method of work is so effective and the market is so wide that extra time can be profitably used to offset inexperience. Some men require two or three months before their earnings average more than in previous occupations; some require five or six months. We expect you to merit increased earnings as experience is gained.

For example, when V. E. McNeil, former grocer, started on this plan he made $110.00 his first three weeks, whereas his recent pay vouchers show him averaging $100.00 per week—with no investment or risk such as most ordinary retail outlets suffer. A. Orvis, former aviation instructor, made only $79.00 his first three weeks, but he made $1,255.66 his first three months and $6,962.40 his first year with us.

If you have good character references, are able to work consistently as taught, without punching a clock; if you need and want to earn a substantial income in a company that is expanding its business and revolutionizing an entire industry, apply Monday morning, 9 to 1. Personal interviews at our Chicago branch offices, listed below.

This announcement is addressed to reputable, industrious men by Electrolux, Inc., now introducing and manufacturing in this country a new mechanical specialty [not refrigeration] with amazing success.

Use This Method to Get Paying Tenants!

Every time a man calls up and asks to see one of your apartments—it means you have a better chance of keeping your apartments filled. And when the inquiries come in substantial numbers, you can pick the most desirable prospects, those who are good tenants and pay their rent promptly each month. Tribune To-Rent Want Ads get best results for landlords and agents. They attract more prospects because they carry nearly twice as much To-Rent advertising as any other newspaper. And they reach over 310,000 more families than any other Chicago daily newspaper. Call Superior 0100—Adtaker!

Commonwealth Customers—Pay LESS-for-LOANS

$2.93 is the average Monthly Cost of a $225 loan under COMMONWEALTH'S Reduced Rate. This allows 25 months for repayment. There is no lower cost than this in Chicago.

COMMONWEALTH'S rate on amounts above $100 is substantially lower than the lawful rate usually charged.

THE personal property which nearly every family owns and the signatures of husband and wife enable one to secure any amount up to $300 quickly and easily.

NO FEES. You get full amount of the loan and up to 25 months to repay. Interest at the Reduced Rate is charged only while you keep the money.

Also Salary and Auto Loans.

Estimated receipts at Chicago Monday: Cattle, 15,000; hogs, 30,000; sheep, 18,000.

Hogs on the week-end session held the gains scored Thursday and Friday, although hardly enough were available to establish a market. Fresh receipts totaled only 4,000, and 2,900 of these were billed direct to packers from other points. Only 2,200 were carried over from Friday's session.

Prices at the close were fully 20@25c above the low spot the middle of last week and 10¾@15c above the previous week's close. Top and average prices yesterday were unchanged at $4.55 and $4.25, respectively. These prices compare with $5.10 and $4.65 at the high time in March and $4.10 and $3.75 at the low time in February, which was also the bottom for the last thirty-two and one-half years. Most cattle and sheep yesterday were billed direct to packers. Six loads of wool lambs sold steady at $7.25@7.40. On the closing futures hog market September contracts were offered 25c lower at $5.25, and bids were also lowered 25c to $4.50. All other contracts were unchanged.

Overcomes Easter Slump.

It took the hog market a longer time than usual this year to shake off the effects of the Easter trade. Not until late in the week did the wholesale market for fresh pork show signs of recovering from the drive packers made to move cured meats a few days prior to the holiday.

Smoked hams were featured throughout the city, and consumers evidently bought enough to keep them out of the butcher shops for several days. At any rate, demand for fresh meat was at low ebb, and the restricted buying by retailers was immediately reflected in the conservative attitude of city butchers and such small packers that deal exclusively in fresh pork. Their purchases were smallest in recent years, but toward the end of the week, with a better tone in the wholesale market, they became aggressive. The break in midweek curtailed the movement of hogs, and, despite the fact that supplies have been running below normal for several weeks, there was another decrease. The week's run was smallest since September, 1928. In view of the fact that the government has estimated the fall crop to be 19 per cent greater than a year ago, aggregate supplies at leading markets are remarkably low. The combined total at the 11 points for March at 1,847,000 stands smallest for that month since 1913 and more than 1,000,000 below the January total. Receipts of all live stock at Chicago were exceptionally small last month. The combined total of all kinds at 989,677 was smallest for March since 1910. Cattle receipts were smallest for that month since 1886. The hog total went back to 1910 for a low, that year having the only smaller March receipts since 1893. Only two March sheep totals have been smaller since 1920.

A feature in the cattle trade is the narrowing price range. Top and average prices are closer together than at any time this year and the range narrowest for this season since 1926. Last week's top fell 60c to $8.15, while the general average showed a drop of only 15c to $6.20. The spread was cut down to $1.95. Early in January the two prices were $4.35 apart. It is usual for the price range to narrow at this time. A year ago the spread dropped to $4.20 in January to $2.40 early in April. Eastern buyers are finding the $6.00@7.00 cattle of fairly good quality and shippers are becoming more aggressive. While receipts ran short, outside orders increased.

Lambs Advance.

Advances scored in the lamb market late in the week boosted the average to $7.00, or 15c above the previous week. Outside demand was the principal support, and with shippers buying 35 per cent of the small receipts, local buyers are hard pressed to satisfy their trade. Offerings were smallest since last August, barring Christmas week. The total at the seven leading markets was 25 per cent smaller than a year ago and 40 per cent below two years ago.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 15,000 cattle, 30,000 hogs and 18,000 sheep, against 14,445 cattle, 24,616 hogs and 7,296 sheep a week ago, and 15,618 cattle, 42,686 hogs and 22,029 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 33,000 cattle, 100,000 hogs and 70,000 sheep, against 39,076 cattle, 111,073 hogs and 82,033 sheep a year ago, and 35,948 cattle, 112,688 hogs and 59,189 sheep two years ago.

I WAS A BEAUTIFUL PICTURE OF A BEAUTIFUL GIRL WHO BECAME THE MISTRESS OF THE BEAUTIFUL HOUSE IN WHICH I HUNG ON THE MOST HONORED SPOT ON THE WALL OF THE DRAWING-ROOM -
WELL, THAT WAS A WAY, WAY BACK - CANDLES WERE DISCARDED AND NEW-FANGLED - LAMPS CAME IN - MY MISTRESS BECAME AN OLD, OLD LADY - STILL I HUNG IN THE DRAWING ROOM, BUT IN NOT QUITE SO CONSPICUOUS A PLACE -
ANOTHER FIFTY YEARS - AH ME - THE GIRL WHO HAD POSED FOR ME, GONE AND ALL BUT FORGOTTEN - NOW I HUNG IN A DARK CORNER OF THE BACK HALL -
FINALLY THE ATTIC - NEW STYLES HAD COME - GOLDEN OAK AND GREEN PLUSH AND BRUSSELS CARPETS - GAS LIGHTS AND EVEN ELECTRICITY NOW, I HEARD - AN AGE IN WHICH I DID NOT FIT -
COULD I BE DREAMING? HERE WERE PEOPLE WHO DID NOT SNEER AT ME - THEY SEEMED TO REGARD ME AS A TREASURE -
A SKILLED WORKMAN SPENT LONG HOURS RESTORING ME - EVEN MY FRAME WAS MADE AS GOOD AS NEW - BUT WHY? THESE FOLKS HAD NEVER EVEN HEARD OF THE GIRL WHOSE LIKENESS I WAS -

HE BELIEVES IN THE GOODS HE SELLS—When four year old Karl Sobotka, Czecho-Slovakia's infant radio prodigy, broadcasts the spot news of Peter Rabbit's doings there is genuine conviction in his report. Karl is the Czech equivalent of the radio "uncles" of this country, entertaining the European republic's youth with nursery rhymes and fairy tales. (Acme photo.)

FOR THIS PICTURE OF PUPPIES C. V. Roberts of Cambridge, Ill., is awarded $10. This sum is paid each week for the dog picture printed in this section. All photographs submitted for such publication should be addressed to the Roto Editor, Chicago Tribune, Tribune Tower, Chicago. No photographs will be returned.

PENNSYLVANIA'S FIRST PATRIOT wears a mantle of snow. The statue of Benjamin Franklin outside the Philadelphia postoffice presented this appearance when spring was ushered in on the wings of a freak blizzard. (Associated Press photo.)

Women said: You can't use one household soap for every-thing . . .

BUT they changed their minds when they used the New Oxydol

● What a pitiful story kitchen shelves tell of women's efforts to lighten the burden of housework—shelves crowded with soaps and powders supposed to make their work easier.

But now there is one soap that does everything for you—the amazing New Oxydol!

It's easy on hands, easy on clothes and wonderful for dishes. It does more work because it makes 50% more suds—richer, quicker, more lasting suds. Clean smelling suds that float dirt out of clothes and keep it out so clothes are snowy white—suds that cut grease on dishes so they rinse sparkling clean—suds that lighten all your housework.

Try this new soap. Use enough to make rich suds—it never balls up or leaves a scum—thick foamy suds in hard water or soft water that has been turned hard by dirty clothes or dishes. Ask your grocer today for the New Oxydol.

ONE of the most important Presidential Elections in the history of the United States takes place this year. Who will be the next President?

To acquaint the public more fully with the men most prominently mentioned for the presidency, the Chicago Tribune today announces "The Game of Presidential Candidates." This interesting and patriotic game will present composite pictures of the 30 Americans most prominently considered. Can you cut apart these pictures, put them together properly and name them?

Three composite pictures will be printed in the Chicago Sunday Tribune every Sunday for ten consecutive Sundays beginning today. All that is necessary is to cut them apart, put them together properly, name them and tell which of these 30 persons you would like to see elected President and why. Clues will be printed below each composite picture to help you.

The Chicago Tribune will pay $5,000.00 in Cash Prizes for best answers—1st Prize $1,000.00, 2nd Prize $500.00, 3rd Prize $250.00, and 427 other big cash prizes. This opportunity is open to every man, woman, boy and girl.

There are no strings to this offer. No subscriptions to solicit—no tie-breakers—nothing to do but put these pictures together and send in your answer.

Start with the first set of pictures printed here. Note how simple and interesting it is to put them together. Just follow these simple rules:

• The RULES •

1. Each Sunday for 10 consecutive Sundays a Set of 3 Composite Pictures of persons who have been mentioned for the Presidency of the United States, will be printed in the Picture Section of the Chicago Sunday Tribune. Each set of pictures, when cut apart and assembled properly, will make complete portraits.

You are invited to put the pictures together and name them and tell in a letter of 50 words or less which of the 30 persons you would like to see President of the United States and why. Clues will be printed beneath each Composite Picture to help you.

The Chicago Tribune will pay $5,000.00 in Cash Prizes to the persons who send in the best answers. See Prize List at left.

An OFFICER in the REVOLUTION

On his return from an expedition into Canada, two months after the signing of the Declaration of Independence, Colonel Joseph Wait died. His comrades knew him as a gallant soldier and a staunch friend. They wanted to perpetuate his memory in the finest way they knew. They chose enduring Vermont Marble. Today, a century and a half later, the sculpture is sharp and clear as the day it was made. The rigors of a hundred and fifty winters have not effaced a single detail.

Vermont Marble still remains the supreme choice for those who wish to honor the memory of a loved one. Its rugged strength outlasts the centuries. Its warm and glowing beauty is exquisitely set forth in memorials of every size, carved by the skilled craftsmen of the Vermont Marble Company. And its price compares most favorably with that of other memorial materials.

Choose Vermont Marble—the Memory Stone—for your own family memorial. The ancients used marble for their stately temples and triumphal arches. The moderns for such beautiful shrines as the Arlington Amphitheater, the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, the Lincoln Memorial and others. There is a Vermont Marble dealer near you. Write for the free booklet, "All That Is Beautiful Shall Abide Forever." Dept. 3-H Vermont Marble Company, Proctor, Vt.

GETTING OUT THE VOTE IN GERMANY—Stretchers and wheel chairs were pressed into service to take ailing and bedridden Berliners to and from the polls in the balloting for the presidency of the reich. MIAMI FASHIONS RUSH THE SEASON IN CHICAGO—Members of the Polar Bear club, an aggregation of Chicago winter bathers, gather on a snow-covered Lake Michigan beach, the women members of the association garbed in sun-tan bathing suits, while the youngest of the group makes a larger concession to the temperature by wearing a sleeved garment. No can of Hills Bros. Coffee will ever "go stale." The vacuum can keeps it

FRESH ALWAYS!

As the accuracy of the hour-glass depends upon an even, continuous flow . . .

a little at a time

. . . so the uniform flavor of Hills Bros. Coffee is produced by Controlled Roasting—the patented process that roasts evenly, continuously . . . "a little at a time."

YOU'LL HAVE A NEW IDEA OF COFFEE VALUES, WHEN YOU TASTE HILLS BROS

You won't know the full extent of the flavor that coffee-berries can give, until you taste Hills Bros. Coffee! For every pound of Hills Bros. gives you the complete and perfect flavor of the coffee-berries. It is delightful, exquisite, refreshing! You'll have a new idea of how good coffee can taste. You'll wonder why you went as long as you did, before giving Hills Bros. a trial.

The perfect flavor of coffee can only be developed by perfect roasting. If under-roasting or over-roasting occurs, the choicest flavor is lost. And you can see how that could happen in the ordinary roasting method—several hundred pounds at a time. Big batches make accuracy difficult.

Instead of roasting in bulk, Hills Bros. roast a little at a time—with their patented, continuous Controlled Roasting process. Small quantities . . . passing continuously through the roasters with automatic control of heat . . . are always evenly roasted. Every pound of Hills Bros. Coffee has the most enjoyable flavor. And the flavor never varies.

Controlled Roasting—Hills Bros' patented process—roasts "a little at a time," instead of in bulk

No other coffee tastes like Hills Bros, because no other is roasted the same way

Every pound of Hills Bros Coffee is an ideal example of flavor-perfection

Your personal confirmation of Controlled Roasting can only come by drinking this wonderful coffee. Order some today. Ask for it by name, and look for the Arab trade-mark on the can.

HILLS BROS COFFEE FRESH AFTER FOUR YEARS IN THE CUPBOARD

Returning from a long stay in a foreign country, a gentleman went directly to his Summer lodge. There, in the cupboard, he found an unopened can of Hills Bros. Coffee. It had been purchased four years before. He opened the can — wondering whether or not the coffee had "kept." It was as fresh as though it had been roasted that day! Hills Bros.' vacuum can had preserved all the original flavor and fragrance.

The vacuum process of packing coffee is the only method that fully preserves coffee freshness — the air is removed from the can and kept out. It was originated by Hills Bros. over thirty years ago. There is no magic about a vacuum can, it will not make poor coffee good, but it will keep good coffee fresh.

Style Parade Reveals Secrets of Paris Salons

Newest Models Are Practical or Picturesque

Daytime Silhouettes Are Strict and Slender, with Flattering Details.

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Paris styles for spring and summer may be divided into two types, the picturesque and the practical. Both kinds are sane and wearable. The French dressmakers in making these fashions have been ruled by reason and nursed by knowledge that these are difficult times. Therefore, daytime silhouettes are strict and slender, with soft and flattering details.

Informal evening clothes enlarge their usefulness and function from 5 to midnight with daytime length skirts, if desired. Swellalegant for commutors and busy ladies. Waistlines may be very high or somewhat subnormal. Skirt lengths are unchanged, being long or short according to the occasions. Exaggeration occurs at the sleeves of dresses and jackets. Buzums are buzums and every dressmaking trick is used to make them feminine, not flat. To this end the waist line is molded and the neck line softened and draped. Add to this a slender skirt and you have a picture of the Paris line.

Sports clothes are short skirted and tailored. Silk, cotton, and wool striped crocheted and jersey sweaters are universal. Schiaparelli's sweaters that are only Empire waist length are strikingly new. Chanel's striped jackets and sweaters are smart. Mainbocher's one piece striped jersey dresses with self-jabots are chic and practical. Suspenders hold up the sports skirt. Metal clips and buttons fasten the sports jacket. Striped or tucked, stock or knotted scarfs are made of crochets, silk, or jersey. Sports dresses are short sleeves or sleeveless.

Few Pajamas.

Few beach pajamas this season. Aprons and coats replace them. Blue, red, green, and yellow with white or natural are the chief sports colors of the season. Ginghams, cottons, piqué, fantaisie jersies, and ribbed materials with wool burlap as a novelty are outstanding sports fabrics. Some dotted and checked materials.

Consult the pictured parade and see the suspender skirt and peasanty blouse at the extreme upper right, the short box jacket next it, and the striped silk crochet sweater and scarf next to it. Also, the plain skirt. These are details that are important to sports chic. So is the floppy, rather wide brimmed hat.

Suits are an essential of the smart wardrobe and they are made by Paris couturiers in wool, silk, linen, and cotton for all occasions. Half way down the staircase of the drawing you may see the three leading types of suits Paris offers. At the right is the longish, hip molded jacket suit with a slender, simple skirt and with sleeves that are modified leg o'mutton. Such suits are given skirts with high or normal tops and are worn with striped, white, or colored blouses and with scarfs to match.

Next on the left and in the center is the really new suit of the season with an Empire high topped, bias cut skirt, a hip length molded jacket and a blouse of blue linen that just covers the top of the skirt. Schiaparelli created this suit. Observe the big bow at the neck—one of the signs of chic this summer. At the left is the absolutely straight line, knee length jacket and tunic blouse suit that Molyneux returns to fashion fame. The subnormal waist line just at the hip bone is held by a chain belt.

In addition to these suits there are those with waist length, box or belted jackets, and high topped skirts. Double breasted jackets are still with us, particularly in waist length wrap suits. In this category go hundreds of one piece dresses in silk or wool or cotton, fastened up at the side of front or back, garnered close to the waist line and draped about the bosom with varieties of surplice and fichu, with self or contrasting sleeves, usually short and exaggerated, or mere capes, and with suit jackets for wraps. Bright, printed or white details are the insignia by which these dresses may be known.

Ensembles Are Varied.

Ensembles start off with the jacket ensemble just described. Lanvin's cape and dress ensembles vary them. At the top and extreme left is the kind of fichu drapery that many practical dresses have. Next is the Lanvin cape that buttons on the sides of the waist line and matches a one piece buttoned up dress. Next but one is the waist length jacket that Vionnet sponsors to wear with one piece dresses. Notice the very short sleeves and the longer dress sleeves

At the left of this is Schiaparelli's shawl cape that is made of crêpe silk and bordered with silver fox, and that is to be worn over coats and dresses for day and evening. Now let your eyes wander to the bottom and right of the drawing and see the afternoon ensembles and the new Paris coat. At the extreme right is the printed cape coat of dotted silk with short sleeves, and worn over a cape sleeved dress that is a hit in the Mainbocher collection. Two flowers set in the draped bosom of the dress are important, and so is the draped toque that matches the coat.

In the center is the molded coat Vionnet likes for afternoon, made of velvet or velveteen and worn with a surpliced bodice dress of printed chiffon or a plain silk frock cut along similar line. Vionnet also shows suspender frocks for afternoon, with blouses having her long, rather large

These nineteen sketches give you the highlights of the new Paris style shows. Note the slender silhouette, the bulk at the sleeves, the fit and height of the waistlines, the importance of prints, the suspender skirt, the fichu draped bodice, the striped silk crochet scarf and sweater, the three different types of suits, the Empire waistline for the suit, the old reliable straight suit with knee length coat and tunic blouse, the bulky sleeves on the molded jacket suit. . . . Observe the three coats that are shown at the bottom, and note the necklines, the closings, and the sleeves. Then take in the day length evening ensemble at the center top, the long sleeved dinner dress and its lace hat. At the bottom is the formal evening silhouette with its new high front neckline and wide strap back, its molded and flowing silhouette, and its trailing back skirt; the trailing, formal evening cloak, and the short, fur trimmed evening cape that is worn with an ankle length frock, having a high waistline.

Parent and Teacher Need to Unite on Topic of Homework

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

IF the subject of home work crops up again and again in this column it is because over many a long year in the life of each child and each family it crops up again and again, day after day, week after week, in thousands of homes all over these United States.

We go back to it again because every afternoon or evening the same battles are fought, the same struggles gone through anew. Many a family circle could testify to the ragged nerves, the unhappy, tense faces, impatience, irritation, even quarrels and tears that follow in the train of home work.

Of course this isn't always true. Some schools and teachers plan home work so wisely, some parents manage it so smoothly that the scenes just described don't take place, and so members of those families may read this and dismiss it as so much nonsense.

But it isn't. The home work blues have dimmed and are dimming the cheerful rosiness of life to so many families that something needs to be done about it. Perhaps we may be able to help at least some children, and some parents, and some teachers if we partly thrash things out here today.

Need for Coöperation.

Previously our energies in this column have been devoted to the idea, first, of not having any home work up to the eleventh or twelfth year. And, second, of having less home study when it is given and having it of a different character—that is, not mechanical or plodding but interesting and creative.

But today we're going to deal more with things as they are, not with ideal conditions, and see if both parents and teachers might not improve existing conditions, since these things can't be changed all at once. If home and school would get together a great deal could be done. Also, and this is a point for teachers—if teachers would get together over the length of their assignments it might prevent some of the overloading.

Right here, before I go further, I'd like to quote from the letter of a correspondent of mine on the coast who has been through the home work mill and has some ideas on the subject as well as still some years ahead of it with her child:

"First, I am against all home work for children until they reach the sixth or seventh grade, and then a minimum of it. Too many outside activities are not good. It is a drain both mentally and physically. Home work has been a nightmare in our house, too, but it has not been altogether the fault of the home work.

"Some children are not and never will be natural students, and such children need the direction of a person who realizes this and one who has been trained to teach a child how to study. As I see it, the biggest fault in the schools is in not teaching the children how to study.

"Briefly, in regard to this home work question, I believe that no child should be required to do work at home unless the teacher absolutely knows the child understands it. And no impatient person should ever attempt to help a child

Madly Jealous Wives Are Not Such a Rarity

By Doris Blake.

"BUT there couldn't be a woman like that! There just couldn't be!" Such was my voiced opinion on finishing the novel, "Forever and Ever," by Warren Spencer [King, publisher]. "A woman could not live and be so madly, insanely, cruelly jealous as that!"

And I'm not wholly unversed in the ways of the jealous maddened. In my capacity alone as adviser and confidante I've met up with many experiences in which the demon himself figured prominently, to say nothing of his minor ramifications.

Women, times without number, have confessed to jealous natures. Men, too. But the admissions seemed to modify the seriousness of the vice. Jealousy has been frankly admitted as the cause of boy and girl affair upheavals. And no one of us permitted to live long enough for ripely mature observation but has come first hand upon the working of the green eyed monster.

Not a Rarity.

Even so, I still was not prepared for the general reaction among friends and acquaintances to the fictional character, Constance, the madly jealous wife in "Forever and Ever." Neither was I prepared for the general outbursts of sympathy extended the poor devil who had the misfortune to fall in love with and marry the distrustful shrew, Constance.

The odds to date, at least, stand overwhelmingly against my sweet and simple faith in women. Jealous wives, it would seem—irrationally jealous wives are not the occasional phenomenon I so fondly imagined. Not according to these first hand reports of friends and acquaintances who stoutly affirm that among their friends and kin are to be found exact counterparts of the fictional wife presented by Mr. Spencer. Counterparts, that is, in the extreme jealousy of their natures and given, as was Constance, to continuous upbraiding of their husbands for imagined disloyalty.

Is it possible that there are so many wives with minds and hearts constantly clouded with suspicion? Are there many women who on a faint clew can and do build a mountain of damning evidence to confront their mates with? Are there many women who let reason fly to the winds for an orgy of accusations and recriminations?

Let's hope that those who claim such wives are common are only unfortunate in their particular acquaintances. That women who lead mates lives of misery because of incurable jealousy are only occasional happenings. That they are freaks, unbridled, undisciplined, monstrously possessive women, grossly intolerant and by their very nature could not abound in any particular numbers.

Perhaps men (husbands, that is) are better qualified to discuss the point than women. They are in the position to give an idea of how rampant is the disease among wives. Whether they will tell is another question. Their own distorted position, their misunderstood, debased position would naturally create a reticence so that figures would be impossible to get.

Result of Jealous Outbursts.

However, this Constance woman of Mr. Spencer's novel presents a picture of the lengths to which repetitious jealous orgies lead. You may, on reading the book, believe the husband's conduct was not always above suspicion. Nevertheless, the process of inhuman hardening in the female soul bears study and is our reason for recommending to wives jealously inclined a study of the character, Constance. Some one once said that every irrational jealous outburst leaves a coat of shellac on the heart until eventually all fine feeling is interned within.

How much of the distrust of men, the basic point of unreasonable wifely jealousy,

Cheesecakes Recall Days of Early Greece

American Variety of This Delicacy Can Compete with Best of Any Age.

By Mary Meade.

CHEESECAKE . . . ummmmm!

Modern American cheesecake may seem the most modernistic of desserts, but it is the oldest sweet on record—the classic of after-dinner service. The Greeks offered cheesecakes to their gods, and sang about them in their poetry. In fact, as far back as written language goes we find mention of cheesecake.

Even the abstemious Socrates, whose final draught was hemlock, delighted to receive cheesecakes from his friends. Fable has it that when Xanthippe, his scolding wife, threw such a gift to the floor and stamped upon it, Socrates proved the collossal equanimity of his nature by remarking, "At any rate, you will not have any of it yourself."

Treatises on the art of making cheesecakes were written in the days of early Greece. Ancient scholars, Aegimus, Hegesippus, Metrobius, and Phaetus, are remembered throughout the ages by the good cooks of today, solely for their contribution to cookery.

The sweetmeats of the early epicures are fully recorded in the painstaking dialogues of Athenaeus, who lived and loved cheesecake in the latter half of the second century. He lists the various types known to the Greeks in palate-tickling profusion. Another early historian describes them as being "compounded of cheese and milk and honey—almonds with soft rind, and nuts, which boys are very fond of." In such high repute was this prime table delicacy held among the classics that a village was named "Cheesecake," according to the historian Demetrius.

Service Was a Ritual.

Among the Greeks, the serving of cheesecake was a ritual. One type was consecrated to Diana, "brought into the temples of the goddess, and to the places where the three roads meet, on the day when the moon is overtaken in its setting by the rising of the sun." And we are assured that this ceremony brought unfailing pleasure to the goddess. Another type was the invariable gift from the bridegroom to the bride. This cake was roasted on the coals, and the friends of the bridegroom were invited to eat it, served with honey.

These ancient delicacies were the forerunner of the cheesecake as it is found today in Germany, England, France, Austria, and every civilized country in the world. They are known abundantly in Germany in large round luscious form, made from the German schmierkase. These are perhaps the most glorious manifestation of cheesecake on the continent. This cake recipe in many an American hostelry and family kitchen is as carefully guarded as the family plate and escutcheon.

While Germany and Switzerland may quarrel as to the antiquity of their cheesecakes, it is in England that the cooks have expressed great flights of imagination in their variations of cheesecakes. An almond cheesecake, with the flavor of orange flower water, lemon, orange, and citron, is one of these historic masterpieces.

However, though our national food consciousness and knowledge is somewhat looked down upon by other countries, our American cheesecake may hold up its golden head with the best of cheesecakes of any country or period. In delicacy, flavor, substance, and spirit, it is the peer of any dessert in the world. And like our European neighbors, we, too, have many interesting variations of our cheesecakes.

Possess Fragility of Cake.

Inasmuch as cheesecakes possess all the charm and fragility of other cakes, they merit the careful mixing and baking that is accorded to the latter. They are best baked in a moderate oven with a temperature of 325 to 350 degrees Fahrenheit for about one hour, or until they have "set." Instead of removing them from the oven at the termination of the baking period, they should remain in the oven to cool. Open the door wide and turn off the heat for the cooling. Then they may be removed and made ready for the luncheon, tea, or dinner service.

Turning the clock back for the cheesecakes a moment, let's consider their ingredients. Our standard American—and foreign recipe, too, calls for the use of cottage, or "pot cheese" as it is named abroad. Other American recipes, and these are delightfully new, incorporate delicious cream cheeses. To these recipes, the cook may add her own ingenious touches of varied flavorings, chopped nut meats, raisins, currants, and the like. One fact worth remembering is that cottage cheese, if it is to be used in cheese cakes, should have the excess moisture removed before it is incorporated in the cake. This is done by pressing the cheese through a sieve, or by placing the cheese in a square of cheesecloth, gathering up the corners, and squeezing the cheese in the improvised bag. Cream cheese does not possess this excess moisture, and so may be added to the cake mixture in its own creamy form.

Resembles Custard Pie.

Zwieback crumbs, graham cracker crumbs, cookie dough, bread dough brushed with melted butter, and fine, sifted bread crumbs may be the backbone of the cheesecake. For most cheesecakes consist of such a crust over which is poured the rich cheese filling, and with a nice, firm [but tender!] backbone, the filling does not disastrously penetrate. The result should be similar to that of a com-

Tips to Bride on Requisites for New Home

May Elaborate or Curtail Linen Lists as Budget or Needs Direct.

Etiquette queries should be accompanied by a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Helen Bartlett, Chicago Tribune.

By Helen Bartlett.

IT isn't one bit too early to begin turning our attention to the needs of spring and summer brides. Depression or no depression, the crop of brides is as inevitable as the arrival of the month of June.

It is, though, a bit too early to make definite plans about the always important business of dress. It's best to wait until the spring fashion furore has settled down to a milder breeze of genuine smartness. The truly smart things will survive and any number of trick things will be discarded.

But now is a good time to begin thinking about the contents of what we used to call the "hope chest," that supply of linens and laces for the bride's future home. Back in the dear dead days this was a heterogeneous assortment of doilies, tea towels, table cloths, embroidered pillow cases, and what have you—depending much on the girl's ability to hem or embroider and the intensity of her mother's desire to see her "settled down."

Guided by Budget.

Nowadays, girls don't give a thought to a trousseau of any sort until the wedding date is set, or until an apartment is selected. Then, knowing just how many rooms they have to furnish, just what colors they want and, above all, just what type of things they want, they can set out to buy.

No intelligent girl would start furnishing her house without a budget—so much for linens, so much for kitchen ware, so much for furniture. This budget is something each girl must make out for herself; she knows her own resources best. And she knows best, too, what sort of things to buy. If she's a color fan, she selects her colors judiciously—and sticks to her schemes. Even, in this frank age, she can ask her friends to stick to them when they've a mind to give gifts!

In selecting things for her house, the scale on which she is going to live is of great importance to the bride-to-be. If she is going to have an elaborate establishment, do a good deal of entertaining, or belong to a social set where a lavishly equipped home is almost a necessity, her household needs are quite different from those of the girl who is starting out in a kitchenette apartment.

Suggested Linen List.

This linen list is a skeleton; it may be elaborated if need be or trimmed down to suit the pocketbook or purpose.

One dozen bath towels.
Two dozen hand towels
One dozen guest towels.
Three bath mats
One dozen wash cloths.
One large dinner tablecloth.
One dozen large dinner napkins.
Two medium sized tablecloths.
Two dozen napkins.
Two breakfast sets.
Two luncheon sets.
Linen runner.
Lace runner.
One dozen small napkins [tea or cocktail].
Tray cloths.
Silencing cloth.
Mats [to put under hot dishes].
Bureau covers.
Table covers.

For bed linen, the average requirements follow:

Each bed:
Three pair of sheets.
One pair of blankets.
Three pair of pillow cases.
Eiderdown comforter
Mattress cover.
Counterpane.

Counterpane, comforter and, perhaps, if the girl likes color, the sheets and pillow cases, should not be purchased until she has a definite idea of the bedroom colors she prefers. It's always wise to have the spread harmonize, if not match, with the curtains and other color in the room.

Kitchen linens are inexpensive and this is a plentiful supply for the average small household.

One dozen glass towels.
Two dozen dish towels.
Six roller towels.
One dozen dish cloths.
Six pot holders.
Three ironing sheets.
Cleaning cloths.
Dust cloths.

Color Scheme for Kitchen.

Kitchen ware doesn't come under the heading of linens but it's a good idea to order these things as early as possible to have that much done and out of the way before starting on real furniture.

The best plan is for a girl to go over her mother's kitchen which, it can be assumed, is well equipped. If she does this thoroughly, she won't overlook the smallest measuring spoon, corkscrew, or ball of twine. If she writes down everything she can buy them all at once. The ten cent store is a shopper's heaven for small things.

A kitchen without a color scheme just doesn't exist in these gay days, and once the bride decides on hers she can get every kitchen accessory from basting spoon to roasting pan in exactly the color she prefers.

Meals a la Carte Assure Success of Women's Dairy

SWANNANOA, N. C.—(AP)—Individual feeding charts for cows—bovine meals à la carte—have helped to bring success to a dairy farm here owned and operated by women.

In the dairy run by Miss Mary E. Griffith and Miss R. Hamilton no two cows in the herd of 35 are fed alike. Each cow's ration is recorded on a card.

Milk for babies is a specialty of the dairy, but this trade alone was found unprofitable. So a line of milk for all members of the family was added, and now a special milk is packed for tubercular patients.

Milk for each type of trade is selected with care, and only certain cows furnish baby milk, while others produce family milk and still others that for the sick.

Barns, milk houses, and other buildings were designed by the women owners, and constructed of native stone as far as possible.

A wild pasture of 180 acres is divided in three sections and the cattle are rotated from one to the other.

Classic Cheesecakes of Early Greece Were Forerunner of Modern After Dinner Delicacy

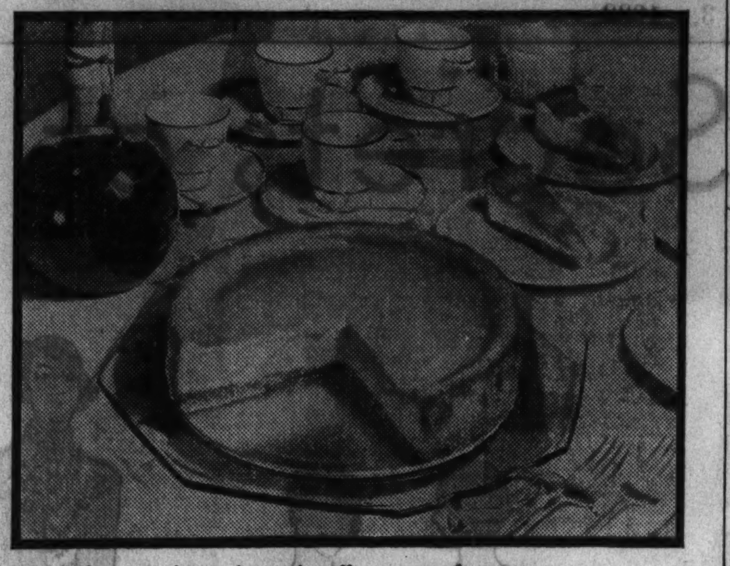
pleted custard pie—a soft, delicate crust with a dry bottom. When the crumbs are used, about two-thirds of them are taken to line the spring form or cake tin, and then the remaining crumbs are lightly sprinkled over the top [before baking].

Although we Americans like to expedite our cookery processes as much as possible, we can expend a little extra effort on our cheesecakes. By that I mean make a number of little cakes instead of the one large cheesecake. These are particularly nice and well behaved if invited to an afternoon tea. The continental custom is to wrap the cheese filling in rolled blankets of bread dough and serve them hot.

Tarts Use Pie Dough Base.

Dainty cheese tarts are an epicurean achievement, too. These can be made with a rich pie dough for a base, or the zwieback or graham cracker crumbs. Roll the pie crust, and press it into muffin pans. Trim off any ragged edges. Then pour in the cheese mixture so that the shells are about two-thirds full and bake as directed. Serve these with a dusting of fine confectioner's sugar, a rosebud of sweetened whipped cream, or a demi-tasse spoonful of jelly or jam.

If you would like another variation, make little horns of your dough, stuff it with the cheese, and bake as usual. And, before we forget it, sprinkle the sugar over the tarts, horns, or whole cake while it or they are yet warm. Count on the fact, too, that the large cheesecake will require approximately an hour's cooling in the oven before it may be removed.



Good cheese cake and good coffee—a perfect combination and a satisfying finishing touch to any meal.

CREAM CHEESE CAKE.

1 package of zwieback.
2 tablespoons of butter.
2 tablespoons of sugar.
1 cup of sugar.
2 tablespoons of flour.
¼ teaspoon of salt.
5½ cakes of cream cheese.
1 teaspoon of vanilla.
4 eggs.
1 cup of cream.

Roll the zwieback into crumbs; add the butter and the two tablespoons of sugar, which have been creamed together. Blend thoroughly and put into a nine-inch spring form mold, and press down evenly on the bottom.

Mix the cup of sugar with the flour, and salt, and cream thoroughly with the cream cheese. Add the vanilla and yolks of the eggs, and beat; add the cream and beat again. Fold in the stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour the mixture on top of the crumbs, and bake in a moderately slow oven [325 to 350 degrees], about one hour, or until the mixture is set.

COTTAGE CHEESE TARTS.

½ cup of butter [unsalted preferred.]
1 cup of bread flour.
¼ cup of sugar.
Yolk of 1 egg.
¼ cup of butter.
1 egg yolk.
2-3 cup of powdered sugar.
¼ cup of seedless raisins.
Grated rind of one-half lemon.
1⅓ cups of cottage cheese, fine and dry.

Make a dough of the first four ingredients. Knead until fine in texture; toss on a slightly floured board, and roll one-half inch thick. Place the dough in a spring form, cake pan, or pie tin, and bake in a moderately hot oven [350 to 375 degrees F.] until the dough is half baked. Remove and cool while you prepare the filling.

Cream the salted butter, add the sugar, and cream together. Add the egg yolk, and cream again. Add the other ingredients, separately, and combine well. Put the mixture in the half-baked shell, and bake in a moderate oven about thirty-five minutes [350 degrees F.], or until the filling is set. Sprinkle with sugar while still warm. Cool in the oven.

CHEESE CAKE.

2-3 cup of butter.
1 1-3 cup of sugar.
1⅓ cups of cottage cheese.
¼ to ½ cup of raisins [according to taste].
8 eggs.

Cream the butter, add the sugar, and cream together. Beat the egg yolks lightly and add to the mixture. Add the cheese which has been strained, or squeezed dry. Add the raisins. Whip the egg whites until stiff, and fold into the cake. Pour into a greased cake mold, and bake for about an hour in a moderate oven [325 to 350 degrees F.]. Cool in the oven.

Evening Gown of 1932 Known by Neckline

PARIS.—(AP)—Evening gowns for 1932 are known by their necklines.

The days when designers slashed a gown to the waist, and let it go at that are gone.

Decolletés are complicated affairs these days, for—high or low, broad shouldered or narrow—they all display an intricate cut which partially conceals the back.

The décolleté with wide draped fichus covering the shoulders and forming a V front and back is one of the favorites.

Another slashes the back into intricate straps partially covered by a scarf draped softly about the shoulders.

Wandering Band.

A third drapes one band of material down the front of the bodice, around the waist and up across the shoulder blades, while a fourth has a bare back, broken only by one narrow center spine strap.

Colors are equally sophisticated. Soft tones called aquarelles, blending several hues in an effect stronger than pastel tints, are the order of the day.

There are water greens, soft blues with a touch of lavender, canary yellows, peach pinks, and such deeper tones as geranium red, gentian blue, and midnight blue. Black and white are still on the evening color card.

Dull Surfaced Fabrics.

The fabrics for milady's spring dancing frock are generally dull surfaced, with the new pebbly crêpe flamisol, mat satin, lace, and chiffon among the most popular.

The evening silhouette is as slim as a wand with a waistline a bit above the normal line, fitted hips and a soft full instep length skirt.

Flowers contrasting with the color of the gown are often used in a narrow garland straight across the front of the belt, a pert row across each shoulder, or a splashing effect here and there on the skirt.

THIS is the season of the year which finds practically every housewife deep in spring cleaning or in the throes of moving. Either of these entails a tremendous amount of work, with the customary problems of decorating, furnishing, and the like to beset you. Not the least of these problems will be the disposal of articles which have accumulated in the last year and which you no longer want. Things have a way of piling up, whether you are mistress of a large home, with attic and cellar and storeroom, or the overseer of a tiny kitchenette apartment.

There will be clothing which has hung forgotten for months, books and magazines grown to stacks of enormous heights, odd chairs and other pieces of furniture stowed away in hidden spaces, curtains, rugs, and draperies which no longer fit in your scheme of decoration, dishes which are remnants of sets you no longer possess, and countless other articles for which you will have no use. And while this becomes your problem, it might mean the solution of the ones which beset so many other housewives in less comfortable circumstances.

In countless homes throughout Chicagoland families are suffering from the lack of just the things which you are planning to discard, and their happiness and comfort would know no bounds were these articles to come into their possession. Won't you let me tell you about some of these needs which have come to my attention?

There's Mrs. M., whose husband has been out of work for over a year. She needs a gas range and simply cannot buy it. And Mrs. W., who has four children, asks for blankets and a garbage burner. Like the majority of the people who write to me these days, there has been no employment in this family for months. Mrs. B thinks she could partially solve the depression problem by renting a room or two for light housekeeping. However, she has not the wherewithal to equip them, so could use many of the articles you will be discarding. Rugs, curtains, and kitchen utensils would help immensely.

Mr. and Mrs. T. are an elderly couple who once knew fairly prosperous days, but Mr. T. lost his business about two years ago, and since then has not been able to find employment. They have no income. Mrs. T. writes me that she could rent a room and thereby secure enough revenue to provide their food, at least, if she could get a single bed and mattress or a day bed. Mrs. U. asks for a cook stove and two or three chairs. Her family is experiencing real discomfort because there aren't enough chairs to go around.

And from a small town in Michigan, Mrs. S., a former Chicagoan, sends a plea for any kind of fruit or preserving jars. Her husband hasn't worked for some time and she is trying to solve the food problem for her family by canning the vegetables generous neighbors donate to her.

These and countless others are the urgent needs which this department is hoping to fill. In every instance, securing the article would promote comfort and help to eradicate suffering. I am sure, if you take inventory at housecleaning or moving time, you will find that you can donate something which will be of real use to these unfortunate people.

Then there's Mrs. D. B., who has the care of an almost blind sister. A morris chair or other type of lounge chair would mean real comfort for the invalid, and she'd appreciate having an old open book rack.

New Furniture Styles for the Bedroom

Modernists Have Created Simple but Intriguing Designs for the Conservative.

By Edith Weigle.

THAT modern or contemporary furniture has taken great strides toward beauty and simplicity in the last few years, in this country, is very evident by the latest examples of well known designers both in the middle west and the east. Although the average person is still a bit wary of filling an entire house or apartment with contemporary pieces, interest in the movement is increasing and few, indeed, are the householders who have not a single modern lamp, screen, end table, rug or fabric in their homes.

Look about your own living room or bedroom and you will be surprised to see how many articles of contemporary design you own. Perhaps your floor is covered with that grand new type of carpet which appears to have no seams and can be combined in various soft colors in most interesting ways. Perhaps you have a small metal and glass smoking table or one of those ideal bridge lamps that throws the light on the ceiling so that it is evenly reflected throughout the room. Or one of the attractive white alabaster or porcelain table lamps that give such charming accents to any apartment. You see, you don't have to be extreme or bizarre to be modern. The old criticism about the strangeness of the new designs won't hold.

"What is not done for fashion will never go out of fashion," said a famous French creator. It is only the stunt furniture, the things that were part of a fad, that were quickly dated. Styles that are deeply rooted in real craftsmanship, real sincerity, good taste, a sense of fitness and proportion will never be things of the moment.

And before one condemns the whole modern movement in furniture designs with a single remark one should remember that even Chippendale made mistakes.

There is, of course, good modern and bad modern, just as there are good styles in womens' fashions and ugly ones. If you want the best in furniture you naturally go to the best designers, the best manufacturers. Very little modern furniture, to date, has been made inexpensively, because most of it uses the finest and rarest woods and because so much hand labor is required in its construction. Perhaps one of the greatest reasons for its slow acceptance in this country [it is as everyday a matter as grass, in Europe] is this very matter of price. It is still too costly for the average purse.

However, as time goes on, good modern furniture will be made at lower prices. In fact, we know of at least two enterprising manufacturers who are now producing excellent contemporary pieces at very reasonable prices. From time to time we have shown pictures of this merchandise and it can be bought in our Chicago stores. Chairs, tables, couches and desks for the living room, the porch and sun room seen at one local shop are attractive both in appearance and price. Extreme and eccentric? Not in the least.

The photographs today show how conservative the new trend really is. No rakish lines, peculiar color combinations, or outlandish materials are found in the articles illustrated. The bedroom group is made by one of the best manufacturers in Grand Rapids; the modern dressing table is designed by Pola and Wolfgang Hoffman and made in New York. So, there you have the east and the west of it.

Burl walnut is used to make the bedroom suite shown and the grain of the wood is its only decoration. Plain, simple masses, rather than small, choppy, carved planes, are characteristic of the best contemporary furniture. Line and proportion are everything.

One extremely modern lamp with circular steel bands about its base is placed on the small cabinet between the beds; another one along more conventional lines appears at the left in the picture. It is seen on a nest of tables.

The wallpaper in this room is a plaid pattern in soft, pastel shades. The window draperies are also modern in character, and a luxurious deep piled rug of contemporary design is used on the floor.

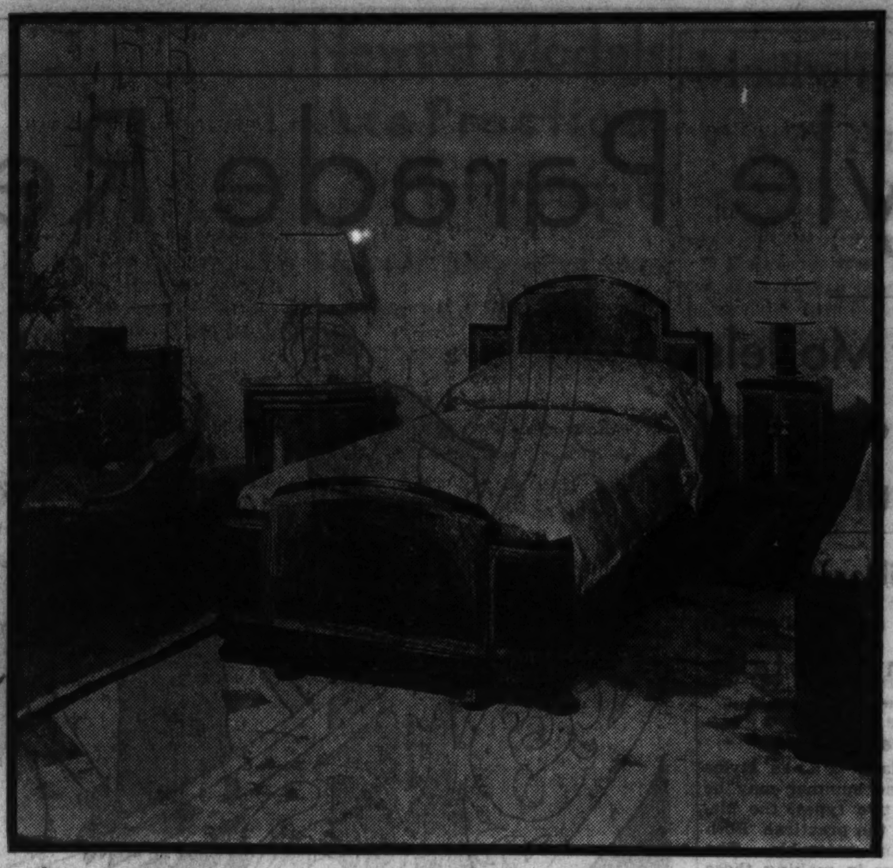
The interesting dressing table in the other picture is in a bedroom of a New York city apartment. The work of Pola and Wolfgang Hoffman, among the foremost of American designers, it is constructed of silver maple burl with ebonized edges.

On either side of the mirror are two cabinets with four compartments, each of which has three sliding drawers. Plenty of space, you see, for all one's lingerie and trinkets. Three mirror-top shelves are placed on each side of the mirror, and on the top of the cabinets are ball shaped lights of gray silk trimmed with black ribbon.

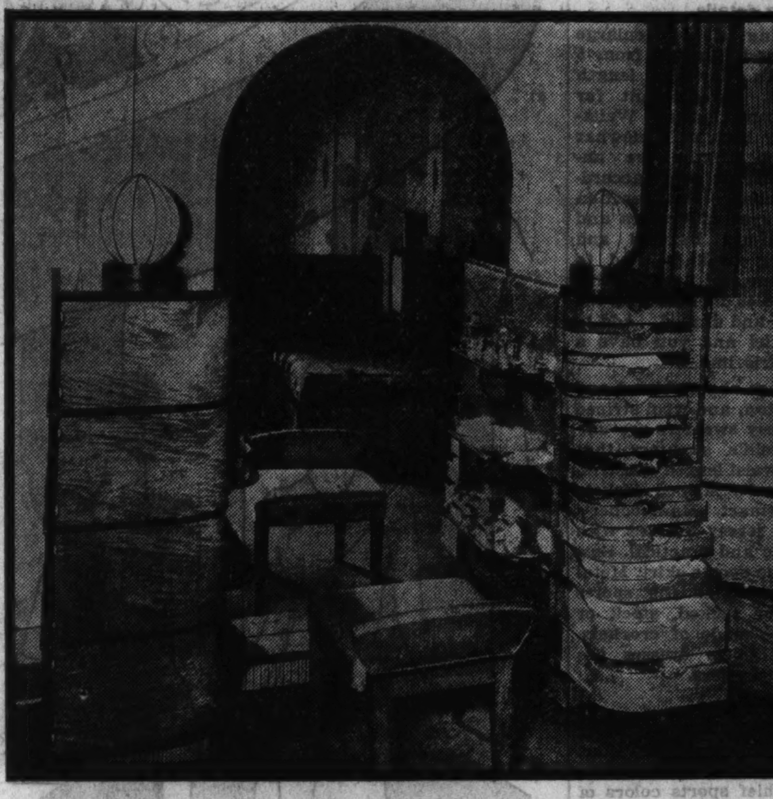
The color scheme in this room is gray, silver and blush rose. An imported German washable paper covers the walls. It is composed of the three shades mentioned.

Before the dressing table is an adorable little chair with a very chic, stubby little back. It is covered in a copper colored material.

An eastern furniture manufacturer is now bringing out a new line of pieces designed by the Hoffmans which will be of especial interest to all those who enjoy excellent examples at prices lower than those of special, custom built originals.



A bedroom suite of modern design, extremely simple in line, is made in burl walnut by one of the Grand Rapids makers of fine furniture.



This dressing table of silver maple burl designed by Pola and Wolfgang Hoffman is composed of two cabinets having many sliding drawers.

Breton Jobless Urged to Revive Lacemaking Art

RENNES, France.—(AP)—Breton unemployed women are being urged to revive the ancient Breton lacework and hand embroidery art, which has almost died in the last quarter century.

In 1899, there were 30,000 women in Brittany who earned their living at the family fireside by making laces and embroidery.

Their art was much appreciated in Paris, New York, and London.

Machines killed the industry, but now that unemployment is stealing its way into the country of these faithful folk they are thinking of going back to the old hand ways.

This Season's Street Clothes Unite the Newest Styles with Utility

Furless Coats and Suits Are as Popular as Furred Models

Fashion Shows Stress Reasonably Priced, Clever Ensembles for Your Wardrobe.

By Rhea Seeger.

A SHOCKINGLY large portion of every woman's clothes allowance is spent for street clothes, quite necessarily so, since we are, according to our best friends and sincerest critics, an enthusiastic company of inveterate gadabouts and never to be found at home. With this reputation to sustain it is no wonder that we have acquired another equally well earned, as being the most correctly costumed shoppers [window and otherwise] that charmingly dominate any street scene.

It really makes very little difference how modest or how munificent the sums that are spent for such clothes. The indisputable fact remains that American girls are well groomed perfection when costumed for the street. You'll see them everywhere and during every hour of the day all arrayed in fashion's newest color, all hatted in the same slightly rakish, less than nothing millinery models, smartly shod and correctly gloved, all dashing about with that air of distinction that is inseparable from all fashion wise, clothes conscious shop hounds.

This spring, as formerly, will see street clothes featured in every collection and in every store and shop in Chicago. The spring fashion shows stressed practical and wearable models at prices that were and are a revelation as well as a financial relief. Furless coats and suits have almost out smarted the fur trimmed models. Clever designers add jackets to spring dresses, practically suit-ing them for street wear, and one piece frocks have high necklines and scarfs that transform indoor informality into distinctive outdoor chic. Every kind of street model has been designed. All the newest fabrics that you have been reading about have been used. Every fashionable color can be found; you can make your selections immediately!

Four Wearable Models.

Four sketches from one collection have been made in adjoining columns. Four brilliant examples of what is smart and practical and wearable for spring wardrobes for the street. Beginning at the left, the afternoon dress combines two colors. The short puffed sleeves and the bodice top are of a soft dusky shade of bois de rose. The rest of the dress is a dramatic contrast in deeply crinkled black crêpe. A mesh belt with rose quartz motifs marks the normal waistline, while a plaited fullness is placed at the side front sections. With this costume is worn a black silk straw, turbanlike hat shirred to a top knot that holds clusters of white flowers.

The inevitable blue spring suit is shown at the extreme right, but this selection is a blue of lighter cast with lots of white, a shade known as cadet blue. This is called a two piece suit, but numerically it has three: A nicely tailored skirt, a white pique sleeveless waistcoat with pearl buttons, and a short coat with revers of white pique. Pique cuffs extend well below the cuffs of the coat sleeves, and a collar, also of pique, is attached.

With it is worn a brimmed straw sailor hat of navy blue combined with a navy blue alligator leather handbag for excellent contrast. This model is one of the smartest street suits the average budgeteer will and can select.

Popular Foundation.

The indespensable foundation of all spring wardrobes is the long, completely covering coat. The one sketched is of beige wool crêpe with new very puffed sleeves that end at the wrist. This is the kind of coat that is so smart with a separate fur scarf and equally chic without. The dark brown grosgrain belt is quite narrow and fastens with a gold buckle.

The modern version of a Robinhood hat dips over the right eye and gayly flaunts a dashing feather reminiscent of that sprightly rogue of Sherwood forest. The hat is fashioned of dark brown corduroy straw.

The fur trimmed suit consists of a long sleeved, extremely simple dress worn with a short sleeved waistline length coat. A lovely light blue shade of light weight woolen material fashions this stunning model. The dress is fitted closely to the figure and is guiltless of any and all trimmings. A perfect sheath of blue for the slender spring silhouette. Luxurious, huge platinum gray fox cuffs dramatize the brevity of the snugly fitted coat, an entire fox skin being wrapped around each elbow.

A hat of rough blue straw is worn with this effective ensemble. It is a small but smart model that is dressed with a veil. Shoes, handbag, and gloves should be chosen in a darker shade of blue to complete the color scheme correctly.

Chic Designs Suitably Worn with New Coats

By Clotilde.

IF you want to complete an ensemble, the lovely frock made by pattern No. 2553 will be just the thing to wear under your spring coat. The skirt part of the dress is beautifully cut, with the curved hip seaming that is so becoming and slenderizing, and the side sections are cut circular, giving the bottom a graceful fullness.

The bodice is cut in two parts, and on the front, at the shoulders, are pin tucks. The neck is prettily finished with a tiny lace vestee set underneath the scalloped edge of the dress. The pattern provides for long and short sleeves—the long ones having insets matching the vestee. These sleeves are quite full below the elbow and are set at the wrists into narrow bands.

The short sleeves are finished with a circular ruffle, and the entire dress is as easy as can be to make.

Bind or face the scalloped edges of the neck and sleeves, and, if a facing is used, lay the neck and sleeve edges of the pattern on the material, matching the grain of the cloth, and cut exactly by the pattern. Then cut the facing two inches wide. Baste the bottom edge under a narrow seam's width and stitch on the edge. After the facings have been put on, this stitched edge can be caught invisibly to the dress at intervals.

Plain or printed silk crêpe, tub silk, lace, cotton prints, and linen are all suitable materials.

A good many of the school girl's frocks show the double breasted closing, and today's little model—pattern No. 2596—in a thin brown woolen with a yellow beige mixture, and yellow organdy collar and cuffs, shows buttons accenting the double breasted waist, with buttons also on the front of the skirt. The short sleeves have turned back cuffs, and these are finished with tiny ruffles—all of the yellow organdy. The skirt is cut in three pieces, and pressed in plaits both in front and back.

This design is suitable for many washable materials, as well as the light weight woolens.

The conservative little sports type dress made by pattern No. 3448, seems to be particularly suited to some one of the thin woolens that have had such deserved popularity. And, of course, the lovely silk crêpes will make up beautifully, too.

The lines are slenderizing. The full length sleeves are prettily finished at the wrists, and the double collar is stunning. A wide patent leather belt finishes the dress perfectly.

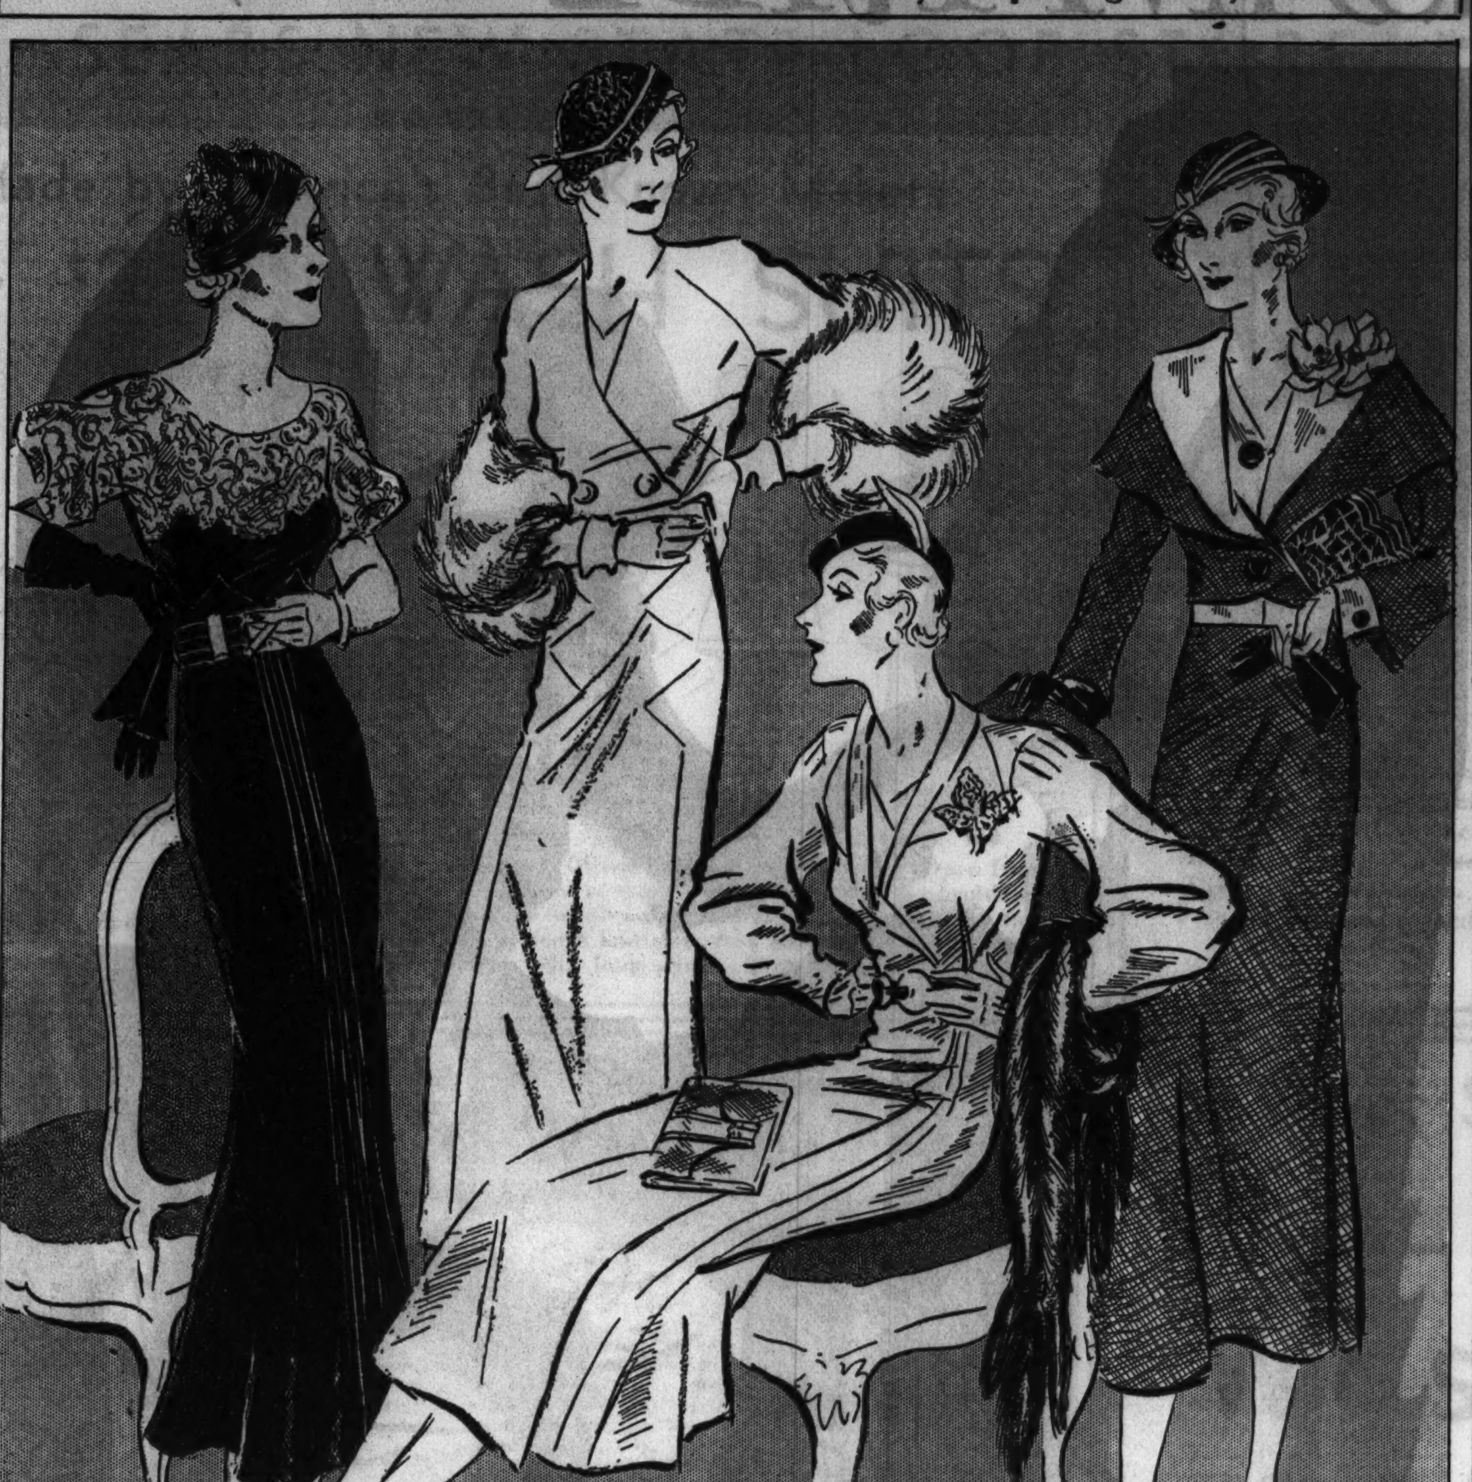
Wearable Costumes for Balmy Spring Days



The standing figure at the extreme left shows an afternoon dress of two contrasting colors of black heavy silk crepe, with bodice of bois de rose. Puff sleeves and side front fullness are new fashion notes. . . . Second, a dressy suit consisting of a slender one piece clinging-to-the-figure dress with long tight sleeves, has a short fitted-to-the-waistline coat. The coat sleeves end at the elbow and are banded with platinum gray fox. . . . The seated figure displays a new model of the furless coat made of beige wool crepe fabric. The puffed sleeves are new and extremely smart as is the narrow grosgrain belt fastening with a gold buckle. . . . The tailored street suit of light blue wool at the extreme right has a white pique waistcoat, revers, cuffs and collar for contrast. Note the brief jackets.

Parent, Teacher Should Unite on Home Study

with school work. And no mother or father should help when he or she is in a hurry to go somewhere or get something done. And no child should be made to study when he is tired."

Three Reasons from Trouble.

This letter touches some of the high spots, or perhaps it would be more descriptive to say the low spots, of this troublesome terrain. To begin with let us take the homework itself, for too often the whole fault lies there. This fault may be traceable to one of three reasons. Sometimes the lessons assigned are unreasonably long in the amount of a child's time that they will require. Sometimes the homework that is given out is of such a monotonous kind that it is a terrible bore to do it. Or it is always on one subject, which may be the teacher's specialty—or her bugbear.

If, for instance, the home study is on arithmetic every day, and a child dislikes arithmetic, the homework becomes a horror. The subject should be varied to maintain interest. And last but not least, the homework that is given out may be on subject matter that the children do not understand and they are incapable of carrying it through without a great deal of help.

For instance, suppose they are working on that pitfall of so many children and teachers—long division. If they haven't mastered it or their tables, or if the examples contain new cases, they are in for an unhappy session. A child I know who is going to a fine, progressive school comes home with French homework which at least nine times out of ten he could not do if there was not some one at home who spoke the language. So much for the fault of the homework.

Now, for the other side of the picture. What do homework conditions do that make homework a nightmare? First, there are the parents. There's probably more regular impatience and irritability shown by grownups at the homework hour than at any other time. Many grown people don't remember how hard a simple thing can be for a child.

Parents Can Help.

It's up to parents, then, as one step forward to work some sort of conversion in themselves if they have to help their children. It's also better for one person to do the assisting than for the whole family to do it in a sort of hullabaloo. If everybody takes a hand at helping, argument usually follows between the grownups as to how the algebra should be done, what is meant by the history question, and the child becomes an unhappy storm center!

Another thing that requires the exercise of judgment is fixing a time when the homework shall be done. When a child has an aversion for study it is especially hard. If you can first get them so they accept the inevitable and see that it has to be done sometime you can usually settle on a time that will suit them. After they have worked off steam outdoors the time just before the evening meal seems to work out pretty well. But the parents who have to deal with the child who is not at all cautious, or who is of the ebulliently physical type will, I must frankly admit, be apt to have a hard time.

Quiet Place Necessary.

One other home obstacle should hardly need mention, because common sense, of course, dictates that a child should either have a quiet place to go to work or that, if he has to study in the bosom of the family, he should be spared noise and distraction in the form of interesting conversation, radio, or tempting activities that would make concentration difficult.

Provided the homework is reasonable in amount and in interest, a good manager in the person of mother or father could do a great deal to banish the gloom of the homework hour.

Bright Sayings

Little Dan went out to play, and soon became very cold. When he could endure it no longer he went into the house crying with aching hands and feet.

His parents consoled him and gave him hot cocoa to drink. After he was made comfortable, his father said, "Well, son, which would you rather have—this weather or those hot days we had last summer?"

Dan thought a while and said, "I rather have some of both put together." N. M. M.

Betsy and Buddy, my little twin cousins, aged 4, have been begging for a dog for some time, and finally their mother said she would get them one in the spring.

A few days later Betsy came up to her mother and said, "Momsey, let's go to the spring today and get a puppy." P. C.

Little Mary, aged 7, was listening to the older people working a crossword puzzle and learned that "anger" meant "ire."

Later her sick sister was given soup and she didn't eat it all. Mary didn't get any, so she said: "She gets it and leaves it, and I don't get any. That's what 'ires' me." K. M.

Junior, 2½ year old boy, went out to play with his pet dog and wagon. After a little while Junior had placed his dog in the wagon, along with some stones. His mother noticed him and asked, "Junior, why have you those stones on doggie's tail?"

sleeves such as you see at the top.

The coat shown in the center at the bottom is the smart daytime coat of smooth woolen, fastened up at the side and with sleeves that are modern leg o'mutton. These coats have small collars or none and are usually worn with softly draped scarfs. The important idea of the daytime coat of this type is to hide the dress so it comes as a surprise when the coat is removed. Coats with plaited, important collars may be found in the Chanel and Patou collections.

Five to Midnight Gowns.

The five-to-midnight ensemble is the biggest news in evening styles. Look at the figures at the top, third, and fourth from the right to see it. This ensemble has a dress with a white satin, big, elbow sleeved blouse and a molded black satin skirt that is high and pointed in front, and no more than daytime length. The waist-length jacket also has big sleeves and is surplice closed and belted. The bodice is evening décolleté in back. With the jacket on it can be worn in a bus or train without impropriety.

Just below and at the left is the long sleeved, low cut dinner dress that many houses are showing. Chanel makes these dresses of lace and shows them with wide brimmed lace hats tilted by flower bandeaux.

Four figures at the bottom and the left show you the real evening silhouette for spring and summer. At the extreme left is the back and front of the formal evening silhouette. Note the high bodice line with the covered up front décolleté, the floor length skirt and the molded silhouette. In the back note the wide, contrasting color bodice straps and the trailing skirt panels. There are hundreds of variations, but this is the leading silhouette.

Next on the right is the trailing, velvet, taffeta, or broadcloth evening cloak for very grand wear. Next on the right is the ankle length evening frock, which is smart, and the short, draped cape that is seen all over Paris.

Come tumbling down,
A surprise for the children

has its beginning in youth is a question created in "Forever and Ever." How much of a part the bitter female parent may play in the fashioning of such a wife! Here we find the mother of Constance, grown older, remorseful, or, as she says, "seeing things differently," confessing a diabolical part in the training of her child.

"The man I married," she confesses to Constance's husband, "and who became Constance's father, was attractive to women. I lived in a hell of jealousy. I loved him until love was a torture. I thought he was unfaithful to me. I still don't know whether he was or not. But I accused him of it. He denied it. I said I had proof. We quarreled and I left him. I was filled with self-righteousness. . . I was bitter. Not only towards my husband but towards all men. I made up my mind that Constance should never suffer what I suffered. I deliberately set out to make Constance distrust all men. I turned her thoughts against marriage. I made her see that she would find nothing except misery."

Too late the older woman saw the wrong she had done. Explanations came too late to change the girl's nature. Her early impressions, the things put into her mind as a child, were too fixed to be eradicated.

Lost Only Thing Worth While.

Age and lonely days and lonely nights and lonely years taught this older woman, too, that self-righteous pride drives a poor bargain. "For the momentary satisfaction I gained in making a scene," she confesses, "for standing up for what we women call our pride, I lost the only thing in life worth living for—the man I loved."

The lesson of tolerance came too late.

The most helpful lesson life can teach us is tolerance. Those not lucky enough to have its advantages taught them in youth must live to learn its value later. Some learn too late to change. Nevertheless we all live to learn that without tolerance life becomes a sour experience. And here's where parents can insure for their children a life freed of many of its hardships. Teach them tolerance from earliest youth.

There are children being reared in this land of ours at this very moment whose mothers are blasting their chances for happiness just as surely as the mother in Mr. Spencer's tale blasted her child's life. Children of divorced parents, children of separated parents, and children of quarreling parents, who never hear marriage and men spoken of without the distrustful or bitter clause.

It's the rankest form of injustice, of all injustices suffered by these broken-home children, to poison their minds because of a parent's own mistake. The tragedy is that when love comes to these girls it is unhappily not enough of a miracle worker to eradicate those early, fixed impressions.

A PLEASANT RIDE

By J. FRANK DAVIS

Stone and Cothran, Theatrical Producers, Thought They Were Getting Just Another Flop When They Bought Old Baldwin's Comedy, so They Decided to Secure as Many Backers for It as Possible, to Weaken the Blow for Themselves.

JOE STONE, in the small outer office of Cothran and Stone, theatrical producers, raised his eyes from the columns of a trade magazine to survey coldly the brisk, carefully dressed actor who came smiling through the door from the corridor.

They were black, rather beady eyes, unusually suspicious, always cynical, reflecting something of the Broadway wisdom which had accumulated behind them during the fourteen years since he had entered the show business. They displayed now no interest other than a slightly belated recognition as he said, "Hello—er—Baldwin. We're not doing any casting today."

His caller nodded his graying head amiably and replied, "I didn't come in for that. I was passing by, and I thought I'd just drop in and see if you've come to any decision on that play of mine."

As Stone's face remained blank, the actor explained, standing very straight and erect—Ralph Baldwin had consciously been standing very straight and erect for more than twenty-five years in an attempt to conceal the unhappy fact that his height was only five feet seven—"I left it with Mr. Cothran, about two weeks ago. Perhaps he didn't speak of it. Not that I want to hurry you, but the season is getting along."

"Sure, he told me. We haven't had time to look at it yet," Stone said. "We have a lot of plays to read, you understand, and we've been busy considering a couple productions. If you want your script back——"

"No. No hurry at all." Baldwin, always the good actor on and off, smiled as cheerfully as though the sale of a three act comedy were a mere minor detail in a routine of professional success. "I want you to take all the time that's necessary, of course. I believe you will certainly see that it's a good play."

"That's what they all say," Stone remarked, not ill naturedly. "But what an author thinks is a good play is one thing, and what Cothran and me think we can afford to gamble thirty or forty thousand dollars of our good money on is another, if you see what I mean."

"O, but this play won't cost thirty or forty thousand dollars or anything like it," Baldwin exclaimed eagerly. "Outside of the theater rent it won't cost ten—perhaps not more than eight. And with me in the lead—you see, Mr. Stone, I'm so confident of it that I'm willing to work for two hundred dollars—and that lead is easily a six or seven hundred dollar part. I'll take a chance on getting my real money out of the royalties. It has only nine parts and two of them are bits. Your company pay roll wouldn't be fifteen hundred a week."

"You sure are one of those optimists, Baldwin," said Stone. "How much do you think leading women cost?"

"The one for this play won't cost over another two hundred," the actor assured him, "because my wife can play it. I don't know as you remember my wife; she hasn't taken an engagement for a number of years. She was—is—a good comedienne—a very good comedienne. Ora Moore is her professional name."

HE explained: "She retired temporarily to bring up the children. And later she became a—er—trifle stout. But that is of no consequence to the woman lead of this play because the script calls for her to be stout—it's a comedy character part, the same as mine. She's the old fellow's wife, you know. Oh, there are a couple of juvenile leads, but you won't have to pay more than two-fifty apiece for them. In fact, while the company needs to be competent, of course, none of them have to be at all outstanding. The old reprobate and his wife carry the show."

"Old reprobate?" queried Stone. "Whata do you mean, old reprobate?"

"Likable, philosophical, perfectly worthless old vagabond. They have always been successful if the play is written cleverly and done well, and always will be. Jefferson in "Rip;" Frank Bacon in "Lightnin';" Don Marquis's "Old Soak"—they've always gone over big. And the public is ready for another. I know it."

Baldwin unconsciously straightened his only slightly out-moded cravat, as he went on with gathering enthusiasm: "My play is located in New York, but the character is universal. They'll all like him, New Yorkers and out-of-town visitors. They can't help it; a character like that is always a scream to everybody except his own family. And there isn't any question about my being able to put it over. I had a part a little like that in a play three years ago—it didn't get into New York—died after the tryout at Rochester. My part was only a bit, and the show as a whole was no good, but the way my work went over——. Truly, Mr. Stone, I never got such laughs in my life. It gave me the idea for this Easy Elbert."

"They might laugh pretty easy at Rochester," Stone commented.

"They'll laugh at this new play, anywhere. I've packed into it all the hokum I've learned in years, but it's all put up in an absolutely new way——"

The actor-author's confident panegyric was interrupted by the opening of the door from the hall and the entrance of the theatrical firm's senior partner. Normally, Parker Cothran's manner even to lesser actors was marked by a genial suavity, but now to Baldwin's greeting he merely nodded, unsmiling, and the caller sensed that this was not a propitious moment to continue his arguments.

"I just dropped in to see if you'd read my play, Mr. Cothran," he said. "Mr. Stone tells me you haven't had time yet. Well, I'll be getting along toward The Lambs. Good morning, gentlemen."

He departed, a little too jaunty and carefree and Stone, when the door had closed upon him, remarked, "To The Lambs—but first stopping for lunch at a nickel in the slot restaurant. Well, did you fix it all right?"

Cothran frowned gloomily at his partner and said, "They won't lend us another cent."

"Oi!" cried Stone, and the exclamation of itself was ample evidence of the jolt he had received, for he had not used it before in close to ten years. "What's the matter with them?"

Cothran lifted simultaneously his eyebrows and his expensively clad shoulders. "Hard times. Tight money. Our last three productions flops. I gave them every argument in the works. Nothing doing."

THEIR combination clerk and office boy entered hastily from lunch and Stone followed Cothran to the inner office and closed the door. He took the chair at the end of the flat desk at which his senior had seated himself and bit thoughtfully at the tip of a fresh cigar.

"Well," he said, "that don't leave us but one thing to do. We gotta have money before the end of the month, and what I mean is before the end of the month. What's the name of that hick you met the other night from out west in California somewhere? Gates?"

"Tate," Cothran told him. "Sam Tate. Not California—Montana. He owns a ranch about as big as Long Island, and he's here for the winter. . . . I hate like blazes to use him. He's got too much money."

"What do you mean, too much money? Nobody has."

"Too much money for a small production," Cothran said. "I wanted to save him for a costume play with elaborate scenery. He's actually asking to be allowed to buy a piece of a show, and he could be taken for fifty or sixty thousand as well as for fifteen or twenty. And with our usual rebate on sets and costumes——"

"I know," Stone sighed regretfully. "But we haven't got any costume play."

"We haven't any play at all," Cothran reminded him. "O, we can get something that'll run a week, if we have to, but we've had three successive flops and I hate the idea of having another."

"We cleaned up a fair meal ticket on each of them."

"Yes," Cothran conceded, "but the angels lost too quickly. We can't keep on getting angels if some of them, once in a while, don't get at least a little run for their money."

Stone sat in scowling silence while Cothran got out a cigaret and lighted it. Then he said, suddenly: "The play this Baldwin says he left with you—you better read it. He thinks it's good."

Cothran delicately pinched his nostrils between a thumb and forefinger. "Great!" he said. "I read it yesterday."

"As bad as that?"

"Well," Cothran admitted, "it would be good for Elsie Dinsmore."

"I don't know her," confessed Stone. "Who has she ever played with?"

"Nobody, lately; she dates before your time. That's the point. This thing of Baldwin's would have gone over with a bang in 1885."

"He says he had a part like it three seasons ago and they fell out of their seats at Rochester."

"They might—in Rochester, Minnesota," conceded Cothran. "O, it's pretty well constructed, with some lines and situations that would have had a chance when David Warfield was playing 'The Music Master,' but today—they wouldn't fall out of their seats, but they'd run out of them. It's loaded with virtue, and the hero goes noble in the last act."

"Couldn't we get a new last act?"

Cothran shook his head. "It's as good with this last act," he said, "as it would be with any. The whole thing is absolutely wet."

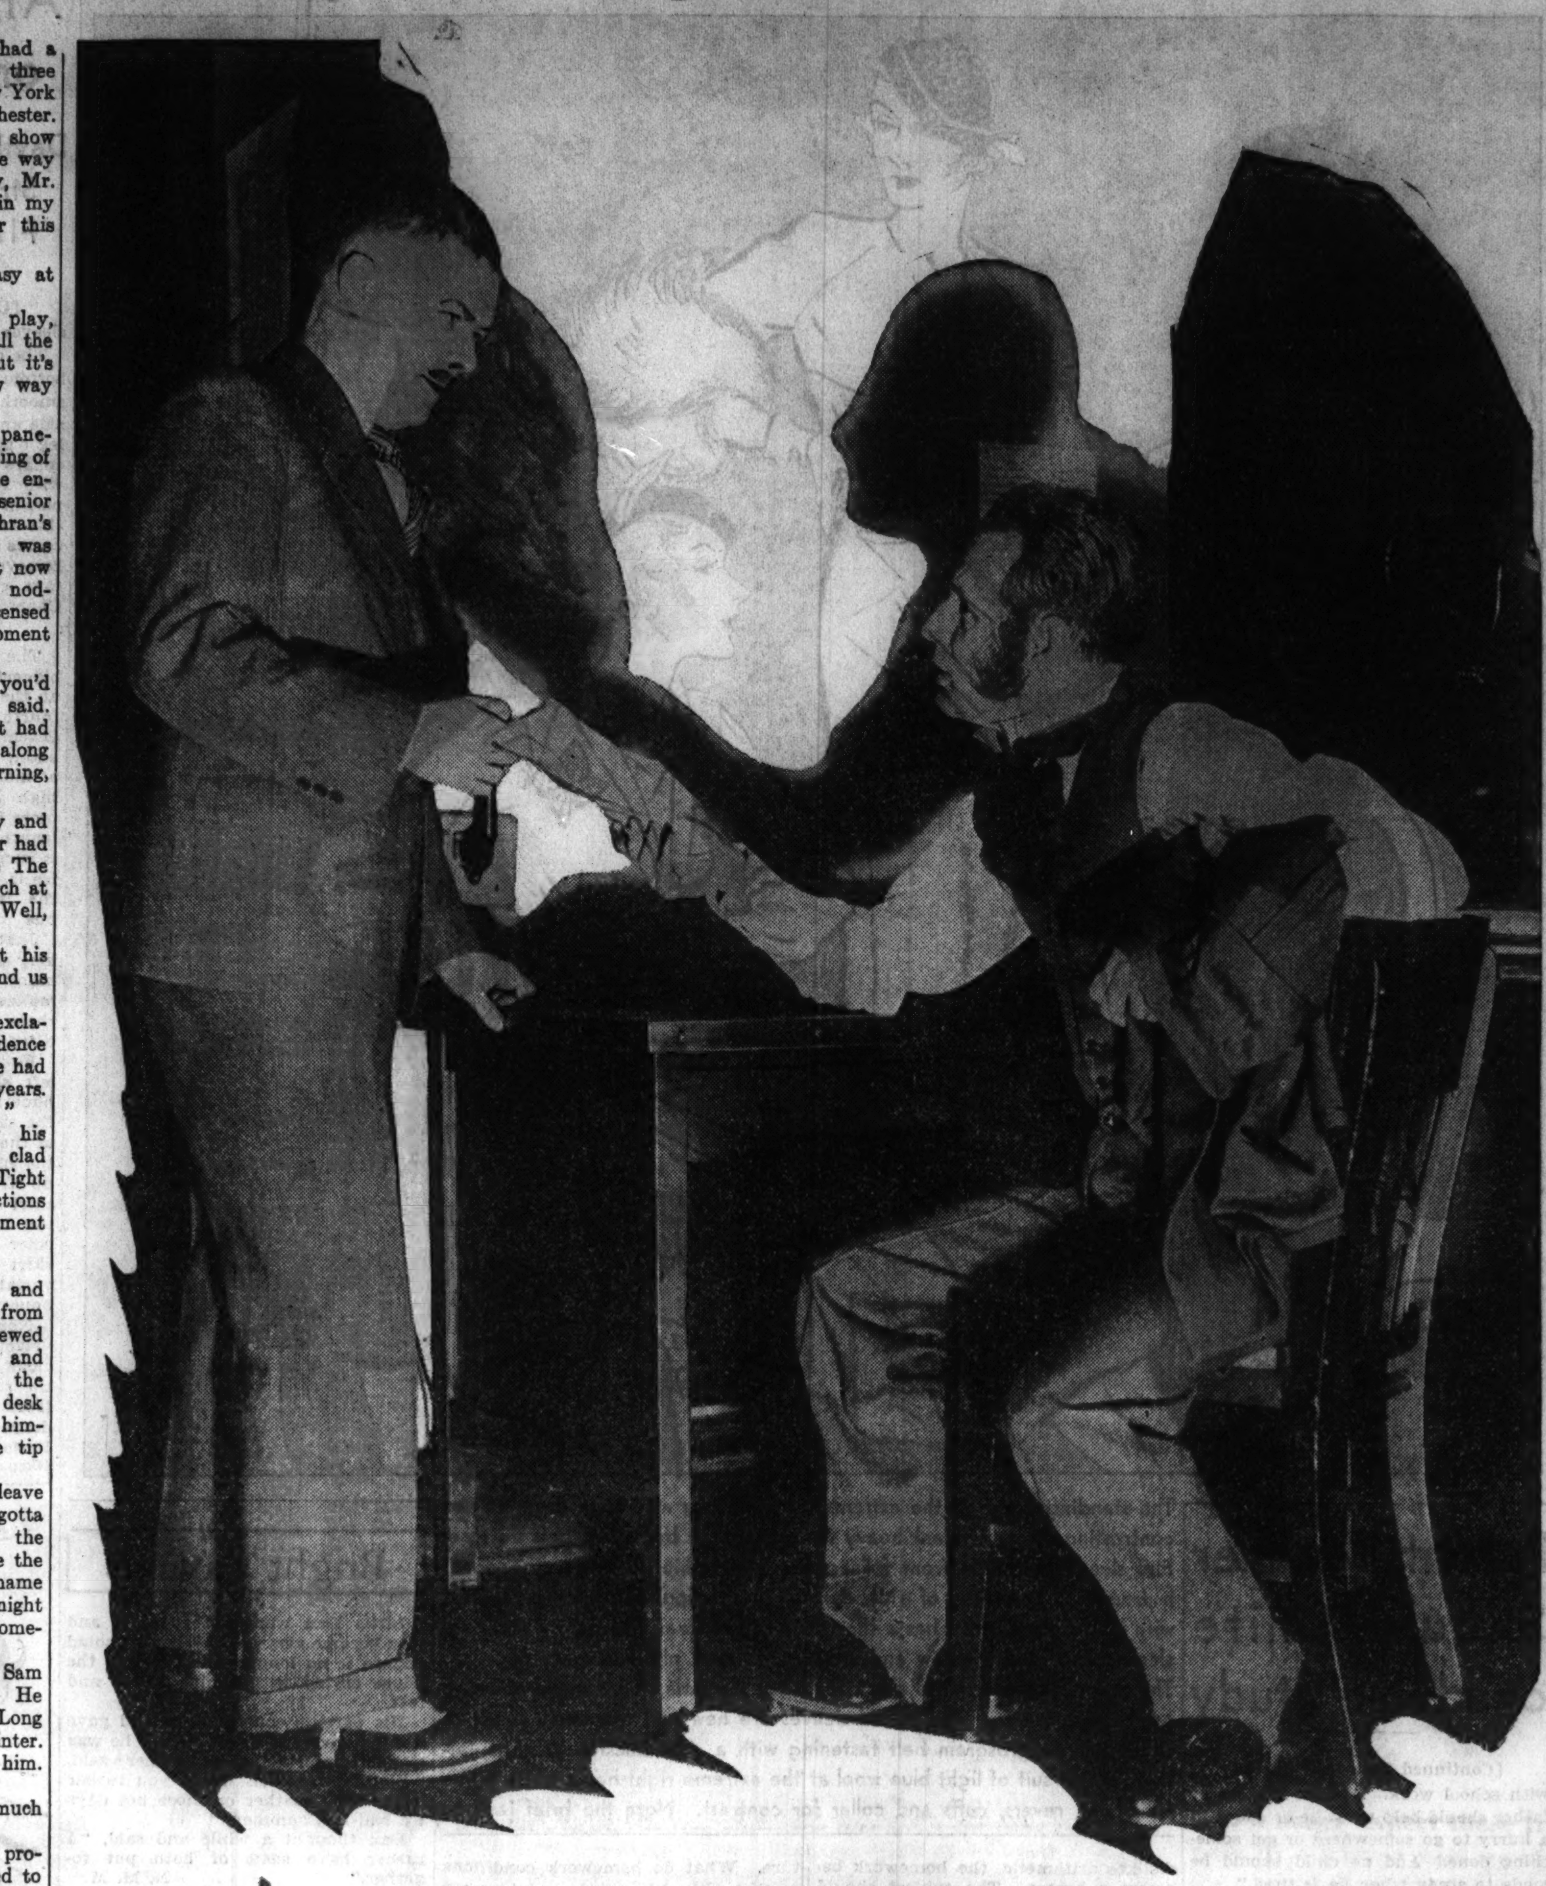
Stone considered this. "That's got one thing in its favor," he said. "There wouldn't be any danger of its going just good enough so we'd have to pay a second week's theater rent. How many sets? Have we got anything at Cain's that would fit it?"

"Yes. It has only two sets, and we could use some old stuff, with a little retouching—a few hundred dollars' worth of work."

"We could slip the scene painters a few hundred and get it billed as new stuff at eight or ten thousand, couldn't we?"

"Naturally, but——"

"Then listen, Cothran. Why isn't this show just the thing we want? There isn't another one we can put on for so little money. Baldwin's first offer is that he will work for two hundred dollars and his wife for two hundred more, and that means we can get the pair of them for three hundred—he hasn't worked for more than a year and you could see how many times his clothes have been pressed. And he really thinks his play is good and that he'll get royalties."



"He is an old Princeton man—in my class," Baldwin explained.

"But he has never had a lead."

"He ain't such a bad character man."

"No. He's a good character man—for bits. But why should you think he can carry a star part?"

"I GOT two reasons," Stone replied, "and I ain't read the show or even heard what's in it except that it's a part like Rip Jefferson, who I never saw. One is, he says he can, and even if he's wrong you and me might think he was right without being called crazy—he ain't any worse than some others that have had leads in one week productions. And the second reason—the good one—is that while in our pay roll estimate to the sucker we could easy put him down at seven hundred and his wife at five hundred, we get them at three hundred—and where else can we get two leads for anything like that? And a show, too, without any advance royalties, and that don't call for any new scenery. Also, when this Tate wants to buy into a show is now, and if we wait somebody else will take him, maybe."

It was Cothran's turn to consider. "Baldwin is a pretty good old character wheelhorse," he admitted. "He might not be too rotten—if we've got to do another flop."

"We gotta have a few thousand dollars, and we gotta have it quick. And listen, Baldwin ain't fussy about the rest of the company; like all these old hams he thinks he can carry the show. We can get a couple juveniles at a hundred and a quarter each—and bill them at three hundred. Other salaries estimated at two thousand—actually not more than seven or eight hundred, all told. Scenery listed at ten thousand, and costing us less than one. Advertising and incidentals——"

Stone reached for a slip of paper and made figures. "With salaries for two weeks and theater rent for only one," he declared presently, "we can put it on for eight thousand, and we can show a cost of close to twenty-five."

Cothran also made figures. "We can show more than that," he said. "You've left out something."

He compared his memoranda with Stone's. "Here it is. You haven't included our salaries as director and manager; those go into the advance cost. We'll make them 'purely nominal' at five hundred for me and two-fifty for you. One week casting, four weeks' rehearsals, one week production. Six weeks at seven-fifty—— Total apparent cost, about thirty thousand. We put in—theoretically—fifteen thousand. We sell him half for fifteen. We'll clear seven thousand in six weeks. . . . Not so good, but not so bad."

"And this Tate," grinned Stone, "will get his money's worth. What I mean, he'll be a regular theatrical producer and can go to rehearsal and on back stage and meet actors and actresses, and everything. And have all the passes he wants for the opening night—and as many nights after that as it runs. How soon can you see him?"

"He might be at his hotel now," Cothran said, and reached for the telephone.

"Mr. Tate?" he asked when he had secured the connection. "This is Parker Cothran. We met the other evening at Jim Stanton's. . . . Very well, thank you. Were you really serious when you intimated you might perhaps like to become a bit interested in a play if I happened to have one in view with a reasonable chance of success? . . . There is a very bright comedy that we are thinking of doing; we have just secured an option on it for a day or two. . . . Yes, very promising, indeed. I wonder if you would care to have dinner with me tonight—say at the R——, at eight. . . . I shall look forward to it with pleasure."

"And why not?" commented Stone, as Cothran replaced the receiver. "Does he sound as if he looks forward to it with pleasure, too?"

"More than that. He said he would break a previous engagement."

"Maybe," frowned Stone, "it would have gone over just as well if we hadn't picked a place with prices and tips like the R——. Oh, well, it's too late now to cry over spilled beans. . . . Say, Cothran, what has this hick got on his ranch out there—cows or horses?"

"Both, I imagine. Why?"

"If it's horses the next six weeks is going to be just like home to him, if you know what I mean. He's going to take a nice, pleasant ride."

THERE was nothing, as he and Cothran sipped their coffee in the R——, to mark Sam Tate as an outlander. If, like a hundred other men in the room, he wore his dinner clothes with no particular distinction, he also wore them without self-consciousness. A "hick" because his home was more distant than western Connecticut or northern New Jersey, he bore no label of it. Nor was he, in fact, less innocent of that midtown section of the city which contains the theaters than the six million resident New Yorkers from whom had been gathered all but one or two of Cothran and Stone's previous angels. Any man may be a hick in a game with which he has had no experience.

Parker Cothran, sitting across the little table from him, did possess distinction—distinction of dress, even in such surroundings, and a distinction of manner based no more upon his complete ease than upon his simple and engaging sincerity. When Cothran exerted himself, men intuitively felt that he was sincere.

Nature had started him off with deceptively honest eyes and an aristocratic nose, and he himself had acquired a high school education and most of the surface marks of good breeding. Friendly dramatic writers sometimes referred to him—without too much detail as to the closeness of the connection—as "one of the Philadelphia Cothrans," and on occasion he could be either an entertaining purveyor of late wisecracks or a deferential listener. All of which explained why, at fifty, he possessed an entrée into the outer fringes of certain business and social circles not crashed by every theatrical producer, in one of which he had met Tate.

THESE circles were not familiar with that description of him once spoken by a famous playwright—"mentally cleareyed but morally astigmatic." Most of the Broadway columnists had heard it, but the libel laws protect both the just and the unjust. Also such astigmatism is not held to be of vast importance in sets where any belief at all in morals is quite commonly regarded as an amusing anachronism. Knowledge, therefore, of some of his business methods was almost exclusively confined to the wise men of the Flippant Forties, whose attitude toward the propriety of any racket is based wholly upon whether or not it works. And it spoke well for his cleverness that no angel taken by him for a Broadway ride had ever known it, and not more than one had even suspected it.

"It doesn't sound bad," Tate said. "I'm not familiar with this man Baldwin. Who is he and what has he done?"

"He is an exceedingly interesting old fellow," Cothran replied. "And a good actor—a very good actor. If it weren't for his height he would have been a leading man in his youth, but when he got past playing juveniles he had to do character parts at once. I remember him when he first went on the stage. Professionally, that is. He had been a famous amateur at Princeton. You're not by any chance, a Princeton man, are you?"

"University of Wisconsin," Tate said.

"He would be long before your time, anyway. He must be well over fifty. As I recall the story, he was going to to study law after his Princeton graduation but he had succeeded so well with the university theatricals that he thought he would see if he could get a professional engagement, temporarily. So he picked Charlie Frohman as the first man to ask for a job, happened to be just the type for a play that was being cast, got the part—and made good. So, naturally he has been an actor ever since."

"The law no longer appealed to him?"

"Would any young man go back to college after landing with Frohman? Of late years he has never had a chance at anything but character bits. He was in a piece two or three years ago in which there was a part something like the one in this play and I have had my eye on him ever since. I have felt that he needed only a play to fit his peculiar talents to become a successful character lead. And now—with some suggestions and help from me, naturally—he has written what I believe is that play."

Cothran smiled whimsically as he deposited the ash from his cigaret in the nearer tray.

"Not that rack and thumbscrew could make him admit he has had any advice or help from me or anybody else, of course. Actors and authors, as you no doubt well know, are peculiar people."

"And you feel sure the play will succeed?"

Cothran shook his head, still smiling. "If any producer could be absolutely sure whether or not a play will succeed, Belasco would have left fifty million dollars," he said. "No man can ever foretell certainly what the public will like. But I believe they will like this one of Baldwin's. It is my opinion that they have become more than a bit tired of the trend of the past few years."

"CONSOLIDATING the waterfront speakeasy and the alienist clinic, and retaining the best features of each," Tate put in.

"Exactly. I think they will welcome something a little less sophisticated, if it is bright and put on well. You don't need to be told that eighty per cent of the plays that reach Broadway fail. I am as sanguine as anybody can be—which is always subject to the public's disagreeing—that this play will be in the other twenty per cent."

"Why, then, let in an outsider?" Tate asked shrewdly.

"Because there is always some chance of failure—and we are not men of exceedingly great means," Cothran frankly told him. "A half interest will repay us amply if we get a hit. If we have made an error of judgment, our losses will not be more than we can comfortably stand."

Tate smoked thoughtfully for a moment.

"And you and your partner," he said, "will direct and manage it for nominal salaries? For how long?"

"For the run of the play," Cothran told him. "That will be inserted in our contract. Regardless of how long the show stays on, we will agree that our salaries shall not be increased. Our real money will come out of our half of the general profits."

"You feel pretty confident."

"We are willing to gamble our money on it—we can't do more."

Peculiarly, with no thought of the Broadway connotation, Tate made his decision in a phrase of the cattle ranges: "You ought to be good men to ride with. I'll go along with you fifteen thousand dollars' worth."

COTHRAN, when rehearsals for "Easy Elbert" had been in progress ten days, came into his office at noon and found Stone reading in a morning newspaper the review of an opening of the night before. The junior partner remarked, "It looks like maybe this Gutman show, 'Pavement Dames,' was in for a run. Irving Duell gives it all kinds of a good notice."

"He guesses them better than most of the critics," Cothran said.

"Better than any of the others, so far this season."

"I'm going to hang my head in shame when I see him between the acts of this Elbert egg," said Cothran. "What he'll do to it will be nobody's business."

"Anything worse than usual at this morning's rehearsal?"

"No. They're going so well that we could open it a week from Monday if it wasn't that you and I need that extra week's income from salaries. Baldwin and his wife started off letter perfect, of course, and the other parts aren't big enough so that any half experienced actor couldn't get them glib in a week or ten days." He smiled sourly. "And no changes are being made in the lines, of course, except those he cuts himself."

"Ain't that just like a conceited old character man to insist in his contract that he is to have full say about all cutting, and that he and his wife can't be directed as to how they shall play their parts?"

"That isn't as bad as it looks, Joe. It gives us a pretty good alibi for what's going to happen. I try to change things and he won't let me. I can plant that with three or four of the newspaper boys after the crash."

"Do you try to change things?" Stone asked.

"Not too hard—just enough to sort of get it into the record. I suggested to him just now after the rehearsal that he makes his character too damn noble at the finish, and he said he doesn't. He said the old fellow seems to be going noble, but that every man and woman in the audience will know his reformation isn't going to last a week."

"Will they?"

"A few might—if they stay that long. Oh, the house will sit through it on the opening night. It'll be almost all paper—I've already told both Baldwin and Tate they can have as many passes as they want. Baldwin will have a couple of hundred of his out-of-work actor friends in the house, and it'll be like a professional matinée—every actor will applaud every line that he would like to have an audience applaud if he was speaking it, and give them as many curtain calls as he would want if he was in the show." Cothran smiled sardonically. "When the final curtain falls on the first night, Tate will know he owns half of one of the great hits of the century—and on the second night, if it doesn't rain enough to keep them at home, there'll be a hundred and nineteen dollars in the house."

"BALDWIN is still all hopped up about it, I suppose."

"And how!" Cothran replied. "He asked me this morning, if the morning-after notices are very good, whether we couldn't see our way clear to put his name up in the lights. I said, 'yes'—just like that. And I told him we'd change the progarms, too, and star him. Why not?"

"Well," Stone said. "There's no reason why not for this show, but making promises like that might get out and be a bad precedent some time when we got a good one."

"But wait! Then, while he was feeling good, I broke it to him about opening cold. He fell for it like Z. for a telegraph blank. He's so sure of the piece and himself that he agreed instantly we didn't need any out-of-town tryout."

"That saves us railroad fare and country theater guarantees," Stone said with satisfaction. "Have you told that to Tate, too?"

"Yes. It made no impression on him. He's not so dumb lots of ways—I imagine he's a pretty wise guy as to things he knows something about—but when it comes to Broadway——"

Cothran smiled amusedly. "He said to me last night that he thought we ought to be getting more publicity. Couldn't I get a big Sunday story by telling the newspapers that in my opinion the time has come for less sophisticated plays—that line I gave him when I was selling him the idea. I had to get him off that, so I had an inspiration. I seriously proposed a Sunday story on Baldwin's having been a great amateur at Princeton, and he said if Princeton was anything like Wisconsin that would interest a lot of graduates."

"Baldwin will have the old clippings," Stone remarked. "All of them except the ones that didn't say he was good. I guess we could get somebody to run it for us."

"Oh, sure! But that's a fine thrilling subject for a press agent—what a 1931 leading man used to do at college in the days when John Drew and Bob Hilliard were still arguing about how many vests the well-dressed actor ought to own. It ought to sell as many as seven seats!"

"Listen, Cothran," Stone said earnestly. "Now that you've seen it with rehearsals running fairly smooth, has this thing got any chance at all?"

"Not so much as a four-dollar bankroll in a night club."

"Then it don't make any difference how big a piece of it we keep. What I mean, any part of it is too much."

Cothran exhibited instant alert interest. "A nibble from somewhere?" he asked.

"More than a nibble—a bite, if you understand me," Stone told him. "I run into this Henry Folsom, last night, between the acts at the C. He asks me about this new show of ours, and I give him the usual oil, with it in my head we might be able to get back what he made with us that time in 'The Red Lady.' He cleaned up about eight thousand, you know."

"And is there a chance he might like a piece of this one?"

"Yes. It seems he's always thought Baldwin was good. I held back and made out we liked it too much to let go of any more of it—he'd know, of course, that somebody's in with us, but not who or for how much. But finally I said we might let him have a quarter of it for seventy-five hundred. And he argued about the chances of a flop and all that—you know, Cothran, I think that fellow is part Scotch—and finally he said he'd give us seventy-five hundred for thirty per cent. I said I'd talk to you and let him know today."

"Holy cats!" exclaimed Cothran. "What are you sitting here for? Go out and find him, and get his check! Right away; this noon. Now! If we wait until night he might be careless crossing the street and get bumped by a taxi."

WITH the dress rehearsal about to begin, Ralph Baldwin in his first-act costume and makeup came from his dressing room with a telegram in his hand to where Cothran and Stone stood on the stage.

"This just came," he said. "Will one of you be good enough to take care of it tomorrow?"

He handed the message to Cothran, who read it. It was dated from Pittsburgh and addressed to Baldwin at the theater.

"Shall arrive New York six fifty p. m. tomorrow. Stop. Want to see your opening. Stop. Please have one seat held for me to be called for at box office. Stop. Every good wish may you have as rousing a success as you had in 'The Pearl and the Girl' them was the happy days. Stop. Shall try to get on stage to see you after the show.

"FLIPPER WETTERLOW."

"He is an old Princeton man—in my class," Baldwin explained, "and I'll appreciate it if you'll fix him up with as good a seat as possible. I'm sorry, but I've given away all the tickets I had."

"I'll attend to it," Cothran promised perfunctorily. "That 'Flipper' is a college nickname, I suppose. What are his initials?"

"D. T.," Baldwin said. "Daniel T. Wetterlow."

"The steel man?"

"Yes, he has something to do with steel, I think—although, to tell you the truth, I don't know much about him. I haven't seen or heard from him in at least twenty years. And, if it isn't too much trouble, will one of you have him identified to you when he calls for his seat, and arrange for him to be brought back after the show?"

"I'll attend to it myself," Cothran told him.

"Thank you. And there's another thing. If you haven't any other engagement, after the play tomorrow night, I've been asked to invite you to a little supper that's being given for Mrs. Baldwin and me." He added, apologetically, to Stone: "I'm sorry; if it were my party I'd invite you both, of course, but it isn't."

Cothran half opened his mouth to form an excuse, but the actor's next words caused his regrets to remain unspoken.

"Otis Aiken is giving it. You've probably heard of him; he used to be a tennis champion. He has asked my wife and me to have supper with him and a few other people and he suggested that perhaps I'd like to bring you."

"Is he another one of your old college pals?"

"Yes. And I haven't seen him for years, either, although he has always lived in New York. That was a fine idea of yours, Mr. Cothran, to get that publicity about the old Princeton theatricals. Several who saw it wrote me, and that gave me the idea of sending tickets to as many of my class as I could locate here in the city."

"I'll be very glad, indeed, to have supper with you and Mr. Aiken," Cothran declared cordially.

"I'll phone him tomorrow, then, that you're coming."

BALDWIN left them to join his wife, offstage, and Stone remarked, low-voiced, "You sound like this Wetterlow and Aiken might be somebody. Who are they—if any?"

"Dan Wetterlow," replied Cothran, "isn't any bigger in the steel trust than Tammany is in politics. What do you know about his being a good enough friend of Baldwin's to sign a nickname to his wire! And Aiken—you've seen his Long Island place in the magazine sections—has more millions than there are hoofers in Harlem."

"Good business!" exclaimed Stone. "Getting acquainted with them might get us some new prospects. What I mean, for some nice expensive costume show, sometime. One with a chance, maybe."

"Not likely, after they see what happens to this piece," Cothran sighed regretfully. "But these money boys are always good men to know." He and his partner went out front together, and the rehearsal started.

To where Cothran stood just inside the door at half past eight the following evening, with the theater rapidly filling, the house manager came and pointed out a shortish, dapper man with gray hair, shrewd eyes and exceedingly well-tailored clothes, and Cothran went out into the lobby and

HORSE THIEF TRAIL

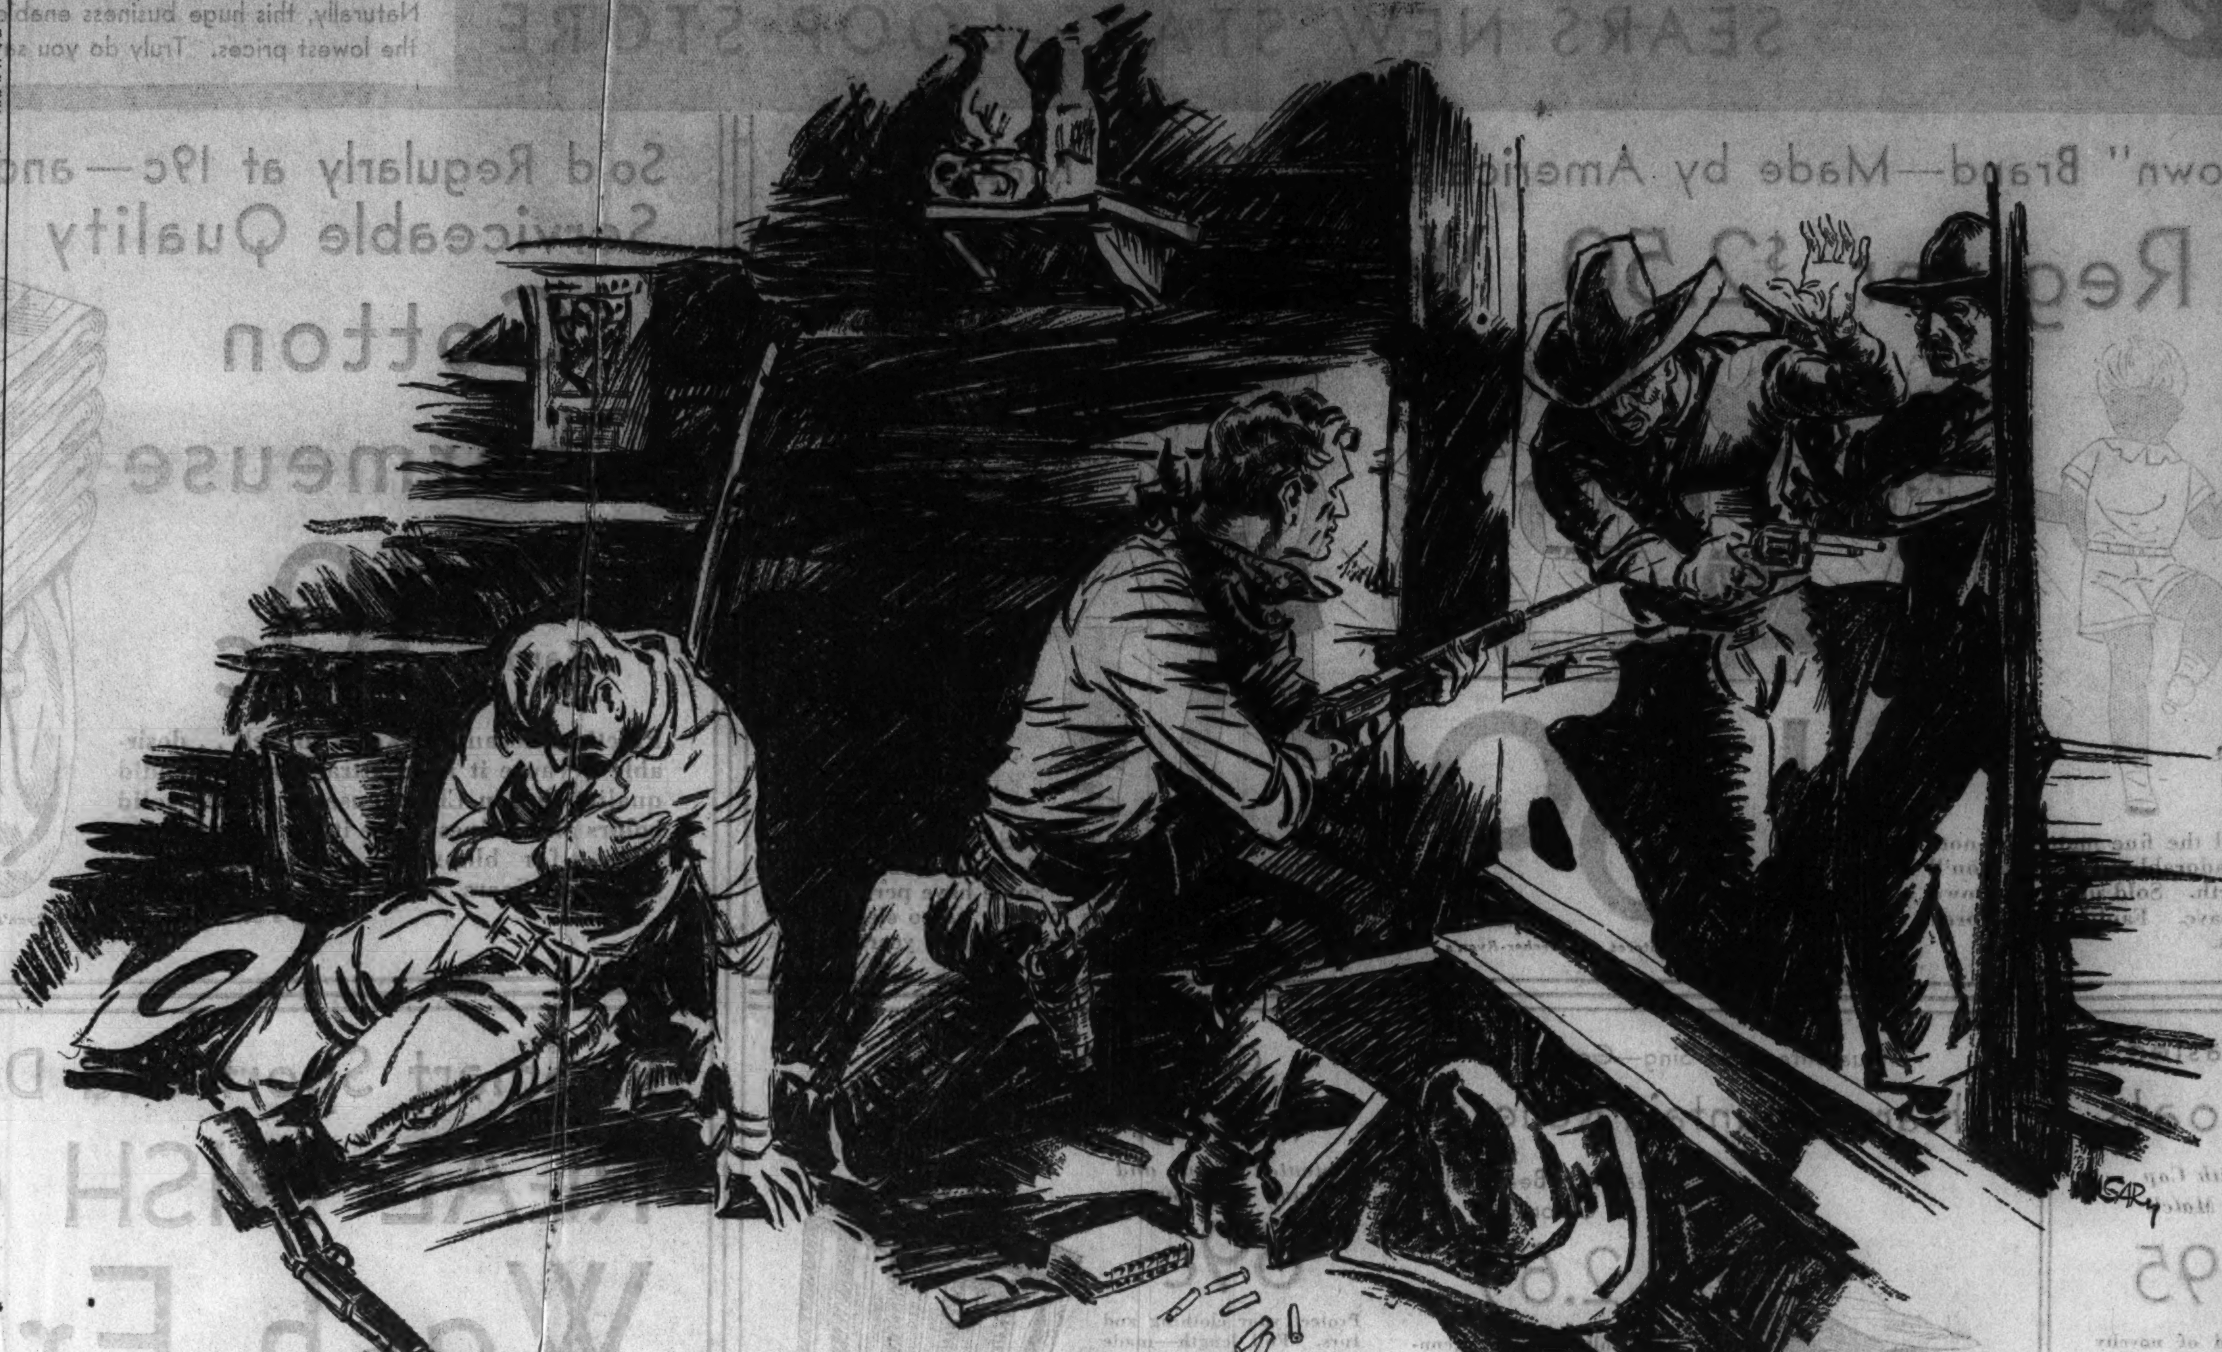
By FREDERICK R. BECHDOLT

THE STORY SO FAR:

Dick Lee, who lives alone and raises horses for a Utah army post, is visited by strangers. One introduces himself as Jack Flood, known in the cattle country as "the man from Arizona." The others come in the dead of night and steal Lee's fine band of horses. He tears after them, but they escape. He meets Judith Rose, adopted daughter of Old Man Rose, a notorious character of the valley. Dick suspects that Rose and his half breed sons, Henry and George, are the horse thieves. George makes advances to Judith, but she fights him off. Dick gets a job with Old Man Rose, and George, out of jealousy, determines to kill him. George gives Dick the wrong directions about fording a river and Dick nearly drowns. He is saved by Jack Flood. Old Man Rose is apprehensive over Flood's presence in the neighborhood. Dick discovers his brand on Rose's horses. He makes up his mind not to go away without his horses and to take Judith with him when he goes. He and Judith discover the hiding place of two of the rustlers and overhear a plot to kill Dick.

INSTALLMENT VIII.

Like Living Fire.



There was a rush of feet. The doorway was darkened before him. He raised the muzzle of his rifle and fired.

ILLUSTRATION BY GARY SHEAHAN.

THE county courthouse in Rosebud was a two story red brick building with a wing of gray granite blocks. Herein were the jail, the office of the sheriff and his dwelling, given him rent free. And it was in his living quarters that Jack Flood was sitting that afternoon when Dick Lee rode by on the roan horse. For men were coming and going in the office at all times; and the business which had brought the Man from Arizona here would not stand publicity just yet.

"If we get started on the road without this leaking out," the sheriff told his guest, "we stand a chance to clean 'em up, and mebbe without much shootin'. But the Old Man Rose is rich and there's a heap of men right here in the county seat who'd ride hard to bring him warnin' if they suspicioned what was in the wind. And then there would be war."

"Fur as I'm concerned," his visitor replied, "there's nothing I'd like better than to shoot it out with him. Only fur one thing—and that's what I came here fur—to clear this up, so that the facts come out. And killing won't do that."

The sheriff rose from his cane seated rocking chair and went to the glass doored cabinet where he kept his cigars; he took out the box and offered it to Jack Flood, who shook his head.

"Me, I'd ruther roll a cigaret," the latter said and did so, to the desecration of the Brussels carpet. He sat there on the plush sofa regarding the scattered flakes of tobacco with a worried brow.

"It's all right," the other assured him. "My wife, she's used to it. She has got so she don't mind even ashes; says they keep off the moths. No, you are right; we got to handle this business mighty careful."

They discussed their plans for some time; and finally the Man from Arizona rose.

"My foreman and five of the boys got back from the drive yesterday. They're in camp near Green River Station, good men, all six of 'em. They know the smell of powder smoke. I'll get there before tomorrow evenin' and the next day we'll hit the trail. We'll ride into Deep valley by way of the pass; and you'll fetch yo're men acrost the Diamond. We'll come together at the ranch house. And we'll have that bunch from both sides."

"It ort to work out," the sheriff said, and they shook hands. It was near evening when Jack Flood climbed into his two horse buckboard; the pair of half broken bronchos started. He sat bolt upright as if the seat were a saddle, and he frowned straight ahead of him; the road was rough; two boxes of cartridges which he had bought in Rosebud and the Winchester carbine, which he always kept close by him, danced on the leather cushion to the joltings of the vehicle. Now and again he had to ease himself to one side, holding the reins in one hand while with the other he shoved the weapon back into its place. The ponies had settled down into a stiff trot. Once, for lack of others in whom to confide, he spoke to them.

"A long trail and a blind trail," he said, "but we are gettin' nigh the end now, little hosses."

THEY passed alfalfa fields, where the young crop was turning the flatlands a vivid green; and under long rows of Lombardy poplars, behind which log houses stood with children playing about the doors.

The dusk came on and the Man from Arizona pulled up beside a little stream. This was the last water for many miles; and he unhooked the team; when he had poured their grain into the nosebags and left them feeding, he went to work at getting his own meal. And after he had eaten, while he was sitting by the glowing little heap of coals, smoking a cigaret, he looked about him.

"Good place to rest for a few hours," he told himself, "and there's a long drive ahead." He might have added that there had been another drive, as long, behind him, and he had slept but poorly on the road the night before. He got to his feet and went to the buckboard and his hand was on the huge bed roll in its rear; he was about to drag it forth when a sound came to him on the evening breeze.

"Sheep," he muttered, and he listened to make certain; the sound seemed nearer now, and this time there was no mistaking it. Like many of his calling, he had a deep prejudice against the woolly flocks whose advent in later years had done so much to ruin the cattle ranges. A prejudice so strong that, since he had grown to manhood, he had never tasted mutton. Now he swore to himself, as he harkened to the ewes calling their lambs to them for the night. And he withdrew the hand he had laid upon the bed roll. "May as well drive on as be kept awake by their infernal blatting," he growled.

So it came, by the small chance that turned the wind to bear that sound to him, that he determined to travel through without a rest to where his wagon outfit was in camp. And by that determination he changed the course of events down at Green River Station.

The darkness deepened and the moon rose; the buckboard rattled over the rough road among the badland buttes. He reached the next water in the early dawn and halted for another hour, while he ate his breakfast and fed the team again. And it was afternoon when the painted bluffs opened up to give him the first glimpse of the winding line of timber in the river bottom far ahead of him.

HE had gone another mile or so and the buckboard was rounding a sharp turn along the foot of a banded bluff when he heard the rattle of wheels, and a farm wagon came into sight; the road was narrow here; he reined the ponies up the shelving bank, tilting the buckboard's wheels to a steep angle, to let this other pass. The driver waved his hand to acknowledge the courtesy.

"Howdy!" He pulled his heavy team down to a halt and threw on the brake as he made the salutation, and Jack Flood eased the bronchos back into the road beyond the wagon. It was a slow proceeding, for the slope was abrupt; the highway was but a pair of ruts with a deep drop into a dry gulch just beyond the outer track, which made it necessary for both vehicles to move at the same time. And the farmer was a little late in starting. The buckboard slewed at the last moment; the wheels of the two rigs locked. The half broken ponies seized the opportunity to make a little trouble; and the Man from Arizona had his hands full. He managed to hold them down while the other left his own team to lift the lighter rig free from its entanglement. And if it had not been for this slight complication there is no telling how the fortunes of several persons might have turned out.

As it was, the two men paused for a moment before resuming their separate ways, and the farmer said:

"If you keep them ponies to a good gait you'll get down to the station in time to see the fun."

Jack Flood delayed long enough to soothe the near horse, which was still cherishing some lingering notions of destruction, before he asked:

"What are those barroom gladiators up to now?"

"Barroom gladiators is right," the farmer grinned. He was a wide faced man, deliberate of speech, and he paused long enough to return to his wagon and pick up the reins before he went on. "But they have got comp'ny today. And it looks like a hard bunch. They sure was organized for trouble when I left town. And I met up with the party they're layin' fur, less'n three miles back. Me, I never did hanker to see a killin', and I have got an idee from the looks of him he'll put up a fight."

"How come yo' didn't drop a word to him in passin'?" Jack Flood was mildly interested now.

"Well," his informant explained, "I had a notion to do it. But, on the other hand, the chances is, he is goin' to get what's comin' to him. I heard the constable say he'd stole a hoss and killed a feller that was after him. Shot him down from ambush." He clucked to the team, and as they were starting off, he added, "It was up Deep Valley way."

"Whoa you——" Jack Flood swore at his restive span.

"What sort of a lookin' man was he—the one that done the killin'?"

"Young feller, and red headed." The farmer called the words over his shoulder.

Jack Flood was speaking to the bronchos before those words were finished. "GET ap," he said. And the buckboard lurched off with a rasp of iron tires and a rattle of hoofs. And as they scudded on the driver told them, "You wanted to run away a minute back; well, now's your chance."

It was not an easy road if one were taking it slowly; the ruts were rough and the track was narrow and there were places where disaster yawned on either side within a few inches of the wheels. Jack Flood sat back with his high heeled boots braced against the narrow foot rail; the reins hung loosely from his fingers save when the animals were headed into one of the sharp curves; then the slack came taut and the light vehicle slewed around the turn, sometimes with one wheel spinning idly in midair over the brink of the outer bank. They passed the last banded butte and they were on the flat lands; and now the team was beginning to slow up a little.

Green River Station lay just ahead. Jack Flood leaned forward peering through the swirling cloud of dust that enwrapped him. The pop-popping of firearms came to him through the rasping of the wheels and the rattle of hoofs.

"Ain't got him yet," he muttered, and pulled the whip from its socket. He lashed the bronchos and they surged into their collars.

The wide street was deserted. There came a moment when the dust hung thick, obscuring everything before the buckboard; then it drifted away and the driver saw the hamlet again; the empty street, the scattered cabins in the sagebrush, and there two hundred yards or so from the little knoll on which the home made jail stood. A puff of white smoke drifted away above the bank of a dry irrigating canal. The noise of the shot followed.

He leaned back in the seat, bracing his feet as he pulled off from the road. And in the next moment the buckboard was reeling crazily through the sagebrush. He was on the last lap now, nearing the finish; and while the bronchos raced on, with the little knoll and the jail between them and the besiegers, Jack Flood was thinking of his wagon outfit, in camp five miles away.

"If only there was some way to get word to them," he muttered.

Now he was at the rear of the knoll; he urged the ponies up the slope, and the firing on the other side broke out with sudden violence. The team shied sharply at the noise. The wheels cramped and the Man from Arizona had barely time to seize his Winchester from the seat. He leaped from the vehicle just before it overturned with a crash, and he ran on to the building.

THE nearest of those horsemen were within one hundred yards when Dick threw himself into the open doorway. And they were shooting as they came. But the back of a running broncho is a poor place for one seeking to line his sights on a moving target; their slugs were going wild. And when he gained the shelter of the room, the situation changed.

He crouched alongside the wall of heavy logs; only his head and shoulders showed, and the rifle barrel swinging slowly as he drew down the bead and pulled the trigger. Before the thin jet of smoke which leaped from the muzzle had dissolved he dropped back behind his cover to pump another cartridge into the chamber. He thrust his head forth to fire his second shot; the riders had already wheeled their horses, and those who had been in the van were spurring hard to overtake their companions. He squeezed the trigger and a pony went down in a cloud of dust; Dick saw the man bound to his feet and run bent almost double; his hat was gone and his lank black hair was tossing in the breeze. It was Henry.

The horsemen were out of sight now behind the bank of the dry irrigating canal; the halfbreed was the only one who showed; and in the next moment he had dived over the brink. Dick pumped another cartridge into the chamber of his carbine and the fight settled down to the slow business of shooting at long range.

THE knoll on which the log jail stood was dotted with clumps of dwarf sage. The open doorway looked toward the river, a quarter of a mile away. The unused canal, with its high banks of upthrown earth, ran almost parallel to its course, half way between the building and the stream. A single window, crossed with heavy bars of strap iron, was opposite the door.

Coarse tufts of last year's grass and small bushes topped the bank of the canal; between them puffs of smoke blossomed at times; the leaden slugs thudded against the log wall; now and again one sent a shower of splinters flying from the threshold; the flat reports of the rifles came with intervals of silence which seemed much longer than they were. The dead horse lay on its side in the middle of the sage dotted flat, looking grotesquely large.

And Dick was thinking, "Eight cartridges left in the carbine; and then I have got my six shooter."

As long as they stayed where they were he could be sparing with his ammunition. But if they were to try a rush——

Some one was moving down there now. That meant trouble.

The little blossoms of white smoke appeared in half a dozen places. The dust was spurting before the doorway and the clatter of the rifles had become a venomous uproar. And then he caught a new sound. It came from behind the building. The thudding of hoofs and the rattle of wheels. He leaped to his feet, and it was in his mind that here was a new attack. He heard the crash of the overturned buckboard.

A moment later some one called his name. He lowered the muzzle of his rifle and the Man from Arizona came into sight around the corner of the jail. The bullets drummed like a flurry of hail upon the log wall as he ran; he whipped into the doorway; his hat was gone and his face was covered with fresh earth. He dashed his sleeve across his eyes to clear away the dust.

"How you making out?" He asked the question as unconcernedly as if he had left the other to finish some task and had returned to learn about its progress.

"Looks like I'm liable to run short of cartridges," Dick told him.

"Me, I'm not fixed any too good," the other swore regretfully. "I had two boxes in the buckboard, but I was lucky to grab the carbine when the smash came."

Dick was looking down the slope while he was speaking.

"That team of yours," he said, "has got clear of the rig and they're swimming the river." He stopped abruptly and was silent for some moments, watching. "What are those fellows up to now?" he asked sharply. The Man from Arizona thrust his head forth. The firing ceased; the hillside seemed very peaceful in the afternoon sunlight.

"No one stirring that I can see," he announced.

"Not now," Dick told him, "but there was a minute ago."

The silence endured; only the body of the dead horse remained as a reminder that the place had been reeking of violence.

"Too quiet," Jack Flood muttered. "I don't like this." And then he uttered a low exclamation. And Dick heard him saying:

"The window!"

And with the words he caught the beat of hoofs behind the building. At the same moment the noise of firing came from the bank of the canal. The Man from Arizona was crossing the floor toward the barred window. He threw his carbine to his shoulder and the close walls seemed to shiver with the report; the smoke filled the little room and Dick saw a horseman speeding past the window; a rifle cracked out there; Jack Flood lurched forward and the horseman vanished. When Dick got to the window he had a glimpse of Henry riding away bareheaded. Before he could raise his rifle to his shoulder the half breed was gone over the hilltop. Dick turned to his companion.

The other started to move and uttered a sharp exclamation.

"I think my leg is busted." His voice was heavy with disgust and he was silent for some moments afterward, feeling of the limb. Then he swore quietly, "Above the knee."

They were crouching on the floor with the doorway between them. Dick saw the dark stain of the blood spreading over the butternut jeans and started toward him. The Man from Arizona waved him back.

"No use of you stopping any lead. Stick where you are and throw me your bandana. I can handle this myself."

DICK wadded up his big blue handkerchief and tossed it across; and the firing started at the bottom of the hill once more. He held his eyes on the clumps of sage and the boulders down there. Twice, catching sight of some one moving, he lined his sights on the spot and pulled the trigger. The Man from Arizona cursed the flowing blood in a low monotone.

"'Pears like an artery," he grumbled. He knotted the handkerchief above the wound and twisted the bandage tight with his open pocket knife. "There, that's holding it. Have any luck this time?"

"Don't think so. Looks like I've been overshooting. Dick pumped another cartridge into the chamber of his carbine.

"Me', I'm ready for business now," the other announced. "I only wisht we had them two boxes of ammunition that's in the buckboard. We'd make those fello's know there was a fight."

"I was thinking," Dick said. "The rig tipped over, didn't it? Well, then, it's just as likely that the cartridges spilled out. If you'll throw the lead into that bunch, I'll make a try to find them."

"That sounds like a good bet," the Man from Arizona said. "The chances is agin you, but if you win the odds are long."

"If I can make it behind the building I'm out of sight," Dick went on, "and you can fog those fellows hard enough to hold 'em where they are."

He got to his feet while he was speaking and stood beside the doorway. The flat, angry voices of the rifles were coming more slowly now.

"When they quit I'll make my start," he said and gripped his carbine by the stock. They waited for some moments and the firing ceased. "All right," he called, and leaped out through the doorway.

The log wall was on his right. He hugged it closely as he ran. A slug kicked up a handful of dirt before his feet; and he felt the sharp tug of another tearing through his sleeve; he heard Jack Flood's Winchester crack behind him and the rattle of the weapons down the hill. The doorway was in the middle of the building; it was six yards to go.

LESS than two seconds' time; and during that little interval he was conscious of the clamor of the firing; the smell of powder smoke; the sight of the hillside before him, dotted with gray clumps of sage; of some distant mountains hanging blue and vague along the skyline. And then he was around the corner, and in another moment the thick log walls were hiding him.

A leather seat cushion lay uptilted against a clump of Spanish bayonet; and the dry earth was marked by a deep furrow where the panic stricken horses had dragged the buckboard down the slope.

All these things he took note of briefly and in a single glance that swept the place; then he went about the search for the cartridges.

Here where the wheel marks ended and the uptorn earth began, they should be somewhere near. He scanned the ground; he saw a broken spoke; and there was Jack Flood's bed roll; and further down the hill a half filled sack of barley with the grain strewn all about it; some articles of camp outfit. And that was all.

The noise of firing had ceased. What were they about now? The silence seemed to him to hold a greater menace than the clamor of the weapons which had preceded it.

Six cartridges in the magazine of his carbine; and perhaps Jack Flood had even less than he did. And, of those few, some would be spent when he returned.

He heard a bullet snarl, glancing from a rock close by. He dropped upon his belly behind a clump of sage. The report of the rifle followed, and he saw a thin wisp of powder smoke drifting away from the weapon's muzzle. His first thought was that he had gone further in his search than he had intended and had come beyond the shelter of the building; but when he looked about him he realized the truth; some one of those down there had managed to creep away from the others and this one had him skylined on the summit of the knoll.

And then he saw the object of his search. A paper box. It lay between two small rock fragments, beneath the uptilted seat cushion. Another leaden slug buzzed in its passing a few inches from where he lay. He threw his carbine to his shoulder and he fired at the place from which the smoke had risen; he leaped to his feet.

While he was running he remembered what some one had told him years ago when he was an eager boy, listening to stories of Indian fighting. He bent low and he darted along the hillside just below the crest of the knoll, zigzagging as he went. He dropped on his hands and knees and his fingers closed about the box of cartridges.

The man down there was shooting fast. It was his haste to pull the trigger that saved Dick as he made the dash back to the cabin. He shouted to announce his coming, and he whipped around the corner of the building. And while he was making those last few yards along the building front with the rifles uniting in an angry chorus he felt a heavy blow; he spun half way around and he was conscious of a sharp stabbing in his side. In the next moment he was in the room.

The slug had struck a rib and glanced off, breaking the bone; and when he raised his arm, the pain was like the thrust of a hot knife blade. Jack Flood broke open the paper box and poured the cartridges upon the floor between them.

"I'll hold the door," he said. "You watch the window."

There was no sound at the foot of the slope; and no sign of any movement. The minutes dragged on by in silence. And the two men crouched, waiting. And once Jack Flood said quietly:

"If there was only two more windows. It's the ends that worry me—we can't see the hill out there."

And after that more silence.

"Think they're goin' to make a rush?" Dick asked.

"I reckon so," the other answered quietly. "And before they do they'll sneak up close."

The stillness returned. And once a horse whinnied loudly. More minutes went on by and every one of them seemed a long time to the pair within the room.

Dick was wondering what was to come of the grim climax when it drew to a close. He was thinking how he had been here with Jack Flood all of this time; how perhaps in the closing of the next moment they would both go to their deaths, and he would never know the truth about that grim affair back in Deep valley more than ten years ago—he would never know and Judith would never know.

And then he heard a voice.

"All right." That was Old Man Rose's bellow.

There was a rush of feet. The doorway was darkened before him.

He raised the muzzle of his rifle and fired and the man fell almost upon him. The close room was filled with the din of weapons. He had a glimpse of Jack Flood pitching forward on his face.

ON the other side of Green river, some five miles from the stream, there was a little creek coming down from the pine dotted mountains. Here in the sagebrush flats its water was still cool. And Jack Flood's cowboys were in camp beside it. Six of them, a seasoned bunch, held over by their employer from the drive, to ride with him on the expedition to Deep valley. As to the cause for which they had been selected to do battle, they had no knowledge, nor did they waste much thought. It was mere curiosity, born of the idleness of the long, warm afternoon which brought up the subject of that feud.

They were lounging in the shade of a single hackberry tree which grew upon the creek bank when a long legged young Texan tossed away the stub of his cigaret and addressed the wagon boss.

"This here outfit that the ol' man aims to have us smoke out, who are they, anyhow?"

"Search me," the foreman said. "All I know is that their name is Rose."

"I reckon," the first speaker drawled, "it's some ol' range war."

"As to it's bein' old," the wagon boss replied, "you're plumb correct. I heard Jack say one time that it goes back ten years. But I ain't any more idee why it started than you have. An' what's more, I ain't frettin' about it, either. Long as it ends up with us on top, I'm satisfied."

"Well, anyhow," another chimed in, "the sheriff has throwed in with us. Which gives us the big edge, the way I figger it."

The wagon boss got to his feet.

"Some one coming down the road," he announced, and stood shading his eyes against the late afternoon sun. His hand dropped suddenly and he swore. "Looks like a runaway—and that's Jack's team." He threw the last words over his shoulder and the others were rising before he had finished. A solitary horse stood saddled at the wheel of the chuck wagon.

"You boys catch up your ponies and follow me," he called as he was mounting. They picked up their ropes and a few minutes later they were loping after him; and when they had come near the river they saw him pull up ahead of them and wave his upraised hand for them to hasten. Then they dug in the spurs and a few moments later the popping of the rifles reached their ears.

BY the time they gained the bank the noise of the firing had died. The crossing was a slow business, and now the only sounds were the blowing of the horses as they swam, the sucking gurgle of the sullen current against their flanks.

"I hope we ain't too late," the foreman was muttering. The ford led to the foot of the town's only street; he scanned the place with an anxious eye, but the citizens of Green River Station were prudent men and they were not without knowledge of the potentialities of wild bullets. They were keeping inside the buildings, quite willing to let their curiosity await the ending of the battle.

So the six riders came on across the stream and the horses were scrambling up the further bank before any one got an inkling of what was going on. Then the firing resumed; one shot and after that another. The wagon boss pointed to the little log jail skylined on the summit of the knoll.

"But we got to find out where we stand before we go surgin' into this," he said. The answer came at once. And it was George who delivered the information.

The fat man and his father and the middle aged rustler who went by the name of Hank were advancing on one end of the cabin; Henry and the curly haired Bill were approaching the other. And when they reached the building Old Man Rose gave the order for the final rush. Henry and his companion dashed for the window in the rear; his father and the alterer of brands ran to the front doorway. And George, remaining consistent to his ideas of looking out for himself first and for others afterward, was hanging back at this last moment, taking a final swift glance about him to make certain as to how the land lay before he plunged into the fighting. It was then that he got sight of the six riders at the foot of the little town's only street.

He knew who those horsemen were; ever since he had come to Green River Station this morning he had been keeping an eye open for fear of an arrival from Jack Flood's wagon outfit. Now they had come, all six of them. And, even as they were drawing rein, looking up here in their uncertainty as to whom their allies were, George threw his rifle butt to his shoulder and took a long shot. The slug went short; and the spurt of dust which it kicked up in the roadway before them was all the information that the cowboys needed.

FROM the river crossing to the summit of the knoll was a little better than four hundred yards. The sextet covered the distance at the dead run; and their six shooters were flaming as they came.

And in something less than thirty seconds later the fight at Green River Station was finished.

George was the first to see that the issue had definitely turned against him and his companions; that his well considered plans had worked out to place them between two fires, the minor faction, with flight their one recourse and their horses down there in the dry canal more than two hundred yards away. Before the new combatants had fairly started he uttered a single shout of warning and fled for the saddle ponies.

To Dick Lee the revelation of the changing tide of battle came with bewildering suddenness. In one moment he was crouching within the doorway with the reek of hot powder smoke in his nostrils, looking through the acrid fog. He saw the lank old rustler leap upon the threshold, holding his rifle at his hip; his hat was gone; his unkempt hair was tossing in the breeze. And at his elbow the Old Man Rose, with flaming face and eyes ablaze, striding wide footedly, his six shooter in his hand.

He did not take the time to throw his carbine to his shoulder before he pulled the trigger; and the alterer of brands was so close that when he fell he knocked the smoking weapon from Dick's hands. The smoke hung thick.

George's voice came through the tumult. Dick was still reaching for the carbine when the doorway was emptied as suddenly as it had been blocked by those two forms.

The rattle of forty-five revolvers and the pounding of hoofs. And then the six men of Jack Flood's wagon outfit swept up before the door.

George was far down the hill; the Women Adopt a New Beauty Standard

Current Glamour of Mental, Physical and Emotional Energy Leaves Traditional Pretty Face in Cold.

By Antoinette Donnelly.

IT would be strange indeed if, in a world in which woman is upsetting every other apple cart of tradition and prejudice, she didn't see to it that the old beauty measuring rod weren't dumped overboard, too.

Woman has done this very thing! Just as dramatically, just as convincingly as she adopted new modes and manners for vocational competition, so she has changed the character of beauty standard and judgment to conform to her modern self.

The elements that contribute to this new beauty standard may be intangible. You may call them, among other things, personality, charm, fascination, brains, glamour. But, no matter what you call them, they are different in effect from the ingredients that could win recognition formerly on just a pretty face and form.

The thing or things that create "big box office" today, from the personal allure angle, are not the gifts of Nature that went into fashioning a bathing beauty contest winner; nor have they much in common with the innocuous lures of the pretty magazine cover girl.

Substance and Character.

There's meat, body, substance to this new beauty cult. Not the meat, body, substance of the fulsome frame, of course. I mean there is a meatiness to the character of beauty; there is substance to its interest—and to use a word sometimes resented by women most possessing it—there is glamour to this new Golden Girl of ours.

How certain women resent the "glamour" implication is described by Edna Ferber, well known novelist, in a recent story in one of our monthly periodicals. The fictional actress of Miss Ferber's tale loathed the word, so sick was she of having herself described as glamorous. Yet the triumph of glamour over physical details is seen in Miss Ferber's description:

"Like most very successful actresses she was not beautiful. That is, she possessed few of the attributes which the adolescent taste of America usually demands of its beauties . . . She had a broad, free brow, eyes set well apart and slightly protuberant, high cheek bones, a wide, scarlet mouth like a venomous flower. The effect of all this was arresting—even startling . . . She had the nervous, lean, big knuckled hand of the intelligent and masterful woman."

The actress in real life who strongly resembles Miss Ferber's fictional character has a huge and idolatrous public. She gives the effect of gorgeous beauty. Those nervous, lean, big knuckled hands are the most beautifully gestured hands on the stage.

Adolescent Liking.

Miss Ferber's identity of the bathing beauty type as adolescent taste confirms our "bigger, better, and broader" beauty standard. And the dear public endorses it handsomely by heart and pocketbook contributions. You can go over the list of the biggest box office successes of late, the women of stage and screen who stand secure in the hearts and pocketbooks of the American playgoing public, and you will find them to be far removed from the pretty magazine cover type, or the type associated with "adolescent taste."

Take Garbo, Swanson, Ruth Chatterton, Ethel Barrymore, Lynn Fontanne, Helen Hayes, Pauline Lord, Lenore Ulric, Ruth Gordon. Not one of them subscribes to a pretty girl pattern. You could name scores of others yourself. Yet, every one of them has that something or those somethings that gives the effect of beauty in a great big glamorous way.

You can extend the list making to acquaintances in your social set or business circles and check it off. Check off the pretty against those who give the effect of beauty without being actually beautiful. Your real enthusiasm goes to the beauty with personality, charm, fascination, energy, and cleverness. The merely pretty are dismissed with a shrug or perhaps with an X to identify the blahness of the creature.

All of which should prove most encouraging to Miss and Mrs. Average. Not that Miss and Mrs. Average will be able to adorn themselves with the glamour of a stage or screen favorite. It would be a gross exaggeration to promise this. The stage and screen background does that for its favorites. BUT—getting the effect of beauty without being actually beautiful is no court secret. It's a legitimitized public practice. It can be and is being done in circles far removed from stage and screen.

Not a Single Good Feature.

Only the other day some one was talking of an acquaintance. "Take that girl apart," said the speaker, "and she hasn't even a good pair of legs to stand on. But what poise, what charm, what cleverness! She is a wonder—and wonderful to look at!"

That's what we mean by the new beauty that supersedes mere prettiness in current recognition.

To get to the bottom of its properties—there is energy, emotional and physical. I put energy first because without it the whole figure collapses. Physical energy subscribes to the impression that all is well with the body from the purely health standpoint. Emotional energy means the will to live an active, full, and rounded life. Right here is where so many Miss and Mrs. Averages subside into their average selves. They haven't the courage to attack a new interest, to learn a new game, to do anything out of the ordinary hum-drum day. If they're colorless, theirs alone is the fault. I note this—that women who are emotionally colorless are pictorially just as colorless. You have to have imagination to fire you to activities out of the ordinary—and you have to have imagination to see yourself as a more attractive woman.

Take your cleansing cream jar to prove the meaning of this. The unimaginative woman dips her fingers into the cream, applies the cream to her face and when she is through her face is clean and that's all. The one with imagination has not only a clean face at the end of the operation but she has a face in which she sees all sort of possibilities for further beautifying—perhaps with makeup, perhaps reshaping it with a different style of coiff; perhaps giving it quite a new interest to observers with an improved eyebrow line, or a more flattering color in dress.

Necessary Faith in Oneself.

Having faith in our present day beauty helps, including helps from dress, of course, is important. But faith in self is more important. Mrs. and Miss Average lack this faith in self, in spite of the exhibits A, B, C and so on presented by women with faith in themselves. I take it that the majority of these women must cling to the picture of the magazine cover girl or the bathing contest girl as the winning type. Certainly they cannot get right down to studying themselves in a comparative way with the glamorous figures we touched on above. Nor do I mean to insinuate that every Miss and Mrs. Average is a potential Garbo, Swanson, Fontanne, Helen Hayes, and so on. I do claim, however, for Miss and Mrs. Average a higher beauty rating in the modern manner, once she begins to apply similar energy and similar brain power to the task of perfecting herself.

There are those who contend that beauty, to insure its holding power, must have a dash of ugliness in it. This for interest. As the irregularity of a nose, say; the shape of an eyebrow; the turn of a mouth; a mole; a batch of freckles. The appeal, I suppose, is kin to our heartier response to friends who are not all cold perfection. Their one or two slight character flaws humanize them. So it would seem, is the merry fate which has fallen upon beauty.

Anyway, the moral of this little beauty story of mine today is that you have to be pretty darned homely and dull, chiefly the latter, not to be able to sell your own beauty goods in today's great, wide open market.

Furnishing the Small Room

Although This Bedroom Measures Only 9 by 12 It Appears Much Larger, Due to the Decorating.

By WillElla de Campi.

THE small bedroom presents a problem which is often difficult to solve. But with proper scaling, good arrangement and a judicious selection of colors even the tiniest of bedrooms assumes a gracious charm. We show today the floor plan of just such a small room, measuring 9 by 12 feet. The furniture is comfortably and logically placed, leaving plenty of free space in the center of the room.

Instead of the regulation bed with high head and low foot board, which would stand out clumsily, we selected a three-quarters width daybed. As a matter of fact, this covers as much floor space as an ordinary bed would, but because it is placed lengthwise against the wall it seems to require much less space.

The remaining necessary pieces of furniture are pleasingly arranged in a well balanced manner. Two little commodes with convenient drawers stand at each end of the daybed, and in the center of the wall there is a delicately scaled set of hanging shelves. A pair of flower prints flanks the shelves, as shown in the accompanying illustration.

In one corner of the room is a small but comfortable armchair, and beside it, in front of the window, is a three tiered table which may hold sewing equipment, a smoking set and a few current magazines. A bench, used in conjunction with the graceful little dressing table, may be drawn up to the armchair to form a comfortable chaise longue, since its width and height match the chair exactly.

Two side chairs with seat cushions to match the window draperies are nicely balanced at each side of the dressing table. A chest of drawers with hanging mirror above is placed between the doors leading into the room and into a clothes closet.

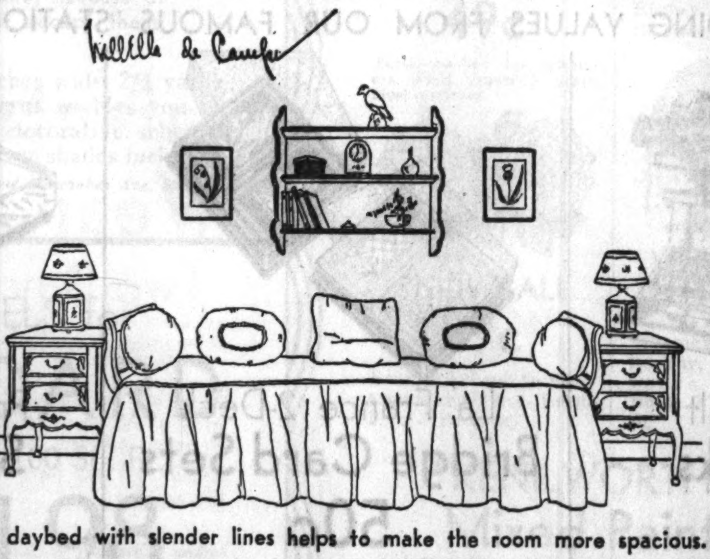
Subdued, delicate colors were selected to make the room seem restful and orderly. Bold colors and vivid contrasts should be avoided at all costs, as they are bound to produce disastrous effects in small rooms. Here the walls are done in two toned pale gray paper with a fine diamond pattern, and the woodwork is painted the lighter shade of gray.

At the window there are ruffled white net glass curtains, light and airy. Draperies are of plain taffeta in a lovely ash-rose tone. They are topped by a narrow wooden cornice, painted to match the woodwork, and are caught back just above the sill by dull gilt metal tiebacks.

In choosing furniture for this room we bought unfinished pieces because they are light in scale, beautifully designed and comparatively inexpensive. These, with the exception of the dressing table, we painted a soft gray, with trims and floral motifs in tones of gray blue, high lighted with touches of gold. The dressing table reverses the combination, being painted blue, with gray and gold trims.

Ash-rose drapery taffeta is used for a bed cover with deep side flounces, and extra cushions are covered with blue, rose and gray fabrics. Blue and gold tôle lamps on the commodes are fitted with parchment shades, decorated to match. On the dressing table is a pair of Dresden lamps with ash-rose taffeta shades.

Dull blue moire upholsters the little armchair, and there is a boxed cushion to match on the dressing table bench. Dull blue carpeting covers the floor, and directly in front of the bed is a small gray fur rug. Altogether, the room presents a decidedly luxurious appearance, though its actual cost was by no means in excess of that required for average and much more commonplace decorations and furnishings.



A daybed with slender lines helps to make the room more spacious.

Methodists to Face Many Problems at May Conference

By the Rev. John Evans.

WHEN delegates to the quadrennial general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church arrive at Atlantic City, N. J., in May they will be faced with many problems, some of which will seek solution far afield from traditional Methodism. For instance, there is that of the historic "traveling elder" whose appointment to a charge for a year at a time may hereafter be "settled" in a church for an unspecified term.

Until a few years ago Methodist pastors were not allowed to remain in a charge longer than five years. Before that three years was the limit. Gradually, as the country developed and cities grew, Methodism lost its rustic flavor and became an urban communion. The old machinery for evangelism and promotion in pioneer sections which was based on the circuit rider and short term pastorates became inadequate in cities and towns where fields requiring cultivation through long pastorates developed.

According to a poll of church leaders conducted by the Northwestern Christian Advocate, the unspecified appointment was held in higher favor than the present one year term. But the poll revealed an equally significant movement. While it favored unrestricted terms for pastors, the vote was two to one for restricting the term of bishops. At present, bishops are elected for life. According to younger ministers, the church is restive under the strong centralization of authority in the church. In part this restive spirit was shown not only in the strong movement to shear life tenure from the bishops, but also by the strong victory in the poll of those who would have district superintendents elected by the conferences instead of being appointed by bishops presiding over the conferences. The elective district superintendent would relax the political grip on the conference by the bishops, younger pastors assert.

The Northwestern Christian Advocates' poll indicated a movement which is said to strike all Protestant churches at the present time in relation to benevolent giving. Shall such funds be collected in the lump and pooled and administered to various benevolent interests by a church-wide council or board? Or shall benevolent funds be secured for designated projects? The vote was about equal.

Methodism is well satisfied, according to the poll, with its policy on world relations, prohibition, race relations, war and peace and public morals. On the other hand, the poll revealed strong dissatisfaction with Methodism's policies on evangelism, religious education and an active spirit of criticism on its policies on marriage, divorce and social justice.

other three were following more slowly. Twice Henry halted, dropping on his belly behind a clump of sage brush, to send a shot back at the riders whose coming had turned the issue. He was the last of the fugitives to leap behind the bank of the canal and seek his horse. And as he drove in the spurs, leaning far forward in the saddle, striving to overtake his companions, he cursed his brother fleeing far behind him.

"Looking out for your fat self as usual," he growled. "If you wasn't my own kin, I'd take a shot at you right now."

DICK was getting to his feet within the doorway. The wounded rustler on the threshold was striving to rise; his hand went out, seeking to grasp his rifle, and the young fellow kicked the weapon beyond his reach. The wagon boss had pulled up before the building and was swinging from the saddle.

The other members of the outfit were already returning from the chase. Jack Flood lay where he had fallen; he moaned once and then he lay still. The foreman came in and bent over him; and when he straightened up his face was set.

"One of you boys ride over to town and get a wagon. We got to fetch him to a doctor."

"Hurt bad?" Dick was swaying a little as he asked the question and his own voice sounded strange to him, as if it were the voice of another.

"One bullet through the chest; another in his leg. He's lost a heap of blood. He might pull through. He's of the kind that's hard to kill. How about you?"

But Dick did not answer. He was thinking of the thing that had been in his mind during all that long ride from Deep valley; how when he found the Man from Arizona he was going to learn the truth about that old killing more than ten years ago, when Judith's father had died on the threshold of his cabin. Now he had found him. And his lips were sealed. And if he died——

The walls of the cabin were going round and round; and he could see the hillside through the open doorway, and the clumps of dwarf sage were dancing strangely before his eyes. He had ridden far and he had gone through much this afternoon; and the sticky blood was stiffening where it had soaked into his clothing. He felt his limbs doubling under him and he knew that he was falling.

He opened his eyes and he looked up into the sunburned young faces about him. And one was muttering.

"I wonder if they're going to be all day with that wagon."

Things were beginning to go round and round again; and he felt something hard against his lips.

"Swallow it," a voice bade him. He gulped down a mouthful of raw whisky and the dizziness passed; his head was clearing.

The wagon came and he was able to stand with the help of one of the cowboys. He watched them lift Jack Flood's senseless form into the box. And then they lifted him. And after that, the wounded horse thief, who swore feebly as they laid him in the straw.

"Going to fetch you to Rosebud," they told Dick. But he did not care much where they were going to take him, nor what came of it now; there was one matter on his mind and that was the man who lay beside him like one dead.

And added to the dread of the sorrow which would come to him if he were to lose his companion with whom he had fought was the dread that death was going to take this other, leaving his story still untold—it haunted him during the long, weary miles, while every revolution of the clumsy wheels brought to him fresh pain.

The young horsemen who had swept up the hill to their rescue were making the journey with them; and now and again one of them would change places with another, riding with the driver or beside the wounded trio who were lying in the straw behind. During the night Dick got the details of what had taken place in those last few moments.

And while the cowboys talked the old rustler lay on his back; his jaws moved ceaselessly, munching at his tobacco. Dick's bullet had gone through his lungs and one of the cowboys had closed the hole by tamping his twisted handkerchief into it. And when he spoke, asking for more tobacco or for a drink of water, his voice came in a curious husky whisper.

The road was rough and the driver was making as good time as the team was able. The jolting of the heavy, springless axles rubbed the edges of Dick's broken rib together. But the pain of his body was as a little thing; it was his thoughts that brought the deepest hurt.

And the feeling of futility—that what he had done had been to no purpose—that Judith was gone—that Jack Flood was going to die, leaving his story untold.

Dawn came and they got a change of horses at a ranch house; and during the early hours of the morning they rattled over level roads. It was noontime when they came into the town of Rosebud; and the surgeon, whom one of the cowboys had ridden ahead to summon, was on hand to meet them.

Jack Flood was first to get his attention, and when he was done with the patient, the doctor shook his head.

"Can't tell," he said in answer to the question of the wagon boss, and he turned to the wounded rustler. And after he had done with this one, he swathed Dick's body with many tight folds of bandage.

"Keep off your feet and off a horse and you're all right," he announced.

The three of them had been brought to the small hotel, for there was no hospital in Rosebud; and under the supervision of the doctor the two helpless ones were carried to their beds. Dick was sitting stiffly in the lobby, on whose floor the patients had been lying during the surgeon's ministrations, to the entertainment of a fair sized audience at the front windows. The street door opened.

IT was old Martha, the ferrywoman. She came to where he was sitting. She stood before him looking down into his face, and her sunken eyes were like two coals.

"Will he live?" she asked; and he did not need to question whom she meant. He remembered that morning when Jack Flood had escaped from Deep valley, and how the Man from Arizona had told him that he was helping her to leave the country.

He shook his head and repeated what the doctor had said. And then she asked:

"Judith—where is she now?"

He shook his head again.

"I do not know," he said.

"You do not know." Her voice was flat as she repeated the words. She stood there gazing down into his face. "You've left her behind?"

He nodded mutely. He had no heart to speak.

"Some one has got to get her—to bring her here." She bent down and gripped his shoulder and he caught his breath sharply with the pain.

"You've been hurt, too?" Her old face softened.

"It don't amount to anything." He got slowly to his feet. "You say some one must bring her here?"

"There is a chance—he may live—long enough to talk. And she must be here to hear what he has to tell."

"I'll go," he said. And then he dropped his head. "She may not come for me."

"Tell her I sent you and I say she must come," she bade him.

"I'll find her and I'll bring her here," he promised, and he started for the door.

The saddle horses were standing at the hitching rack where Jack Flood's young riders had left them. None of those riders was near now. He did not wait to seek one, but chose the animal that looked the best, and when he swung himself upon its back he knew that this journey was going to be the hardest he had ever made, for the pain in his side was like living fire.

Housewives to Assume Duties of Town Mayor

Policies of Clean Homes, Rigid Economy Sweep Them Into Office.

SEATTLE.—(AP)—Five housewives, who pride themselves on their ability to cook, will take over the reins of government in two King county towns next June. And they're going to carry into office their home policies—clean housekeeping and economy.

Mrs. S. A. Bourke was swept into office by Duvall's 200 citizens over her male opponent, Mayor Harvey Sunk, and with her went a working majority to the town council, Mrs. R. H. Stapleton, Mrs. J. I. Miller, and Mrs. William Roney.

Two men are holdover members of the council, one of them Mrs. Stapleton's husband.

Husband to Administer Oath.

Mrs. Miller's husband, now city clerk, will administer the oath of office to his wife and other newly elected officials. Mayor Elect Bourke said it was probable Miller would be reappointed.

Behind Mrs. Stella Alexander, newly elected mayor of Issaquah, the village smith stands. Her husband is John G. Alexander, a blacksmith.

She has served two terms on the city council.

Her supporters said when they learned Mrs. Alexander had been collecting her husband's bills for 13 years and had let only $40 slip away from her, they decided her place was in the city hall.

She was elected on a strict economy program.

Law Enforcement Sufficient.

Regarding law enforcement, she said the town was getting all it wanted and she wouldn't give it any more. Issaquah has a population of 763.

Mrs. Stapleton explained the women of Duvall were up in arms over "failure of the men to enforce the dry laws. Law abiding citizens felt there was only one remedy—to elect housewives to do some real cleaning. They did!"

Swiss Women Given Privilege of Voting

For the first time in the history of Switzerland women have won the right to the vote. The canton of Geneva has recently enfranchised them for the purpose of putting women judges on the bench of the industrial tribunal which settles differences between employers and employés.

met him as he turned from the box office window.

"Mr. Wetterlow?" he inquired, smiling. "I am Parker Cothran. Mr. Baldwin asked me to look out for you. He was very much pleased to get your wire."

"I read about this opening in the paper," the steel man said. "And I happened to be coming over on business and arranged to make it a day or two early. But, see here! I didn't expect a complimentary seat. Can't I pay for it?"

Cothran shook his head pleasantly. "Mr. Baldwin's friends are our guests tonight," he said. "He is looking forward to seeing you. I'll take you on back after the last act."

Wetterlow rested a plump hand on a plumper waistline. "He is going to find it hard to recognize me with this figure." His eye twinkled. "He may not have told you that in a play called 'The Pearl and the Girl' I was his leading lady."

COTHRAN went through the door with him. "I hope you'll find your seat satisfactory," he said. "It was the very best I could do—there is a pretty good sale, as you can see. If you feel like coming to the lobby for a smoke after the first act I'd be very glad to hear how you like it."

"Pleased to," Wetterlow assured him. "I ought to be ashamed of it, as much time as I spend in New York, but do you know I haven't seen a play that old Ralph has been in for years? That thing in the paper, though, about the old college dramatics, got me all steamed up. A good, promising show, isn't it?"

"We think so," Cothran smiled.

"Fine!" Wetterlow exclaimed, and an usher took his seat check and led him away.

He came out to Cothran in the crowded lobby after the first act and almost immediately two other Princeton old timers joined them and the three college men became volubly reminiscent. Cothran excused himself and went to converse with Sam Tate, who was delighted with the way the play was being received. He saw that Stone, at the other end of the lobby, was taking care of Henry Folsom.

As he replied genially to Tate's enthusiasm, he wondered what the critics were saying out on the sidewalk, but it would not be according to the rules for him to go out there—and the smartest of their devastating wisecracks would be in their reviews in the morning, anyway.

When the house darkened in the second act and he was rid of Tate, he stood for a time at the rear of the auditorium and then went and sat on the balcony stairs. The show would seem to the uninitiated to be going beautifully. Baldwin was skilfully getting out of every line and situation all that was in it, as it had been obvious [illegible] rehearsals he would, but those lines and situations were no better than when Cothran had first read the manuscript.

Nearly every comedy speech was getting a laugh, and there were many outbursts of applause—and with his years of experience he knew this did not mean a thing. The best play ever to open in New York would have precisely that reception from a first night audience made up almost wholly of the friends of the actors and backers—and so would pretty nearly the worst.

Could it be possible that any paying audience would like it? No—and yet nothing is considered wholly impossible in the show business since "Abie's Irish Rose." A plan which conceivably might increase the "Easy Elbert" profits had come into his mind, yet before he proceeded with it he must be absolutely sure. He must find out, during the next intermission, exactly what the newspaper verdict was to be.

AND then, as he rose from the stairs when the second act curtain fell to rise again and again for the inevitable and meaningless curtain calls, he had his answer. With his coat over his arm and his hat in his hand, Irving Duell, who for months had not failed to call the turn unerringly on hits, short runs, and flops, came diving up the aisle. The producer met him near the door.

"Coming back?" he asked pleasantly.

"What for?" grinned Duell, without stopping. "The last act might be even worse. When are you going to put on 'East Lynne'?"

Half the audience came streaming out for its intermission tobacco, and Cothran found Stone and led him down into the passageway behind the boxes.

"It's a bad press, just as we expected; I've seen Duell," he said. "I've an idea—but it has to be worked tonight, if at all, before the papers are out. I'm taking Wetterlow on back to see Baldwin after the curtain. You come, too. I can't get out of that Baldwin supper party, but you try to connect with Wetterlow—ask him to eat with you somewhere. And this is the idea: We think from the way the play was received that it will succeed if it can be given quite a lot of special advertising, but we are shy of capital. We'll sell him twenty per cent of the show for five thousand dollars. . . . He doesn't know we've sold any of it."

Stone nodded quick understanding, then frowned. "It would have to be snappy," he said. "I'd need to get his check tonight—not tomorrow. Small chance!"

"Very small," Cothran agreed. "These big boys don't loosen up the first time they're asked. It's a thousand to one shot, but you can't get anything by not trying."

"Oke!" replied Stone. "I'll do what I can, what I mean. It ain't even likely he'll go anywhere with me, and if he does, taking him is out of my line. I can't talk to these highbrows like you can."

"I wish I didn't have to go with Baldwin," Cothran fretted, "but that can't be helped now. Do your best. If we could get another five thousand we'd be close to twenty thousand to the good."

"O, I'll proposition him if he'll give me a chance," promised Stone. "But don't expect anything. After all, fifteen grand, what we've already made, ain't so bad for an egglayer."

PARKER COTHRAN rose at 11 o'clock and sent down for the morning newspapers. They came up while he was in his bath and he dressed before glancing at them. Then he spread open to its theatrical page the one which was so ably served by Irving Duell.

Hardened as he was to criticism, he winced. Never had a show of his received so bad a review. And Duell's vitriolic typewriter had hit him in his most sensitive spot—his intense sophistication. The critic, for the purposes of his smartly written roast, had assumed that Cothran had become an apostle of sentimental sweetness and light, and expressed exaggerated sadness over it. His last paragraph reported an imaginary Broadway rumor that the producer was about to be admitted to the Sunshine society.

The blow was not less hard to bear because Cothran knew it was deserved. He imagined what the wisecrackers who were his intimates would think of to add to it, and resolved to stay away from his usual luncheon place for at least a fortnight.

He opened another paper, whose critic also was famous for his good judgment. He stared, read, gasped. These lines leaped at him:

> An outstanding hit. . . . After all these years of small parts, a great character actor has come into his own. . . . Cothran and Stone deserve a loud shout of congratulation not only for discovering Baldwin, but for their judgment in sensing a public demand for a new sort of play which, while wholly novel in treatment, also has something of the better old. . . . It will appeal to sophisticated Broadway, and not one bit less to the customers from Grand Rapids and Duluth. . . . They have a sure winner. "Easy Elbert" should still be running strong a year from now.

DAZED, Cothran seized the other papers, tore them hurriedly open. "As intensely human as 'The Show-Off' and funnier," said one. "A character as old as humanity, yet as new as television," another. With one exception—and that was by no means unfriendly but merely less enthusiastic—they all agreed it was by far the best comedy of the season. Irving Duell, for once, stood quite alone.

Stopping only to gulp coffee, Cothran hurried to his office. Joe Stone, with the stricken look of one whose entire family has been wiped out in a single night by pestilence or flood, lifted his eyes and said in scarcely more than a whisper: "Solly Brown phoned a little while ago and bought twenty rows for twelve weeks."

"Isn't that hell!" Cothran groaned. "Well, there's one good thing about this situation; we've got seven hundred and fifty dollars a week coming in for the run of the play. But that's all we've got. I had a chance after supper last night to talk alone with Baldwin's friend, Aiken, and I sold him that last 20 per cent of the show—and got his check and gave him a receipt."

"Oi!" cried Stone in agony. "The best we can hope is for that seven-fifty to cover the extra dividends. Such a good idea of yours that was to give Baldwin big publicity about being an actor at Princeton! I sold that last 20 per cent, too, and gave a receipt—to Wetterlow."

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

DO you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. Powdered Saxolite reduces wrinkles and age signs. Simply dissolve one ounce Saxolite in one-half pint witch hazel and use daily as an astringent. It overcomes oiliness and enlarged pores. It tightens and tones the underlying tissues, improves facial contour and stimulates and refreshes the skin.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

Well, how goes the world today? BECAUSE—if all of us can get through "today" successfully, there won't be any yesterdays to stew about, and tomorrow we can jolly well take care of it being just another "today." (That's the way I cheer myself up every morning.) And I was thinking that ONE way of enjoying an hour or two this a. m., or p. m., might be to—of course, you know what a movie critic WOULD suggest!—go to a movie . . . !!!???

"ONE HOUR WITH YOU," starring Maurice Chevalier and featuring Jeanette MacDonald, AND having in its supporting cast those two grand comedians, Roland Young and Charles Ruggles, is "an up and coming musical comedy, aglint with tuneful music, gay patter, provocative situations and skillful acting . . . is lavishly staged and costumed and the photography is something for which to give thanks . . . Lubitsch defies precedent effectively by having his players look and sing directly into the camera. Another departure from the regular order is the variation with which the dialogue is presented. Straight conversation, at the most unexpected times, bursts into rhyme or song . . . I'm wishing that if you enjoy light, bright, sophisticated entertainment, you'll avail yourself of this new spring offering, "One Hour with You."

"SKY DEVILS"—is a heap of fun! It's a sort of farcical, air-minded take-off on "What Price Glory" and "Hell's Angels," combining much rough and tumble humor with some of the most breath-taking flying that you ever saw . . . comedy and dialogue are rich and racy . . . Spencer Tracy gives one of his sure fire performances . . . one of those comedies that you DO write home about."

"DISORDERLY CONDUCT" also featured the brilliant and likable actor, Spencer Tracy, and I found the picture one of those "surprisingly engrossing programmers that pop out at you when least expected. . . . a human, punchful drama of present day life. . . . Tracy does the sort of playing guaranteed to keep the most blase movie goer on the qui vive. . . . 'Disorderly Conduct' is swift moving, believable and peculiarly free from hokum . . . 'Stop, Look, Listen!' it seems to cry—and gives you something to stop for, look at and listen to."

"THE MAN WHO PLAYED GOD" pleased this department. To quote: "Another Arliss triumph registers in this quietly forceful and thoughtful little drama. . . . That the player transcends his vehicle there can be no doubt, but his sure characterization, his deft exploitation of the story's poignant moments and lines, make the piece seem worthy of his steel . . .

on the theater programs

Woods theater, which has been out of the "legitimate" line-up for a number of years, will return to the drama this evening with "Louder, Please," a comedy that has had a run in New York. Joan Winters, prominent in several recent Chicago productions, has one of the principal roles.

Gotham Has to Get Along with Two New Plays

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—The gladsome Easter time found the New York theater managers praying on their feet. They had had a dull fortnight for meditation, and they had been pleased to extract comfort from the fact that their business in holy week was better than it was the week before, and also of greater volume than it was during holy week a year ago. It does not take much to cheer up a theater manager.

Of new plays there were only two last week. Only one, you might say, a comedy called "Happy Landing." The other proved one of those completely muddled affairs for the existence of which no one ever seems to have any adequate explanation. This was a comedy called "A Few Wild Oats," credited to the authorship of a scenario writer, Arthur Hoerl. He has, according to his biographers, written no fewer than 200 picture plots and at least a dozen serials. Naturally, this could account for a great deal, but not everything.

Young Girl Runs Wild.

"A Few Wild Oats" had to do with a young girl whose father and mother were being divorced. So upset was she that then and there she determined to scrap her moral standards and embrace loose living. She would, she said, sow her wild oats before, rather than after, she was married, and she called in another wild girl and a couple of boys to help her.

Engaged in setting the stage for the evening's party, this young woman was interrupted by the visit of a handsome neighbor from across the way. Evidently he had not been long at home, because she mistook him for her mother's gigolo and hated him. But he, good fellow that he was, went right ahead saving the situation. Got the boys and girls a little tight, locked the girls in their room and the boys in the garden and sang songs to fill in the time.

At least, he meant to sing songs. As it happened, the leading man, being Robert Allen from Dartmouth and Hollywood, was suffering an attack of laryngitis and could not sing. So he sat and made love to Mildred Van Horn, playing the heroine. She also has had more picture than stage ex-

Musical Shows End Drought on Chicago Stage

'Everybody's Welcome' and 'Blue Mask' Please First Night Audiences.

By Charles Collins.

THE Chicago stage has been reinforced with two musical shows that passed their first night inspections with flying colors, and therefore the famine in theatrical entertainment of three dimensions may be regarded as partly relieved. The Rialto is still unable to take care of the playgoer who demands something first rate, or nearly so, for his relaxation once a week; but we are approaching the fag-end of the season, and must be contented with the limited line of wares that the haggard and depressed Broadway impresarios can find for shipment. As matters stand, "Everybody's Welcome" and "The Blue Mask" are sound reasons for vernal rejoicing.

The former is a brisk and bright musical comedy, containing half a dozen principal players whose expert antics may be regarded with approval. Frances Williams, Oscar Shaw, and Jack Sheehan keep the frolicsome story bubbling merrily, and the other three—Victor Morley, Ann Pennington, and Harriette Lake—are excellent auxiliaries.

I wish to call special attention to the ever young Mr. Shaw as an accomplished playboy of the lyric stage. He has been keeping this sort of thing up for twenty years without losing his dash and spontaneity, and, although his record gives him the rating of a veteran, he is still in step with the spirit of youth and a smart partner for any new soubrette who comes rolling along.

It occurs to me, as I check up the titles of the many musical comedies which have enjoyed the services of Mr. Shaw as a song-and-dance hero, that I have never seen him in a bad show. It may be fairly assumed that his contributions to the performance helped to keep them out of that class.

An Eminent Guy.

"The Blue Mask" brings back Guy Robertson as a figure of musical romance, into which frame he fits more attractively than any other warbling fellow of his class with the possible exception of Dennis King, who persists in remaining out of employment. An elaborate wardrobe of uniforms and spangles; a full set of the flamboyant emotions of European operetta, and a generous program of graceful songs are provided for him; and therefore "The Blue Mask" is his time to rise and shine.

He does not betray his opportunity. The run of this operetta at the Grand Opera house, therefore, will be a halcyon time for the many matinée girls who have been writing to me, at least nine times a week for the past two years, seeking information as to the whereabouts and activities of this blue eyed, boyish singer. Ever since "Nina Rosa," Mr. Robertson has been a burden to my mail carrier.

The hippodrome aspect of "The Blue Mask," contributed by May Wirth and her clan of trick equestrians, ought to persuade the customers that they are getting their money's worth. Any show that adds, for extra measure and lagniappe, two circus steeds and a troupe of six tan bark riders, will win a salaam from this department, which has grown weary of a prolonged diet of wisecracks, "sophistication," and rhumba dancing.

New Style Chorus Girls.

Like the grand dukes of the old régime in Russia, I am a faithful observer of the "ladies of the ensemble" who garnish the musical shows, and after assorting my impressions of the playgoing year I am ready to rise and propound the question: What has become of the old fashioned chorus girl—of the species of glamorous chirpers and skippers from which Julia Sanderson, Jeanne Eagels, and Lenore Ulric sprang to stardom?

Apparently they have passed out of fashion. Instead of the old school, rough and ready, up and at 'em chorus prancers, we now have "groups" called the Merriel Abbott ballet, the Albertina Rasch ballet, etc. They are composed of muscled young Amazons, highly trained in ballet technique and standardized of routine; and apparently they are bought by the dozen from the studios where they are incubated—probably by mail order. They can dance, of course; usually much better than the winsome lassies of the former régime; but they have about as much charm as any gang of hardy female athletes selected at random from an encampment of Girl Scouts.

Dancing Robots.

They are the American equivalent of the Tiller girls, who used to come out of a terpsichorean school in Manchester, England, in shoals, as uniform as minnows. They are limber lassies with husky thighs, but there isn't a future star in a trainload of them. They represent quantity production of chorus material. They probably save the stage directors a great deal of fretting, fuming and cuss words; but as enchantresses of their audiences they leave much to be desired.

Moreover, their stuff becomes monotonous. They are like ready made suits of clothes, running to identical patterns. I have seen the same Albertina Rasch creation—a so-called rhumba, or danse Congo, or tarantella de torso, including wild waving of disheveled coiffures—in five different shows this season.

Chain store chorus girls, I call them. And with their appearance upon the scene I chalk up another victory for the terrifying Machine Age about which the young philosophers are muttering in their pessimistic journals of opinion.

Elmer the Great.

Elmer Rice is now the most flourishing dramatist of the American stage. To illustrate: Last fall he de-

Concert of Contemporary Music Planned by International Group

By Edward Moore.

POSSIBLY there has been preoccupation with other matters, but there would seem to have been little thought in the music world for the bicentennial of that gifted radical of music, Joseph Haydn, born March 31, 1732.

Mr. Stock has played some of his orchestral music, and some of the chamber music organizations have presented some of the works he cast in that form. But of general recognition there has been practically none in this country, though there are few who deserve it more. Austria, however, is remembering him with festivals of his music that will begin on his birthday and extend into midsummer.

There will be a special observance a week from today in Eisenstadt, near Vienna. A new Haydn mausoleum has been built there, and on that day his ashes will be moved from the mountain church, where he is now buried, into the new structure. Meanwhile, one of his masses will be sung in the present church by soloists and the choir of the Vienna state opera, and the instrumental score played by its orchestra.

Music Thought Revolutionary.

It seems strange that the gay, tuneful, rather obvious music of Haydn should in its time have been thought revolutionary. Yet it was. He was regarded as a bit of an iconoclast who wrote music full of fire and frenzy.

Not that this opinion made any difference with the public. Such opinions seldom do. Haydn was immensely popular at all times with those who did not read music criticisms. In fact, it is curious to see how few musicians with something worth saying in their music have suffered from popular neglect. Some of them may have been poverty stricken throughout their lives like Mozart and Schubert, but as fast as their music was given to the public, the public took it up.

Even Wagner, who went in for revolutionizing the operatic stage in a rather big way, was popular. His professional annoyances came chiefly from the people whom he satirized so venomously in "Die Meistersinger" with the character of Beckmesser. But of popular acclaim he had plenty throughout most of his life.

Interesting Concert.

All of which leads up, if somewhat indirectly, to the announcement that some of the Haydns and Wagners of the year 1932 are shortly to be heard in Chicago. On Sunday afternoon, April 10, a program under the auspices of the International Society for Contemporary Music will be presented at the Goodman theater. The program includes three first American performances, two first Chicagoan if not first American, and one by a resident of Chicago.

In detail, and possibly in the order that the compositions will appear, they are: 1. Concerto by Albert Roussel; "Die Junge Magd," by Paul Hindemith; 3. Concertino Lirico by Nicholas Miaskowsky; 4. Rhapsody by Leo Sowerby; 5. "The Chinese Flute," by Ernst Toch; 6. "Divertisement," by Jacques Ibert.

The first three named are first American performances. The last two are being played for the first time in Chicago. Mr. Sowerby needs no introduction as being the Chicago composer. The Toch composition will be played in Boston shortly before it is heard in Chicago, and Toch, himself, will be present for that performance. It is hoped that he will come to Chicago, as well. Rudolph Ganz recently introduced Ibert's "Divertisement" over the radio.

McCormack Sings Today.

The solo participants will be Mrs. Margaret Gent of Evanston, mezzo-soprano, in the Hindemith work, replacing Mrs. Clara Schevill, who is incapacitated because of illness; Rudolph Reuter, Chicago pianist, and Mary Krakowski, Chicago soprano, who will sing in "The Chinese Flute." As was the case last season, Mr. Ganz will conduct a chamber orchestra for the entire program.

And in case you have forgotten, the Chicago chapter is the youngest in the International Society for Contemporary Music, and this society was

These sweet smiles belong to no less than James Cagney and Joan Blondell, and they are on tap in "The Crowd Roars," the photoplay which is the Chicago theater's attraction for the current week.

Public Wants Movies of Higher Moral Tone, Questionnaire Says

By Tom Pettey.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Every so often some one gets busy and compiles a digest of public opinion regarding something or other. The latest poll, cross section, or opinion probing has been conducted by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America and its findings are illuminating.

For once the east and the west are in agreement. The need of a higher moral tone for the talkies is advocated by Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson from her temple in California and her sentiments are echoed here by none other than Texas Guinan.

"Make 'em more inspirational," advises Miss Guinan. "Uplift and inspiration should be the object of the picture makers," says Mrs. McPherson, who calls for pictures that make us "want to live a nobler, richer, higher and spirit-filled life."

First Duty Is Survival.

Here are a few of the other replies to the questions sent out by the producers' organization:

H. L. Mencken, the Baltimore sage, wants low comedy or he would want it if he "had to go to the movies regularly."

Edward A. Filene pithily remarks that "the talking picture's first duty is to survive" and adds that talkies "should help the orderly progress of the country as well as entertain."

Dr. Albert Shaw, editor of Review of Reviews, wants more detective thrillers "to prepare one for a sound night's sleep."

Richard Washburn Child asks that "the screen reflect life as it is." Gen. Hugh L. Scott, the Indian fighter, asks for more westerns. Bernard M. Baruch, financier, attends only adventure pictures.

Vote for Mystery Pictures.

Dr. Hendrik Willem Van Loon, the writer, is pessimistic. He holds that "90 per cent of the people everywhere and at all times will never grow older, mentally speaking, than 12 years, and will never be able to appreciate what the other 10 per cent will like." So, give the majority what it likes, says the doctor, and let the rest find their own amusement.

Wallace Irwin wants bigger and better comics because they "represent life as it ain't, in a never, never land where anything can happen—and usually does."

Helen Wills Moody prefers comedy, melodrama, romance, adventure, and sports in her pictures. In other words, Helen likes movies. Irvin S. Cobb speaks out for wild life but does not

SIX WAY G. O. P. BATTLE RAGES IN 6TH DISTRICT

Tribune Recommends Igoe to Democrats.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

In the west side congressional fights The Tribune recommends that the Democrats in the Sixth district vote for Congressman James T. Igoe. Both the Crusaders and the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform recommend Congressman Igoe and commend him for energetic and valuable service. His chief opponent is Thomas J. O'Brien, veteran legislator at Springfield, a good man, and Igoe has a real fight.

The Crusaders and the Women's Organization for National Prohibition Reform have acted as follows:

Eleventh district (Du Page, Kane, Will, McHenry counties):

Republican—Edwin S. Goltry of Downers Grove is recommended. He is running against Congressman Frank R. Reid.

Considerable rivalry has sprung up among the six candidates for the Republican nomination for congress in the 6th, and the district is being swamped with speechmaking. The candidates are Alfred F. Rueben, who has the backing of Paul Rothenberg, committeeman of the 24th ward; Benjamin W. Voorhies of Oak Park, George F. Lee of Maywood, Jerome S. Breakstone, Harry E. Lichten, and Francis S. Nolan. Most of them are running on liberal platforms.

Mr. Breakstone, who ran on a light wines and beer plank in the district in 1926 for the Republican nomination, speaks of the surge of anti-prohibition sentiment as indicated in the votes on popular referanda, in straw votes, and in the recent vote on the Beck-Linthicum resolution in congress.

"I believe with Charles A. Boston, former president of the American Bar association," said Mr. Breakstone in an address last week, "that the greatest mistake made by the United States since the civil war was the adoption of the 18th amendment. And this, not so much because governmental, official meddling will never be tolerated by a free people, but because our people should resist with all their might any effort to tamper with the federal constitution."

Complex Struggle in 25th.

The complexities of the legislative fights and the manner in which they are twisted into the battles over ward committeeman and other offices, are illustrated up in the 25th senatorial district, which has an interesting struggle. Edwin B. Bederman, who is seeking a third term in the general assembly, has come out for Oscar Carlstrom for governor and is throwing his support to Leo H. Lowitz for committeeman in the 40th.

The Bederman camp says the action was taken after John J. McKeone, the 40th ward committeeman, had proposed to indorse Bederman and Mrs. Rena Elrod, former member and a good vote getter, if Bederman would support McKeone. Bederman turned the proposal down on the ground that he would not consider a split indorsement. The Republicans are to nominate two candidates in the district, and the McKeone organization thereupon indorsed Mrs. Elrod and J. H. Jacobson. Bederman came out for Carlstrom. McKeone is with Custer, and is running for reëlection as committeeman. The legislative fight is all tangled up in the contest over the governorship and the battle over committeeman between McKeone and Lowitz.

L. V. L. INDORSEMENTS

The report of the Legislative Voters' league on primary candidates for the general assembly of Illinois in its foreword sets forth that nearly 700 persons have filed for 25 places in the state senate and 153 seats in the house. TRIBUNE REPORT WINS LIGHTS FOR 'DEATH CORNER'

'Bloody 20th's' Alleys Cleaned, Too.

BY HAL FOUST.

Commissioner of Public Works Sprague last week ordered the installation of stop and go lights at the three way intersection of Blue Island avenue, Taylor, and Morgan streets. The order was issued on recommendation of Leslie Sorenson, city traffic expert.

Mr. Sorenson made a thorough study of the intersection, verifying the complaint published in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of last week that the corner was taking a heavier human toll than the politician-gangster wars that gave the district the name of the "Bloody 20th ward."

Alleys Also Cleaned.

Due to the proximity of railroad yards, warehouses, and produce markets, there is a heavy movement of trucks at the intersections. There are street cars in Taylor street and Blue Island avenue. From nearby tenements come many women to cross the corner to shop. There are six schools in the vicinity.

"I want to thank THE TRIBUNE for its help in getting these lights," said Dr. S. R. di Cosola, 947 Taylor street, who lead the fight for the improvement. "After your story about the city's neglect of the 20th ward, we also got our alleys cleaned of garbage.

Want Vacant Lots Cleaned.

"Now if the city will only clean the garbage out of the vacant lots hereabouts the children in these slums can be given a place for play so they can be kept off the streets. Mothers could be given a place to sit down with their babies out in the sunshine. Cleaning these vacant lots would be good jobs for men getting relief from charity agencies."

Last Sunday's story used the name of Dr. Frank di Cosola, 947 Taylor street, as leading the fight for the traffic. Frank, a brother of S. R., was one of three physicians who told of attending approximately 150 persons injured in traffic at the intersection during the last two years.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 4.

Be sure to watch the ventilation of the hotbeds and cold frames. Watering, ventilation and shade must be watched to insure success. Shading is necessary during the heat of the day, but only until the plants are strong. Seedlings should be dwarf and compact, with a good root system, excepting those plants which have few roots. Pansies and English daisies that were grown in the frame since fall should be cultivated by gently stirring the soil between the rows.

Tuesday, April 5.

It is time to look to the mulching or protective materials that have kept the outdoor beds in condition during the winter. If any perennials heaved during the winter, replace them in the soil. Mulching materials may be reduced wherever it appears thick. Early spring is an excellent time to plant most of the evergreens.

Wednesday, April 6.

Sow sweet peas. These plants do best in full sun. Strawberry plants should be examined and the mulching material drawn away from the plants, but permitted to remain in the rows to offer protection later and to keep the fruit clean. Sow a few seeds of ornamental peppers or Jerusalem cherries for display next Christmas. Transplant these trees during spring: Magnolias [Soulangeana and stellata are both hardy here], birches, sassafras, altheas, flowering almond, ornamental peaches, and cherries. The tulip tree is not recommended for this region.

Thursday, April 7.

Privet hedges should be pruned before they start into growth. The shape of the hedge can be square or box form, conical, or a combination of the two. Plan to plant a few early gladiolus as soon as the ground can be worked. For succession plant every two weeks until July 1. Soak bulbs twenty-four hours in water before planting. If the soil, when pressed together in the hand, retains its form and is full of moisture, it is not in condition to be worked.

Friday, April 8.

Get the orders mailed if it has not been done. Graft good varieties of fruits on poor sorts. Many seedling trees are growing in backyards with no chance of producing good fruits, but if these are top-worked with good sorts and given plant food, fine fruit will result. Give potted plants plenty of water, otherwise they will wilt. Plants received at Easter can be kept a long time if given proper attention.

Saturday, April 9.

Many perennials are best transplanted during the spring, and especially those that flower late in the autumn. Some of the daisies provide late bloom and the hues may be had in a great variety. Plant the hardy chrysanthemum as soon as it can be procured from the nursery; do not attempt transplanting them during fall. Harden off all early sown plants in the cold frame before planting outdoors.

PULPIT VETERAN OF MAYWOOD TO RETURN TO FARM

Kolmos' Last Easter Talk Draws Record Crowd.

THE REV. JESSE J. KOLMOS.

The Rev. Jesse J. Kolmos, D.D., preached his twentieth Easter sermon from the pulpit of the First Congregational church, Maywood, last Sunday. Wednesday evening Dr. Kolmos was given a farewell party in the church hall, North 5th avenue and Erie street, at which members of the church and fellow townsmen paid tribute to the pastor for his years of service in the community and wished him well in his future line. Dr. Kolmos plans to spend this spring and summer on his farm at The Dells, in Wisconsin.

Dr. Kolmos, in closing his pastorate in Maywood, carries with him the record for the longest years of service in the community of any Protestant pastor. Population of the village has more than trebled since his Easter sermon of twenty years ago. In 1924 the congregation's present house of worship was built at a cost of $115,000. Of the 575 members, only 31 of them were in the church when Dr. Kolmos took charge.

Masons and Lions Attend.

As a tribute to the pastor's activities in the community, as well as in the church, representatives of the Masonic lodge and the Maywood Lions club, which meets in the church hall every Tuesday noon, attended the reception. Among the speakers were H. W. Tolsted, president of Maywood, and Dr. Ernest Guthrie, superintendent of the Congregational union.

Dr. Kolmas organized Maywood's first Boy Scout troop 16 years ago. Mrs. Kolmos, who died a little more than a year ago, was organizer of the Girl Scouts. Mrs. Kolmos was also president of the Woman's Coöperative Missionary society, which now has 275 members. The pulpit of the church has been dedicated to the memory of Mrs. Kolmos.

The church, with its provision for gymnasium and recreational activities, is open nearly every night of the week as a social center during the winter months. Free expression is given the young folk in their social as well as religious life.

Formerly a Dairy Farmer.

Dr. Kolmos, in becoming a farmer, will enter a field with which he is not unfamiliar. For twelve years he operated a farm, in conjunction with his pastorate, near Kenosha, Wis., and shipped milk from fifty cows into Chicago.

Dr. Kolmos received his A. B. degree at Coe college, Iowa; his master's degree at the University of Chicago, his B. D. from Chicago Theological seminary, and his D. D. from Milton university. His ministerial career has been spent entirely in the Chicago area. Previous to his work at Maywood he served as pastor of Crawford Congregational church, South Shore Congregational church, and Bethany Congregational church.

For the last eight years Dr. Kolmos has conducted tourist parties through Europe, each summer covering the continent from North Cape in Norway to Naples, Italy.

Sets New Attendance Mark.

Last Sunday's attendance was the largest in the church's history, and the morning offering amounted to $852.

For a time the pulpit of the church will be filled with supply pastors.

The First Congregational church of Maywood was founded in 1871. Among its pastors have been the Rev. George C. Lamb, the Rev. Henry C. Granger, the Rev. George W. Griffiths, the Rev. Theodore C. Wilson, the Rev. Henry Wilson, the Rev. John Ellis, the Rev. George H. Kemp, the Rev. Samuel P. Dunlap, the Rev. George H. Burgess, the Rev. Frank T. Lee, the Rev. Percival H. Barker, and the Rev. Hiram Brown.

The Rev. Wesley Reidel is assistant minister at the church, which has for its slogan "The Church with the Friendly Spirit." Members of the ministry of music are Emma N. Ewen, choir director and soloist, and Lela Hammer, organist.

Trustees of the church are Daniel Hannon, Thomas Lewis, O. J. Westcott, W. K. Lauth, Vern McCarthy, F. H. Ruhnke, H. W. Ewart, Lyman Dixon, and Henry Bosse.

The deacons are Henry A. Hine, F. P. Castleman, F. H. Merrill, J. D. Jones, L. F. Cooley, Dr. W. J. Wallingord, Emil T. Jernberg, Harold V. Seavey, and Frank Davis.

The Woman's Coöperative Missionary society, of which Mrs. O. J. Westcott is honorary president, has sixteen active circles. Mrs. William B. Porter is associate president of the society; Mrs. F. H. Merrill, first vice president; Mrs. D. L. Mills, second vice president; Mrs. Fred Bartsch, secretary; Mrs. F. C. Hermann, treasurer, and Mrs. C. A. Moore, auditor.

PRESIDENTS ALL

I SAY, SERGEANT:

BY JAMES GAVIN.

MRS. HARRY L. KAGAN, 5050 Quincy street, went out shopping. When she returned her maid, Frances Hoderick, was gone, as were six pairs of silk hose, two suits of silk pajamas, a brown sport dress, a black chiffon, and a quantity of jewelry.

Jerry Lari, 26, 615 South Halsted street, doesn't want to go back to the old country. A United States immigration officer found him at 501 South Trumbull avenue. Jerry jumped out a bedrom window and broke a leg.

Rose Feldman, 7, 1108 South Whipple street, was burned on the arms and legs. She was playing in the kitchen when she knocked a pot of hot coffee on herself.

MRS. MARY ROBSKY, 515 South Central avenue, went to visit her sister, Mrs. Eli Krause, at 5517 West Congress street. A burglar visited her home and took a seal coat, a diamond ring, and a pair of glasses.

Frank Gentile, 16, 1700 Taylor street, became involved in an argument with a fellow motorist. Frank lost. The driver of the other car hit Frank over the head with an iron bar.

Edward Shanahan, 7, 3001 South Canal street, pulled a pan of hot grease off the stove. His arms were burned.

Policeman John Daly, 4516 West Monroe street, was directing traffic at Madison and Lavergne avenue. He was struck by an automobile driven by Wing Lep, 5944 West Madison street.

It was moving day at the Baron Athletic club, 1927 South Allport avenue. Three men held up four members and carried out a radio, an electric clock, an end table, ten books and an electric lamp and shade.

DON NELSON, 1223 Washburne avenue, turned on his midget radio and opened the front window. He walked back into the kitchen, when suddenly the music stopped. Don returned to the front room, but the radio was gone. Some one had reached through the window.

VILLA PARK CLUB REHEARSING FOR BENEFIT CONCERT

Friday nights this month are being devoted by the Ovaltine Music club of Villa Park to rehearsals for a benefit charity concert to be held at the Hawthorne school in Elmhurst on the night of April 30. The club on that occasion will assist the Elmhurst Maennerchor, which extended similar courtesies at a benefit concert held in Villa Park last January.

The music club, organized in 1927, is credited by Gottlieb Steiner with having furthered a community spirit in the village. Mr. Steiner is one of the cello players in the group, several members of which were formerly professional musicians.

Previous Benefits Given.

Three years ago the club gave a benefit concert that is recalled as a gratifying experience. Two years ago concerts were given at Villa Park and Elmhurst churches. This past winter needed relief work has given new incentive to the presentation of public programs.

Hugh Scott has directed the club orchestra since its beginning. From struggles over the simplest marches there has developed an ability to handle heavy overtures.

Officers of the music club for this year are Raymond Carlson, president; William Higgins, vice president; Miss Frances Kipphut, secretary-treasurer; August Butsch, business manager; John L. Fremault, librarian; Gottlieb Steiner, chairman of the membership committee, and Reid Glover, chairman of the music committee.

Members of Orchestra.

Villa Park residents and the instruments they play in the orchestra are:

Violins—William Higgins, Mrs. Leila Schneider, John L. Fremault, Mrs. Geraldine Lawrence, Mrs. Margaret Boppart, E. P. Duplessis, Frits Schaefer, Miss Beulah Glover, Ernest Klewitz, and Miss Emma Milas.

Violas—William Mollested and Thomas Leddy.

Cellos—Gottlieb Steiner, Mrs. Jennie Weiher, and Clarence Yeaw.

Piano—Miss Frances Kipphut.

Flute—Paul Newman.

Clarinets—Raymond Carlson and Paul Wagner.

Cornets—Arthur Miller and Joseph Wagner.

Trombone—Reid Glover.
Bass—Fred Schumacher.
Drums—Weiher.

A. A. Reinman is director of the male quartet composed of Alfred Leabru, John L. Fremault, August Butsch, and Oscar J. Blum.

This coming summer the Villa Park Welfare association has planned for the plowing of vacant lots in the village. Needy families will be provided with seeds and supervision for planting and cultivating the sort of crops that can be stored for the winter.

RADIO, THEATER LEARN HOW TO PLAY TOGETHER

Stage Finds Microphone Is No Big Bear.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

MARGE.

Once upon a time actors and producers would not play with radio. But those days are pretty generally over. The theater no longer looks upon radio as a ravenous bear. When television gets around that corner a new series of fears will arise, but there is really no conclusive proof that broadcasting has injured the box office. Radio appears to be doing the opposite. Witness for example the steady stream of radio-made stars that are breaking the receipts records at the Palace lately. Kate Smith beat record holding Olsen and Johnson's mark there; Morton Downey, Wons and Renard; Whiteman and his band were other recent record smashers. Myrt and Marge, who have had a phenomenal rise in radio, are packing them in this week, and that's what Ben Bernie will do beginning April 30.

The stage is going further than welcoming radio performers. It is turning to radio as an outlet for its own talents. Ten years ago Ziegfeld would perhaps have laughed at the suggestion that he would ever court radio. Tonight 70 stations, including W-G-N, will be linked for his first presentation of the invisible "Follies."

BERNIE CUMMINS.

The all-star exhibit of the air tomorrow looks like an event of the year. Headliners for this show, which is designed to stimulate the automotive industry, include Paul Whiteman, Erno Rapee, Frank Black, Gus Haenschen, the Revelers, Ohman & Arden, Mildred Bailey, Countess Olga Albani, Welcome Lewis, and Aileen Stanley. Taking part in the Chicago end of the show, which runs all week, are Ben Bernie, Art Kassel, Herbie Kay, Bernie Cummins, Dan Russo, Johnny Maitland, and many others.

Ted Weems, Wayne King, Jack Denny, Earl Burtnett, Dan Garber, Sleepy Hall, Husk O'Hare, Coon-Sanders, Jack Pettis, and Anson Weeks are orchestra leaders joining the parade elsewhere.

SALERNO CLUB HAS TWO HEADS, FAN MAGAZINE

LAWRENCE SALERNO.
[Theatrical Studio.]

The new Lawrence Salerno club is an up and coming club with two presidents, an honorary member and a fan magazine. It's published monthly and is called the Lawrence Salerno Serenader.

Donna Dickey and Jean Mackenzie, the presidents, who live at 7321 South Shore drive, have received letters from all over Chicago and the middle west, and even from Canada since the club was organized a month ago.

ORPHAN ANNIE HUNTS MISSING BLACK TIN BOX

Who played the April Fool joke on old man Trimble, the meanest man in Simmons Corners? Who carried away the little black tin box with its mysterious contents that he had secreted under the sun dial in his front yard? These are questions Little Orphan Annie and Joe Corntassel are asking themselves during their broadcasts these nights from W-G-N and twenty-one NBC stations.

Frank Dahm, author of the script, hasn't told as yet what the conclusion of the story will be, but boys and girls everywhere are wagering that Annie and Joe succeed in finding the missing Trimble tin box, even if they don't know what's in it.

Stars of Ziegfeld productions of the past and present will be picked up from the east and from the west coast for the first presentation of the Ziegfeld Radio show, to be heard over W-G-N and seventy stations of the Columbia network from 7 to 7:30 p. m. tonight.

The list of celebrities appearing on the opening program at present includes Florenz Ziegfeld, his wife, Billie Burke; their daughter, Patricia; Lupe Velez, dynamic Mexican motion picture actress and star of Ziegfeld's current Broadway success, "Hot-Cha," and Eddie Dowling, popular author, actor and producer, star of several editions of the "Ziegfeld Follies" and of numerous other stage successes, including "Sally, Irene and Mary" and "Honeymoon Lane."

Al Goodman Wields Baton.

Musical portions of the Ziegfeld Radio show will be under the direction of Al Goodman, at present conducting the orchestra in the pit of the Ziegfeld theater, where "Hot-Cha" is playing. Goodman will direct the same theater orchestra for the air programs.

Eddie Dowling will act as master of ceremonies on each presentation of the Ziegfeld show, and will introduce Ziegfeld and his stars to radio listeners.

Billie Burke on West Coast.

Tonight's presentation will open in New York with "A Pretty Girl Is Like a Melody," one of the most popular songs from any Ziegfeld production, after which Dowling will introduce the celebrated impresario and his guests. It then will switch to Los Angeles, from which point Billie Burke and Patricia Ziegfeld will be heard. The program then will be resumed from New York.

In addition to presenting the guest stars individually in songs and comedy bits, each program will include one episode or more from, or the recreation of some high spot in, a Ziegfeld show. On the first program the "Tulip Time" scene from the "Follies of 1919" will be recreated and the episode of the late Victor Herbert stepping into the pit to direct the playing of "A Kiss in the Dark" will be reenacted.

The fulfillment of that dream of all fishermen—discovery of an unfished lake hidden away in the wilderness—will be described by Bob Becker, outing authority, during his broadcast over CBS at 4:45 today and at 9, tonight over W-G-N. Bob will tell his fellow angling enthusiasts how he found the lake in northern Wisconsin, caught 50 giant bass in 2 hours and 20 minutes, carefully turning them back in the water as he caught them, and returned to camp with a story that aroused a chorus of "O, yeah?" and "Says you." Becker only convinced the doubters by returning to the lake with a motion picture camera and six witnesses.

CENTURY OF SONG IS REFLECTED BY LEWIS WHITE

Follows in Footsteps of Forbears.

Lewis White, baritone, heard from W-G-N at 10 every Sunday morning, brings to radio a background of vocal achievement enjoyed by his family for more than 100 years. His grandfather was an outstanding authority on religious music in the east as early at 1850.

His family was famous for choral organizations they formed five decades before the civil war.

His father was a choir director in St. Paul, Minn., and was known as one of the best in the northwest.

Lewis, however, was born in Chicago. He was educated in the public schools and after attending Englewood High school entered Crane college. It was while attending Englewood that the quality and range of his voice was discovered.

He started his singing in concert at 18. It was after one of his tours throughout the states he became associated with the Imperial Opera company, an organization which is remembered for its excellent presentations of light and classic opera. He later became interested in oratorio work and has sung in "The Messiah" in most of the states in the Union.

In 1923 he did his first radio work over WDAP, which later became W-G-N. He deserted the radio for a while to continue his studies. Then he turned to the concert stage again, but in the fall of 1930 he returned to W-G-N and has been with the station ever since, always presenting the Sunday morning concert.

Lewis White is a thorough musical artist. In his work at the station he has been called on to sing with almost every conceivable combination of instrument—symphony orchestras, organ or piano. Just now he shares the radio spotlight with Allan Grant, pianist.

"Broken Lullaby," playing at the Marbro today, will hold your interest from beginning to end. Lionel Barrymore is splendid as Dr. Holderin, the old German physician whose only son has been killed in the world war, which instills in him a hate for Frenchmen. The young French violinist who killed the boy is played by Phillips Holmes. Filled with remorse, he goes to Germany to confess to the lad's parents. They take him for one of their son's friends and when he falls in love with the dead boy's fiancée matters crash to a dramatic ending.

The film adaptation of Zoe Akins "The Greeks Had a Word for Them" also plays at the Marbro today. Madge Evans, Joan Blondell, and Ina Claire are cast as the three blond sophisticates whose theme song to sugar papas is "Dig a Little Deeper."

A Film to Keep You Guessing.

"Do not wave stick when trying to catch dog" is Warner Oland's warning to members of the New York police force in "Charlie Chan's Chance" on the billboard at the Crawford today. As usual in these series he plays the quiet, canny Chinese detective who comes to the aid this time of both the New York police and Scotland Yard. Marion Nixon is the maiden in distress. It will keep you guessing. "Girl of the Rio," also playing, stars Dolores del Rio, Leo Carrillo, and Norman Foster.

Waitress and Rich Young Man.

Barbara Stanwyck does good work in "Shopworn" now at the Paradise. The story is the one about the poor waitress who meets the rich young man, played by Regis Toomey. His mama does some strenuous objecting, but all ends well. Zasu Pitts is clever as the heroine's lifeless sister.

One for Custard Pie Fans.

A real old fashioned pie throwing comedy is playing at the Senate today. "The Passionate Plumber" has the following cast: Buster Keaton, Irene Purcell, Jimmy Durante, Gilbert Roland, and Polly Moran. The blossom of the piece is Durante's love affair with Polly. Will Rogers' fans will flock to "Business and Pleasure" on the same bill. Cast as a razor blade king abroad, he mixes business and pleasure with real American aptitude.

"Union Depot" at the Byrd.

"Union Depot" with Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Joan Blondell starts today at the Byrd, showing the public the inside and out of a railway station where a young hobo's fondest dreams come true when he finds a violin case full of money. There's a catch to it, however. The dough is counterfeit and lands both the chap and his blond chorine in jail. Miss Blondell is sophisticated, but not too hard boiled and Doug appealing in his boyish way.

Among other things Marge wants to sue Jack for divorce because he failed to play a hand according to her rules. Her lawyer doesn't look on this as good grounds and hits upon another idea, including the third point of a triangle.

ASSURE ROCKERY FOR GLEN ELLYN BIRD SANCTUARY

Ornithologist Anxious for Migratory Season.

The Benjamin Gault bird sanctuary and wild flower preserve, in a glen between Main street and Forest avenue in Glen Ellyn, is awakening to its second spring under the supervision of the Glen Ellyn park board. Due to the action of the park board, the wooded ravine, through which trickles a tiny stream, gives promise of retaining its primitive charm for posterity.

BENJAMIN GAULT.

A project for this spring is the development of rockery in the sanctuary. From now until June, during the migratory season, will be one of the most interesting periods of the year in the sanctuary.

Benjamin T. Gault, 570 Anthony street, Glen Ellyn, a resident of the village for 42 years and internationally known as an ornithologist, desires that the bit of park shall contain only the trees and flowers that are native to Illinois. The naturalist, after whom the sanctuary was named, hopes that Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and school groups will visit the little park for educational purposes.

Observer for Bird Writer.

When Frank M. Chapman wrote his "Handbook of Birds of Eastern North America" some years ago, Mr. Gault did observation work for him, using Glen Ellyn as a base for his operations throughout Du Page county. Mr. Chapman considered the location the best for his purpose and Mr. Gault his best authority.

Mr. Gault said the woodthrush, one of the finest songsters, has always found the site of the Glen Ellyn sanctuary a congenial spot. This season's first robin is no novelty, for he remained in Glen Ellyn all winter. Given an opportunity to obtain food, the robin is not concerned with the shelter problem. The robin's early song is a notice to other males of his species that he has staked off his foraging territory.

Born at Decatur, Ill., and moving later with his parents to New Hampshire, Mr. Gault returned to Chicago with his family shortly after the assassination of President Lincoln, and the family moved to Glen Ellyn in 1890. Since childhood, Mr. Gault has been interested in birds and he found Glen Ellyn an ideal place to study them, the Du Page valley being in the route of the migration.

Studies Birds in Ireland.

In 1924 Mr. Gault made a two years' stay on the west coast of Ireland, and his talk on "A Bird Lover in Ireland" has been given before many groups. On his return to America the veteran naturalist disposed of his collection of Irish birds and mammals to the Museum of Comparative Zoology in Cambridge. Incidentally, one of Mr. Gault's ancestors, Gov. Thomas Dudley, donated the farm on which Harvard university now stands.

Mr. Gault is a member of the American Ornithologist union and an honorary director of the Illinois Audubon society. The study of birds is accomplished as much through the sense of hearing as from seeing the specimens, he said. Asked how he can remember the technical name for each bird coming under his observation, he said the knowledge has simply become a part of him.

During April the naturalist plans to pay daily visits to the sanctuary which bears his name. If he sees and hears far more than the casual visitor it is because he has made a specialty of bird study for more than half a century.

Two hundred and twenty-five species of birds have been recorded as occurring in Du Page county, and of these 203 have been found within the limits of Glen Ellyn.

In the county are 18 resident birds, or those found there the year around. Of the transients, or those merely passing through during the seasons of migration, 114 have been listed. The county has 11 winter visitors. There are 82 summer residents.

Mr. Gault lists the following birds as having nested at one time or another within or close to the newly established bird sanctuary:

Mourning dove, screech owl, yellow billed cuckoo, downy woodpecker, red headed woodpecker, northern flicker, crested flycatcher, phoebe, wood pewee, Baltimore oriole, bronzed grackle, song sparrow, towee, cardinal, rose breasted grosbeak, indigo bunting, scarlet tanager, oven bird, cat bird, brown thrasher, house wren, white breasted nuthatch, wood thrush, robin, and blue bird.

WHO'S WHO ON WEST SIDE

Dr. Bernard M. Fantus, Oak Park, for thirty years a physician of the west side, has been working for the last three years in advancement of a proposal to incorporate the hospital district of the west side into one definite area surrounded by a park, eliminating traffic and other disturbances. He was also active in starting the campaign against the elimination of ragweed in west side vacant lots.

INFANT WELFARE OF GLEN ELLYN TO GIVE PARTY

Placards bearing the mysterious slogan, "Keep Friday, April 8," were on display in shop windows of Glen Ellyn for some time before the puzzle was solved. Now it is known that the date has been set by the Glen Ellyn Infant Welfare society for its benefit card party, with proceeds to go toward carrying on the work of that organization. The event will be held at 8 p. m. at Acacia hall in Glen Ellyn.

Mrs. Digory W. McEwan is president of the Infant Welfare association, but during her recent illness her duties have been assumed by the vice president, Mrs. Stanley Furbeck. Mrs. David Watson is secretary of the society and Mrs. Dwight W. Early treasurer.

Like many of its sister organizations, the motto of the society is "Keep the Baby Well." It supports its own infant welfare station in the community and coöperates with the Glen Ellyn relief committee in helping care for destitute families where there are children. Last year 5,000 quarts of milk were given out.

Mrs. Furbeck is assisted by Mrs. Randolf Branner, who is in charge of ticket sales; Mrs. G. E. Nicholls and Mrs. Henry W. Witmer, refreshments; Mrs. George Finch and Mrs. Florence Nissen, cards and card tables, and Mrs. John Hafner, dishes and silver.

Mrs. Furbeck was assisted in the arrangement of details by Mrs. George Carlton, immediate past president; Mrs. Frank Duggan, work chairman for two years, and Mrs. Frank Denninger, this year's station.

Ask THE TENANTS YOURSELF

FIND OUT WHICH NEWSPAPER WANT AD SECTION THEY PREFER WHEN HUNTING APARTMENTS

Before you decide where to spend your advertising appropriation this year, find out definitely where it will do the most good.

Ask the tenants in buildings you now own or represent. They are representative of the class of people from which you can expect to draw future tenants. They offer a fair test.

Put this question to them:

If you were looking for an apartment, to which Chicago newspaper want ad section would you turn first?

76% OF TENANTS INTERVIEWED NAME TRIBUNE

990 representative tenants answered the same question in a recently completed study of their reading habits.

76% of them named the Tribune. Only 22%—less than one-third as many—named the second newspaper. Only 4%—one-nineteenth as many—named the third newspaper. Only 3%—one-twenty-fifth as many—named the fourth newspaper. (A few persons mentioned more than one newspaper.)

TRIBUNE PREFERENCE IS CITY-WIDE

This survey was made in such a way as to get a real cross-section of metropolitan Chicago. The tenants lived in 19 Chicago neighborhoods and two suburbs, in 157 apartment buildings advertised by 37 different agents.

Yet wherever the investigators went, the majority of tenants chose the same favorite apartment-to-rent medium. In every Chicago neighborhood studied, the Tribune led by 2 to 1 or more.

242% more tenants named the Chicago Tribune their favorite apartment-to-rent guide than named any other one newspaper—and nearly three times as many people named the Tribune as named all other Chicago newspapers combined!

These facts show why Chicago apartment advertisers, during 1931, bought more than twice as much furnished and unfurnished apartment-to-rent advertising in the Tribune as in any other Chicago newspaper.

WRITE FOR THE REPORT

The books are open to you. A complete report of the survey has been made, showing how the returns came in, neighborhood by neighborhood. You can find out which apartment buildings were investigated, by which firms they were advertised.

Get the full details. Write for the report. Or, if you prefer, ask your own tenants the same question asked and answered in this important survey.

WHAT THE ADVERTISERS THINK

During 1931, the Chicago Tribune printed of furnished and unfurnished apartment-to-rent advertising, which was more than twice as many lines as were published by any other newspaper and more than were published by all other Chicago newspapers combined!

798,358 LINES

43,316 LINES

WHAT THE READERS THINK

During February, 1932, the total net paid circulation of the Chicago Daily Tribune was more than

815,000 COPIES

which was a lead over any other daily newspaper of more than

310,000 COPIES

Afternoon of Modern Music on April 10th

Chicago Branch of International Society Plans Second Performance.

By Edward Moore.

organized for the purpose of giving living composers a break.

John McCormack, most famous of all those who sing in the tenor register, will be at the Civic Opera house this afternoon, his final appearance here this season, and the last time he plans to sing in Chicago for over a year. He is appearing today for the benefit of the work carried on in Chicago by the Sisters of Mercy, and in particular for the clinic which was opened last February at the John B. Murphy hospital.

A feature of the program will be a group of songs which Mr. McCormack will sing in remembrance of his friend, the late Chauncey Olcott, who made them known throughout the country in his own repertoire. They include "Mother Machree," "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling," and "My Wild Irish Rose." In a telegram announcing his intention, Mr. McCormack says, "I never sing them without a thought of him, and it is the only tribute I can pay to my very dear friend whose death is a great loss to me."

Something was said in this column a week ago about the desirability of musicians getting away from the idea of keeping their music aloof from the public. Here are two brief bits of evidence about those who do not keep it aloof. Albert Spalding, the violinist, has been playing an American tour this season of eighty-four engagements. Of this number, forty-five were re-engagements. And Lucrezia Bori, who usually confines most of her professional activities to the operatic stages of the Metropolitan and Ravinia, sent out word a short time ago that she would undertake a recital tour next season. It is already completely booked and includes, among others, appearances in Chicago, New York, Boston, Buffalo, Rochester, Detroit, Baltimore, Washington, Pittsburg, Louisville, New Haven, and Hartford.

Soviet Russia, which insists that "art is a manifestation of class consciousness, a weapon to complete the revolution and to support the socialist structure," offers a musical prize contest to celebrate the fifteenth anniversary of the revolution. It desires the best new opera, symphony and ballet. Twenty thousand rubles will be given as first prize for opera, 2,000 for second, and 8,000 for third. The same amounts are offered for ballet. In the symphony class the prizes are 7,000, 4,000 and 3,000. The contest closes March 1, 1933.

According to the specifications, the music "must develop new forms which will not only synthesize the musical culture of the past, but also be a monumental musical expression of humanity transformed by the proletarian socialist régime."

The Chicago A Cappella choir, with the record of some unusually enjoyable singing here under the direction of Noble Cain, plans a brief eastern tour beginning next Wednesday. The itinerary includes a concert at La Porte, Ind., a brief program before the Music Supervisors' National conference in Cleveland, a concert at Carnegie hall, New York, an appearance at the White House in Washington, and a stop at Camden, N. J., for the purpose of making some Victor records. These will include John Alden Carpenter's "Song of Faith," presented here by the choir and the Chicago Symphony orchestra under Mr. Stock's direction during the Washington bicentennial concerts; Bach's "Sing Ye to the Lord," sung on the same programs and also on others; and Arnold Mendelssohn's "Christmas Motet," translated from the German by Mr. Cain and performed for the first time in America by the choir at its concert in Orchestra hall Feb. 3.

"Manabozo," the Indian opera with book by Francis Neilson and music by William Lester, will be presented in the form of an operatic recital at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Neilson, 4800 Drexel boulevard, next Friday evening for the benefit of the Lincoln Center camp and the Friday Morning forum. Mr. Neilson will read excerpts from his libretto; Mr. Lester will play the orchestra score on the piano; Mrs. Lester and four other soloists will sing the leading rôles; Mr. Lester's choir will sing the choral parts.

"Iolanthe," by Gilbert and Sullivan, having been presented by the Sinai Light Opera company, will be repeated at the Emil G. Hirsch center, 4622 South Park way, tonight. Charles J. Espenshade is the musical director. Ralph J. Halperin is stage director, and Rosalie Pollack has arranged the dances.

The Music Art Council of Chicago will present a Spanish fiesta at the Opera club this afternoon under the direction of Isaac Van Grove. Mrs. Mae Rosenwald Herbst, soprano, Olga Rosenova, dancer, and Edward Gradman, violinist, will be the soloists, and the Music-Drama guild, a women's chorus, will make its first appearance in a series of Spanish songs.

The Chicago Symphony orchestra has no soloist this week, but Mr. Stock promises two novelties and a great symphony. The novelties are a Chorale and Fugue by Zemachson, whose name does not seem to have penetrated into the reference dictionaries as yet, and the Polka and Fugue from Weinberger's opera, "Schwanda, the Bagpipe Player," a work which from the excerpts heard hereabouts would seem to have much of the tunefulness of "The Bartered Bride" with some of the orchestral coloring of Richard Strauss. The symphony will be Glière's gigantic and unfailingly entertaining "Ilia Mourometz."

Cara Verson, who specializes in contemporary music for the piano, will play a program of it at the Playhouse tomorrow afternoon. It includes Malipiero's suite, "Masks that Pass," Szymanowski's "Scheherazade," Scriabin's Sonata, opus 53, a group by Lecuona, Turina, de la Vina, Pittaluga, Mompou, and de Falla, Kodaly's "Epitaphe," and Bartok's suite, opus 14.

Leon Theremin has been adding to the scientific complexities of music. He will be remembered here a few years ago when he demonstrated the instrument to which he gave his family name, a metal bar with all sorts of electrical instruments around it where, by waving the hands to and fro, a melody could be produced out of ether waves. That is, those who knew how could do it. Those who did not produced mostly unpleasant and off-pitch squeals.

He now has a whole orchestra of theremins and some other instruments besides, which he has been displaying in New York. One is what he calls the "musical dance stage," wherein the stage itself becomes the sensitive electrode, and the dancer by different postures produces a difference in pitch. Apparently every dancer produces her own tunes.

Another is the "stroboscope," whose theory is a bit difficult to grasp, but in which geometrical patterns do optical tricks to the accompaniment of theremin sounds. The "rhythmicon" is a third. It is not exactly a musical instrument, but it plays tones in any desired combination of rhythms from one to sixteen, and by so doing works out in harmonic intervals according to the chord of the physics laboratory. Thus, two rhythms operating in the relation of five to four sounds a major third, three to two a perfect fifth, and so on.

M. Theremin's electronic orchestra has been brought into better control since it operates by fingerboard and keyboard devices, the fingerboards regulating the tone colors. It is said that he has an entirely workable orchestra of sufficient compass and timbre with only sixteen players.

Massed Worship to Mark Dublin's Eucharistic Rites

DUBLIN.—(AP)—Massed in 80 divisions of 8,000 each before the high altar, 640,000 worshipers will hear the papal delegate celebrate the pontifical mass in Phoenix park here June 26 at the Eucharistic congress.

The divisions are divided into subunits, almost military in character, down to groups of 250 each.

The men will be stationed on the gospel side of the altar, the women on the epistle side.

Special robing rooms will be provided for priests in the railway stations, and all clergy are to go to the park in choir dress.

Chilean Seaside Resort Seeking Gambler Tenant

VINA DEL MAR, Chile.—(AP)—A "for rent" sign has been hung out by this city, the prince of Wales' favorite South American seaside resort, in the million dollar gambling casino, built last year.

Patrons have been numerous, but receipts have been low and the city is trying to find someone to take the place off its hands.

City councilmen believe that an individual can operate the casino more economically than does the city, and thus take in enough to give him a nice profit.

Vina's casino is the only one in Chile where roulette and baccarat are permitted under government regulation. A cabaret, theater, movie theater, restaurant, and two midget golf courses complete the layout.

Film Capital Is Amazed Over Harding Case

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—(AP)—When Hollywood heard the news of Ann Harding's and Harry Bannister's intended divorce, it was amazed.

For here was a marriage talked of and written about as one of Hollywood's genuinely happy ones.

Miss Harding and her husband seemed to prefer each other's company to any other.

They built a home, jointly planned and jointly paid for, high on a mountain where they lived almost in seclusion.

In interviews Miss Harding told about their ideal home life, their complete happiness and once she scoffed at the "bunk written about paying the price for a career," intimating that her career was in nowise affecting her domestic bliss.

Not only did the rest of the country believe that the married life of Ann and Harry Bannister was successful, but ever-skeptical Hollywood thought so, too.

Hints of a Disagreement.

There were hints of a disagreement about a year ago, but these were effectively denied. There were none of the persistent rumors, such as usually precede marital breakups in the movie colony.

Yet there are those in Hollywood who say that the divorce of the Bannisters was inevitable, because—just as Ann's letter to the newspapers announcing it had said—Bannister was beginning to be thought of as "Ann Harding's husband."

Their positions on the stage, before coming to Hollywood, were of about equal importance. Fate twisted their careers after they arrived here—Bannister on tour in "Strange Interlude," his wife to rest following the birth of their daughter, Jane, now 3 years old.

Bannister was asked to take a film test and Miss Harding, "just for the fun of it," went to the studio with him. Instead of offering Bannister a contract after they saw the joint test, film executives sought and demanded Miss Harding.

Insisted Bannister Be Hired.

She finally accepted the contract, but she insisted Harry Bannister also be hired.

Miss Harding, because her studio was "sold" on her, quickly rose to stardom. Bannister was relegated to minor rôles.

Only a few weeks ago he was cast for an important part—his first in several months—in a picture with John Barrymore, but after a few day's filming he was replaced by another actor.

Bannister accepted his removal from this picture philosophically with the statement, "I'd rather be flying my plane or playing golf anyway."

Attorneys, or friends, usually announced divorces in Hollywood. The method taken by Miss Harding, of sending letters to the press, was a novel exception.

French Foreign Legion Filled to War Strength

PARIS.—[U.P.]—The six regiments of the French Foreign Legion are filled with recruits at more than full war strength, so the word has been sent around to recruiting stations that no more recruits will be accepted at present. The world depression and unemployment are blamed.

At the same time that it put up bars temporarily against volunteers, the Legion cut from 5,000 to 1,000 francs the enlistment bonus, which was once badly needed to attract recruits. French colonial regiments still offer 5,000 francs enlistment bonus, but they will take only French soldiers.

With the rush of recruits, the physical and mental examinations were made so strict that four out of five applicants were refused. Things have changed in the Legion and it is now as hard to get in as it once was to get out.

The five infantry regiments are located in Algeria, Morocco, Syria, and Indo-China, the one cavalry regiment in Tunisia. Recruits are trained at Sidi bel Abbes, at the edge of the Sahara, in Algeria.

Milne Revival.

Guthrie McClintic will revive "The Truth About Blayds," A. A. Milne's comedy, on April 11 at the Belasco theater, New York, with Pauline Lord as star. She will have the rôle first taken by Alexandra Carlisle in Winthrop Ames' production of the play in 1922. The supporting cast will include O. P. Heggie in the rôle he created ten years ago; Effie Shannon, Ernest Lawford, Frederick Worlock, and Rachel Hartzell. The company which appeared in the first American performance of the play included Leslie Howard, Ferdinand Gottschalk, Frieda Inescort, and Gilbert Emery.

Orchestras Are Uppermost in Week's Disks

Berlin Philharmonic, and English and American Groups Represented.

By Edward Moore.

RECORDED music, like other music, seems to have a habit of running in waves. One week it will be all songs, the next a large amount of Bach, the third mostly piano. The present column must deal with orchestras and their performances.

The largest of these, in point of length and bulk, comes from the Brunswick studios and is Brahms' Second Symphony. It is not the only recording of this symphony on the market, for not many months ago Victor put out a set made by the Philadelphia orchestra under Mr. Stokowski's direction. The Brunswick album, No. 35, and an importation, contains performances by the Philharmonic orchestra of Berlin, conducted by the veteran Max Fiedler. In record numbers it is 90217 to 90221, nine sides, the tenth being occupied by the scherzo of the Brahms Trio in C, opus 87. This is played by the Berner trio, who are itemized as Hier-Brun-Lehr.

Generally speaking, it is an able performance, though the recording engineers would seem to have been at little pains to overcome the thick orchestration which sometimes tempted Brahms beyond his powers of resistance. Mr. Fiedler has apparently spent much time in the Brahms aura and has become well acquainted with the Brahms traditions, even though he does not always lift his stick with the vital pulse beat and pace of, let us say, Mr. Stock when he takes the work in hand with the Chicago Symphony orchestra.

This second symphony invites speculation because it displays the composer in some of his best moments and a few of his weaker ones. There are those who, admiring greatly the Brahms peaks, would like to do something to overcome the low points. Once, a few years ago, it was proposed to take one movement from each of the four symphonies and thereby synthesize one first class symphony. Another greatly daring commentator used to hold that Brahms should never have written any symphonies at all, that his inspired passages seldom last beyond thirty-two measures, and that, therefore, his real greatness was to be found in his songs and shorter piano work. Just the same, his symphonies seem to be uncommonly durable, wherefore Brunswick has done its bit in spreading the Brahms lore.

Another Symphony.

Passing to Columbia, one finds another symphony, Mendelssohn's Fourth, otherwise known as the "Italian." It is in the Masterworks series No. 167, and the three records of the set are 68007-D, 68008-D, and 68009-D. Sir Hamilton Harty and the Halle orchestra of England have made them.

Here is a performance with all the vivacity in the world. It may be that the Mendelssohn themes are getting to sound a bit thin in this year of grace, but they are lightly scored, and consequently the technical recording is excellent; also there are few times when one can find fault with Sir Hamilton's tempos in matters of speed, so that the whole work in general, and the Saltarello of the last movement in particular, move with the pace of the liveliest sort of dance feeling. This set classifies in the first order of excellent recording.

A pair of single records from Victor brings more orchestral music of an uncommonly entertaining kind. No. 7474 presents Mr. Stock and the Chicago Symphony orchestra in the ballet music from Goldmark's opera, "The Queen of Sheba"; 11169 displays Albert Coates and the London Symphony orchestra in Borodin's work, "In the Steppes of Central Asia." Here are two cases where the combined names of music, organizations, and conductors ought to be enough to popularize the records. The music is charming in both cases, the performances are perfect, the recordings something to gladden the hearts of the recorders.

Gotham Faces Musical Loss for Next Year

By Joan King.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—New York music lovers have received two severe shocks recently. The first, the announcement of the directors of the Metropolitan Opera company, that that company has "insufficient funds to assure another season." The second, the resignation of Dr. Henry Hadley as conductor of the Manhattan Symphony, with the explanation that musical conditions have proved "too uncertain" to warrant further expenditure of time and effort on an independent orchestral venture.

Up to the present depression the Metropolitan, it is said, has always paid its own way, the profits of one season balancing the losses of another. Various methods of meeting this situation which threatens to destroy this organization which has meant so much to American music are under advisement. Impresario Gatti-Casazza has already appealed to the company personnel asking them to forego "questions of contracts and rights" in this "matter of life or death" and to accept compensation in relation to changed conditions, offering himself to serve under any necessary reduction in salary or, if need be, without any remuneration.

Problematical Assistance.

There has been a move under discussion for some time purposing to take the opera to Rockefeller center. Then there is the Juilliard foundation, endowed with $15,000,000 to promote musical education, the deed stating the trustees may help the Metropolitan produce operas providing that production does not redound to the company's financial benefit. The great opera public waits anxiously while all these ways and means of retaining their beloved old institution are being studied.

During the three years since its organization, the Manhattan Symphony has added much to the symphonic bill of fare hereabouts. Especially has it devoted its time to the production of new works by American composers. Altogether thirty Americans have been represented on its programs. Dr. Hadley has not only conducted the orchestra but has helped to finance its work. Prior to his work with the young organization, he lead the Seattle Symphony orchestra, the San Francisco Symphony, was several times conductor of the Philharmonic, has led his own works at the Worcester choral festivals, and has appeared as guest leader in Japan, South America, and many European capitals. His operas have been produced by all the leading American Opera companies, the Metropolitan having given "Cleopatra's Night," and the Chicago "Azora, Daughter of Montezuma."

Honor Gustav Holst.

Albert Stoessel and his oratorio society paid honor to Gustav Holst, distinguished English composer, in his Carnegie hall concert recently. He opened his program with Mr. Holst's two psalms, for chorus, strings and organ. The first, LXXXV., is that of supplication; the second, CXLVIII., of rejoicing. The composer, who was present in a box, had to acknowledge long and hearty applause at the conclusion of the society's admirable performance of his works. For the rest Mr. Stoessel offered Edward Elgar's "Dream of Gerontius."

Perhaps the most enthusiastic musical gathering of the recent interim was present at Carnegie, to wish José Iturbi a seasonal farewell. They were well rewarded for their presence, for the superb pianist's best gifts were displayed. No finer interpretation of the "Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue" by Bach has been heard here. The Schumann Fantasia was also exquisite. The Chopin B minor concerto which followed was received in like fashion. The program ended with a brilliant rendering of the "Campanella" étude.

This pianist, who becomes more and more a popular artist, hereabouts, entertained a crowd at the footlights, such as it tendered the favored few, a concluding ovation, and a great demand for encores.

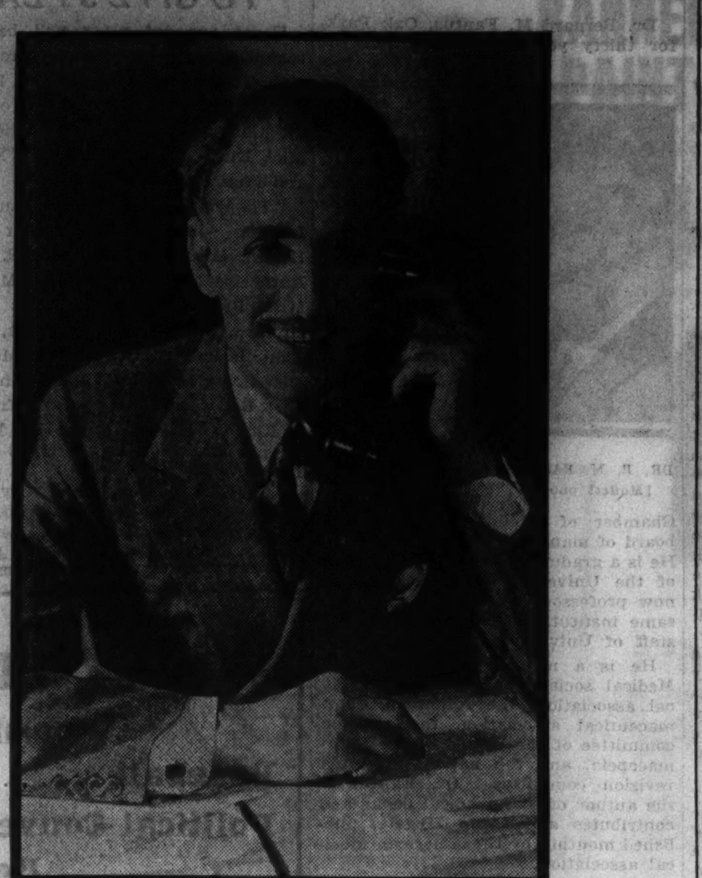
Rosa Ponselle at Town Hall.

A large crowd of operatic enthusiastics filled Town Hall for the fifth recital of that hall's endowment fund series. They were there to welcome their favorite, Rosa Ponselle. Miss Ponselle's program, apparently arranged to please everybody, included Italian and French songs by Parelli, Veracini, Widor, and Lecocq; a German group including Lieder by Brahms, Wagner and Schubert; a final group by Arensky, Grieg, Sadero, and La Forge, and a number of operatic arias. Romano Romani's aria, "O, Divina Afrodite," from "Fedra," the composer at the piano, with its opportunities for the singer to make much use of her top notes, pleased her hearers.

Meet the Counselor



OTTO KRUGER.

WHEN the year's achievements in fine acting are checked up, the name of Otto Kruger ought to appear high on the list. He plays the hero of Elmer Rice's "office scene" drama called "Counselor-at-Law," at the Selwyn theater, and gives the most striking performance of a brilliant career.

Stage Actress Turns Back on Cinema Career

Mechanical Film Acting Is Condemned by Creative Erin O'Brien-Moore.

NEW YORK.—(AP)—It may be assumed from her name that Erin O'Brien-Moore is Irish, which also explains why she is a determined young woman.

Because, as she says herself, "I'm terribly stagestruck," she turned aside a movie career and its accompanying wealth, as it was interfering with her ambition to be a star in the theater.

This auburn haired Irish girl first caused a murmur among the critics when they stumbled upon her in an obscure Greenwich Village playhouse.

There she was doing her best to give life to a futuristic art play called "Him," written by e. e. cummings, an author who is opposed to all capital letters.

Success in "Street Scene."

The following season, as the young sweetheart in "Street Scene," she became what would have been the toast of the town if this were still the age when gay young blades drank champagne from their favorite's slipper.

Immediately Hollywood beckoned, and Miss O'Brien-Moore, with some misgivings, signed her name to a contract that brought her more money than she ever imagined there could be in one place.

"When I reached the studios," she explains, "I found they had a vastly different idea about acting. To me a performance in the theater is something creative, something that can't be turned out as if it were patterned by a machine. I just wouldn't act according to rules as they wanted me to do."

Misunderstood by Directors.

So Miss O'Brien-Moore refused to make a picture. She remained a year in Hollywood, where the directors could never understand the determined ideas of this young actress.

Now she is back on Broadway in "Riddle Me This," and it is a coincidence that she plays the rôle of the sweetheart of a newspaper man, for Miss O'Brien-Moore comes from a family of newspaper men.

Her grandfather was editor of papers in Galveston, Dallas, and New Orleans. Her father was editor of journals in Charleston, W. V.; Tucson, Ariz., and St. Louis.

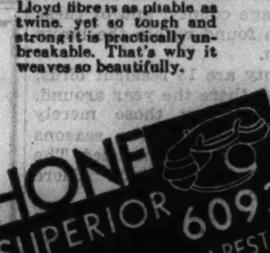
Try Wrapping a Bundle with a Twig

—SEE WHAT HAPPENS

The oriental reed still used in some carriages is like a twig in one respect; when it is bent to form a shape it's likely to snap in two. When Lloyd used it years ago, it was soaked in water before weaving, but even then it wasn't easy to get the reed to hold its shape after it became dried. The weave was often coarse; had rough ends exposed; hand weaving was expensive.

That's why Marshall B. Lloyd invented the now famous Lloyd Loom. A continuous tough, smooth, pliable, unbreakable fibre strand is fed into the Loom and forms any shape in one operation. The texture is smooth, even and as lovely as a fine fabric. So much more uniform than hand weaving. So much less expensive. Is it any wonder the smartly dressed mother prefers to wheel a fashionable Lloyd? Her admiring friends probably all think it's quite expensive!

The Reed Test
Take a piece of reed and try this yourself. It's brittle; it snaps; it's uncertain for weaving.



LLOYD Fibre Test
Lloyd fibre is as pliable as twine, yet so tough and strong it is practically unbreakable. That's why it weaves so beautifully.

Gloria Swanson Merits Devoted Mother as Title

Young Gloria and Adopted Son Are Carefully Shielded from Publicity

HOLLYWOOD.—(AP)—To the real life rôle of mother Gloria Swanson brings in ample measure the grace and sincerity which make for good performance on screen or stage.

About to assume that rôle again, as she announced in London, the screen star has with her in Europe the two best testimonials to her maternal instinct.

They are little Gloria, aged 11, her child by her second husband, Herbert Somborn, Hollywood restaurateur, and young Joseph, aged 9, adopted by the star when he was an infant and given equal status with her own child.

These are the children who will have for playmates, as Gloria plans, the heir of her new husband, Michael Farmer.

Carefully Reared.

Little is known by most of Hollywood about the Swanson youngsters, for Gloria consistently refuses to let the spotlight in which she has lived for years touch them.

But Gloria's close friends vouch for the careful rearing, for the devotion that has been lavished on the two children.

Says one of them: "They have a governess, who has been with them for years, but Gloria, even when she's very busy, always has time for the children herself. No matter what she is doing, whether she's giving a dinner party, or entertaining, or studying, if the children have something to tell her she goes to them."

Constant Guardianship.

The children attend public school in Beverly Hills, and are driven to and from school daily by a chauffeur. They are, as are the children of most famous film stars, constantly under adult guardianship to protect them from kidnapers. That is one penalty all movie children pay for their parents' wealth and fame.

But otherwise they live much as other children of wealth. They are well dressed, have virtually everything in the way of playthings and toys—Joseph has a leaning to boats and airplanes at present—and quite often have little parties to entertain their friends. Little Gloria and Joseph early were started in musical studies.

Gloria Swanson, the star, is very much Gloria, the mother, when she travels. If it's at all possible without interfering with their schooling she takes the children along.

The last time she returned from Europe—when she was busily denying her marriage to Michael Farmer, and getting married—she couldn't get to Hollywood and the children soon enough. She sent for them to join her in New York.

Suicide Marks Tragic End of De Putti Case

BUDAPEST. — (AP) — Near the empty "grave" of Lya de Putti, screen actress who died in New York some months ago, is another, in which lies the body of her husband, Zoltan de Szepessy, believed to have killed himself in a despondent mood after long grieving over her death.

The grave is empty because it was already being kept green and decked with flowers while Lya de Putti was playing opposite Emil Jannings in Germany and, later, continuing her screen career in Hollywood. A tombstone bears the inscription:

Here Lies
Mme. Zoltan de Szepessy
Born Lia Putty
Who Died at the Age of 22.

Headed Toward Hollywood.

When this inscription was carved the 22-year-old brunette, who later was to become known to the film world as Lya de Putti, was headed away from home, husband, and children.

Zoltan de Szepessy was left behind on the ancestral estate where he and his dark-eyed bride, whom he married when she was 17, had lived five happy years. At least they had been happy for him.

So, instead of telling his two little daughters their mother had fled, he told them she had died, and prepared a grave which he told them was hers.

Each morning for years the daughters, Iloma and Judit, visited the grave and prayed for the soul of their mother.

No Make-Believe Grave.

Meanwhile she was in Hollywood, or New York, or Berlin, or London. One morning not long ago they prayed, as usual, at their mother's grave. This time there was no make believe except in the emptiness of the grave. For the newspapers everywhere were headlining: "Lya de Putti Dead."

Friends of Szepessy say he grew sadder and moodier after this news from oversea.

In the hotel room where he was found one morning with a bullet in his heart and a revolver in his hand was a note saying financial difficulties were too much for him.

Gifts Returned Unopened.

Later, however, those who looked into his affairs said that, while his estate was heavily mortgaged, his difficulties were not at all overwhelming.

So the opinion persists that he brooded long over Lya de Putti, once his bride, later a screen star, and finally he put an end to brooding by suicide.

The daughters who survive him are now 16 and 17 years old.

Their only memories of their mother date before the time her screen career began.

The gifts she always sent them from Hollywood or elsewhere at Christmas time were as regularly returned unopened. Szepessy sticking resolutely to the fiction that his daughters' mother had "died, aged 22."

Divorce List in Hollywood Still Growing

Women Who Prefer Career to Home Cause Majority of Marital Tragedies.

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special.]—The break between Ann Harding and Harry Bannister is only one in a long sad list of similar marital tragedies due to the modern problem of women wanting a career.

Every one of Gloria Swanson's three marital clunks was due to this cause—the men just couldn't stand up under the strain of being the mere husband of Gloria. Constance Talmadge dropped two husbands, Pialoglou and Alastair MacIntosh, that way.

Dolores Del Rio's marriage went on the same rocks, most tragically. Ina Claire and Jack Gilbert, Colleen Moore and John McCormick had similar trouble, the man resenting the rival fame of the wife, or vice versa.

Zasu Pitts had been a success on the screen for years while her husband, Tom Gallery, an early screen favorite, slipped into oblivion. Recently they busted up after four years of putting a brave front on their agreement to disagree.

It is the most difficult of human problems in Hollywood and no one seems to have found the answer to it.

Separated by Fame.

Just a few months ago, when interviewing Miss Harding, the writer was told by the star that she believed the only way to keep her home happy, due to her increasing fame and earning power, was to keep herself always reminded that fame passes quickly, and that she realized that long after she was passé Harry would be going ahead with a fine career, as men can do up to an advanced age on the stage. Even this common sense outlook did not save the day for these two who found fame tearing their hearts and home apart.

Perhaps it's mean to mention it, but a year ago at the time of a prize fight in Reno some radio announcer blithely said that Harry Bannister and his lovely wife, Ann Harding, were entering their box. Wife Ann was at home in Hollywood at the time and this mystery is one that still remains unsolved; but it was a rumble of the present splitup which many folk discussed for some time afterwards with various speculations. To all observers, the two were devoted lovers, kissing an holding hands as they drove about town in their limousine or flew about the country in their plane.

Wallace Beery's Hobby.

Wallace Beery, interviewed recently at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, seemed a lot more anxious to talk about his hobby, aviation, than about the art of being a big movie star. Wallie never takes his successes too seriously; he has had too many of them over too long a period. He always insists that his brother Noah is as fine an actor as is on the screen, and laments Noah's present inactivity.

Questioned as to how he happened to leave Sennett's, Wallie answered quite honestly: "I got fired for duck hunting. I liked duck hunting better than acting, and it got so that whenever Sennett needed me I was duck hunting. So I got fired."

Beery said that eighteen corporations in which he had invested portions of his film earnings have failed recently. Among them were several costly aviation ventures he backed.

"I don't mond," he continued. "It wasn't a total loss, for the money went to furthering the science of aviation. I can still earn money, so why should I complain? I like the children my wife and I adopted, and I can't get home fast enough at night. We hardly ever go out socially. I have plenty of money for all the things I really want."

Complicated Marx Plot.

Somebody asked Groucho Marx what the plot to the new picture was about. "The requisitions at the studios call for cheese cloth, nitric acid, footballs, a harp, old bottles, gasoline, horsehide, beeswax, ice, dogs, lemon juice, wild animals, soda pop, a skeleton, and cotton. That's all I know of the plot so far," answered Groucho.

Ben Turpin is billed to appear in a vaudeville act at the local Warner theater in Hollywood.

Tom Douglas, screen juvenile, has a parrot which is no yesman. Every time the front door bell rings the parrot yells: "Hello," and follows this up in a moment with a loud "No."

Maureen O'Sullivan and Hardie Albright gave a farewell dinner for the family of John McCormack on the eve of their departure for Ireland. Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Farrell [Virginia Valli], W. S. Van Dyke, and Brummel Fletcher.

More than a hundred guests dined, danced, and played bridge at the fifteenth wedding anniversary and birthday of Chico Marx. It was given at the Hill Crest Country club; festivities lasted late, and all was merry.

Corinne Griffith has been working at the Paramount-London studios, and during her stay there has been taken up by London society.

Historiette

MARLENE DIETRICH is proud of her legs because they are long and straight. She makes it a point to buy stockings that show them off to the greatest advantage.

Miss Dietrich, christened Marlene von Losch, was born Dec. 27, 1904, in Weimar, Germany. Her father, Deuard von Losch, was a German nobleman and a first lieutenant in the German army. As a child she yearned to become a violinist, but an injury to her left wrist interfered and she took up acting.

Because at the time it was against tradition for a member of a noble family to go on the stage, she changed her name to Dietrich. She is the wife of Rudolf Sieber, who was manager of the Ufa studios when she was an extra. They have a 6 year old daughter, Maria. Miss Dietrich lives in a ten room house in Hollywood, and, it is said, black, deep blue, and green. Her favorite motion picture star is Joan Crawford.

She dresses simply and appropriately and her favorite colors are black, deep blue, and green. Her finger nails are enameled red and she paints her toe nails black. Her outstanding performances in this country, to which she was brought by Josef von Sternberg, were "The Blue Angel," "Morocco" and "Shanghai Express." It is said that this actress very much resents comparisons between herself and Garbo. The lady is 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 120 pounds, has blue eyes and naturally curly red-gold hair. She speaks German, French and English fluently.

Critic Chooses Finest of the Month's Films

And Gives Honorable Mention to the Best Individual Performances.

By Mae Tinee.

there are no dull moments in this photoplay, and those featuring the star positively emit sparks . . . to be ranked with the better pictures of the day and will find a ready sale in neighborhoods where brilliant acting is appreciated."

"ARSENE LUPIN"—Two swallows don't make a summer, but two brothers, the Barrymores, put "Arsene Lupin" right up in the list with the month's "best." "TWO Barrymores! Now THERE'S an embarrassment of riches!" said the original review. . . . "No matter what you think of story, direction, photoplay or supporting players, there's no getting round the fact that one Barrymore brother in a picture can do a heap toward making that film—whatever else it may or may not possess—worthy of attention. Corral two of them in the same cinema and star dust will blind your eyes to a multitude of imperfections . . . For not one moment are you unresponsive to these two dynamic personalities. Lionel I consider the more expert technician, as a rule, but this trip there are sure no flies on John! . . . Let's hope that the Barrymore brothers do not soon dissolve partnership."

"THE LOST SQUADRON" I thought a thrill packed movie . . . not a war picture and yet of war and war's aftermath it sings . . . unusual and arresting entertainment . . . air sequences are breath-taking . . . finale touching and "different."

Well, do we agree about last month's "Six Best?"

Bits aBOUTem.

VICKI BAUM, we hear, worked as a chambermaid in two famous Berlin hotels to gather the material that resulted in "Grand Hotel," which has been made into a movie with Greta Garbo, Lionel and John Barrymore heading the cast. . . . ANXIOUS INQUIRIES as to the whereabouts and whyabouts re: GARY COOPER will be relieved to know that his vacation in the interior of Africa is over and that he is en route to Hollywood to resume work at the Paramount studios . . . THIS, GIRLS, from LILY DAMITA:

"A French woman never hurries through her toilette," declares Miss Damita. "No matter how late she is for an appointment, the allotted time for makeup, hair, bathing, perfuming and manicuring is given full measure.

"When a French woman leaves her boudoir she takes a last long, leisurely look into her mirror. Her hat is adjusted once more to the correct angle, her gloves are always on and neatly hooked into place, her handbag and handkerchief are scented and tucked under her arm. Not until she has held complete inspection and is assured that every detail is right, does she leave her room. But once the French woman leaves her mirror, she forgets about her appearance and makes no further adjustments. The prevalent repairing of the complexion in public is avoided." Important dressing-table secrets of the French woman are, according to the star:

Spraying perfume on the inside of gloves and on each article of lingerie just before it is used. Giving the face a quick, stimulating facial every morning before dressing. Carefully rolling stockings and then securing them with several garters to prevent twisted seams and wrinkles.

See you tomorrow!

The Voice of the Movie Fan

Treat for Typewriter.

Dear Afternoon Show: My three favorite pictures are "The Big Parade," Charlie Chaplin in "Shoulder Arms," and the fight pictures showing Tunney licking Dempsey.

As a poet I think you are a first class movie critic.

I haven't seen any robins yet and my coal bin is almost empty.

If you are as good looking as your picture leads one to believe then you ought to be a movie actress yourself instead of breaking the hearts of our hard working Hollywood honeys with your caustic newspaper comments.

Notice the length of that last sentence without a comma.

God bless Marie Dressler.

If I win a prize just send me a due bill on Cook county as I won't need any money for a long time.

Yours with filmy eyes,

DON CLARK.

P. S. I didn't have anything else to do tonight and I wanted to try out my old typewriter.

Editor's note: Poor old typewriter!

Every Flaw Registers.

Dear Miss Tinée: If it isn't too late, we would like to register our disapproval of the glaring errors in the picture "Secret Service," starring Richard Dix.

We know it wasn't your fault or Mr. Dix's [whom we admire], but we just must blow off a little excess steam by writing to you about them. We list these errors herewith:

1. The "test" apparently proved Dix innocent and the heroine standing outside the telegraph office with the villain in the dark could not read telegraphic code or confirm her doubts. Yet she whispered, "You must escape," to him after her intervention with the papers that proved he was in charge in the telegraph office.
2. If the heroine did know Dix was a spy, then she betrayed her country by aiding him.
3. During the "test" Dix practically embraces his brother and says quite audibly, "We're being watched!" Couldn't the men at the window notice this or were they, by another error, away from the window? Also, weren't men just behind the door?
4. The brother grabs the gun to shoot himself in the leg. Actually, in the picture, he fires far above the leg.
5. Did the brother die from a mere leg wound?
6. Dix remarks, "But whatever happens, miss, I want you to remember just ONE thing," on three separate occasions, each one being a different remembrance.
7. Dix gives a speech about the hardships and duties of a spy for one's country, yet he throws down his country for a girl.
8. Dix, a proved spy in the end, is "held a prisoner of war in view of his peculiar behavior." Now, aren't all spies lined up and shot, no matter what they have or haven't done. Or weren't they in those days?

Yours for accuracy,

ROBERT DUNLOP,
HAROLD SOFFER.

Editor's note: You are very observing. But, tell me this—Do you see a movie to enjoy it or to pick it apart?

Unrivaled Marlene.

Dear Miss Tinée: Every time I hear the railroad engine bell, I am haunted by "Shanghai Express." It is the most beautifully photographed and directed picture I have ever seen.

Any one who can wear a veil, a hat and a feather boa and still be exquisite is a great beauty and actress. Did you ever see such expression in hair? She uses her hair and slings it about as others do their hands.

MARIE REYNOLDS.

Editor's Note: Splendid acting!

Prefers Suspense First Hand.

Dear Mae: No longer can I keep silent. I have just read your column again and I'm gnashing my teeth.

PLEASE! PLEASE! Don't give away the plot of the picture when you review it. Comment on the acting ability of the players, the director's skill, whether you think it is excellent or just another picture, classify it as to whether it is historical, gangland, romance, comedy, or sophisticated—BUT DON'T TELL THE STORY!

I don't go to as many shows now as I did before the depression, but when I do spend my four-bits I want to experience the suspense of the plot.

However, I think your articles are original and have more respect for your judgment of pictures than I have for any other critic. So we're still friends, aren't we?

Yours very truly,

MARGE CONNELL.

Editor's note: Indeed we're friends! Notice how secretive I've been lately?

Likes and Dislikes.

Dear Miss Tinée: I enjoy reading your column very much, although I do not always agree with you.

I also enjoy seeing Marie Dressler, Greta Garbo, Fredric March, Ramon Novarro, and Kay Francis.

Lionel Barrymore is certainly getting tiresome. He has the same mannerisms in every picture and although some may think he can act, personally, I think his name carries him through.

Frederic March was wonderful in Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde.

Joan Crawford and Clarke Gable were a disappointment in "Possessed." I certainly agree with Betty Eckersall's opinion that Joan Crawford's close-ups of staring eyes and open mouth are getting monotonous. Except for his rather pleasing voice, what is attractive about Clarke Gable?

This is the first letter I have written. Hope to see it in print.

Elizabeth.

Editor's note: Here you are! Come again!

Musical Shows End Drought on Chicago Stage

'Everybody's Welcome' and 'Blue Mask' Please First Night Audiences

By Charles Collins.

cided that he would produce his own works, and thus win the profits of an impresario, if he met with success, as well as gleaning the usual royalties. So as author-manager he staged in New York a play called "The Left Bank," dealing with expatriated Americans of the art and literary sector of Paris. It clicked neatly, and is now in the twenty-sixth week of a Broadway run.

A few weeks later he offered his "Counselor-at-Law," and much to the amazement of the Broadway weather prophets, who claim that lightning never strikes twice in the same place, he scored again—much more emphatically than before. "Counselor-at-Law" is now nearing its twentieth week in New York, and a duplicate company has reached the ninth week of a Chicago run, with no end in sight.

Mr. Rice recently sold the talking picture rights to "Counselor-at-Law" for a reported $175,000, plus a percentage of the profits. Moreover, he annexed himself to the pay roll of the firm, at a salary on a true Hollywood scale, as the adaptor of the manuscript for film uses. So when he hears talk about an economic depression he says: "Never heard of it."

Vox Pop Tells What's Matter with Theater

To the Dramatic Editor:

CHICAGO, March 29.—I don't think that there is at the present time a good crop of authors who can write good plays. It seems to me that they either can't write or they are all out of good ideas, because whenever a good show does come they fill the house and make money; for example, a show like "Green Pastures."

Then, too, it seems to me that the author and the producers are getting away from a high type of idealism. They seem to think the drama of today must have: First, a lot of sex stuff presented rather coarsely, and second, a lot of swear words. They seem to forget that if one wishes to hear dirty stores he can hear them for nothing by talking to the boys of the club, in the back room of the saloon, or in the barber shop. For example, Fred Astaire's show, which was a peach, had a lot of things in that were unnecessary. They forget that one can hear a fine brand of swearing by a jaunt over on Goose Island or South Halsted street, where swearing is produced ad lib.

I don't know what is wrong with their psychology. The brewers and distillers were put out of business by their short sighted policy and their conduct in their business, and I think the theaters will be cleaned up from outside to their detriment. It seems to me that they are in need of a thorough house cleaning.

I love the theater and get a great relaxation out of it, and I find that the critics are eminently fair and chiefly honest. I cannot recall, at the moment, a show that the critics said was bad where the criticism was not substantiated when I went to see the show. The occasional critic may like to show his powers of sneering and sarcasm, but when you take the dramatic critic, by and large, I think he is doing a great job. DOCTOR.

Chicago, March 28.—Before the depression audiences at the theater were made up largely from people who, having decided to go to the theater at a given time, duly picked one of the attractions by a hit or miss method and went. They were seldom visited by the undeniable urge to see any one play or any one star, save perhaps one that had been famous [though no one could remember quite why] over a long period of time. The theater audiences were both indiscriminate and wealthy. In hopes of attracting their attendance and their shekels the managers went further and further along the road to sensationalism, vieing with the movies to attract the man in the street.

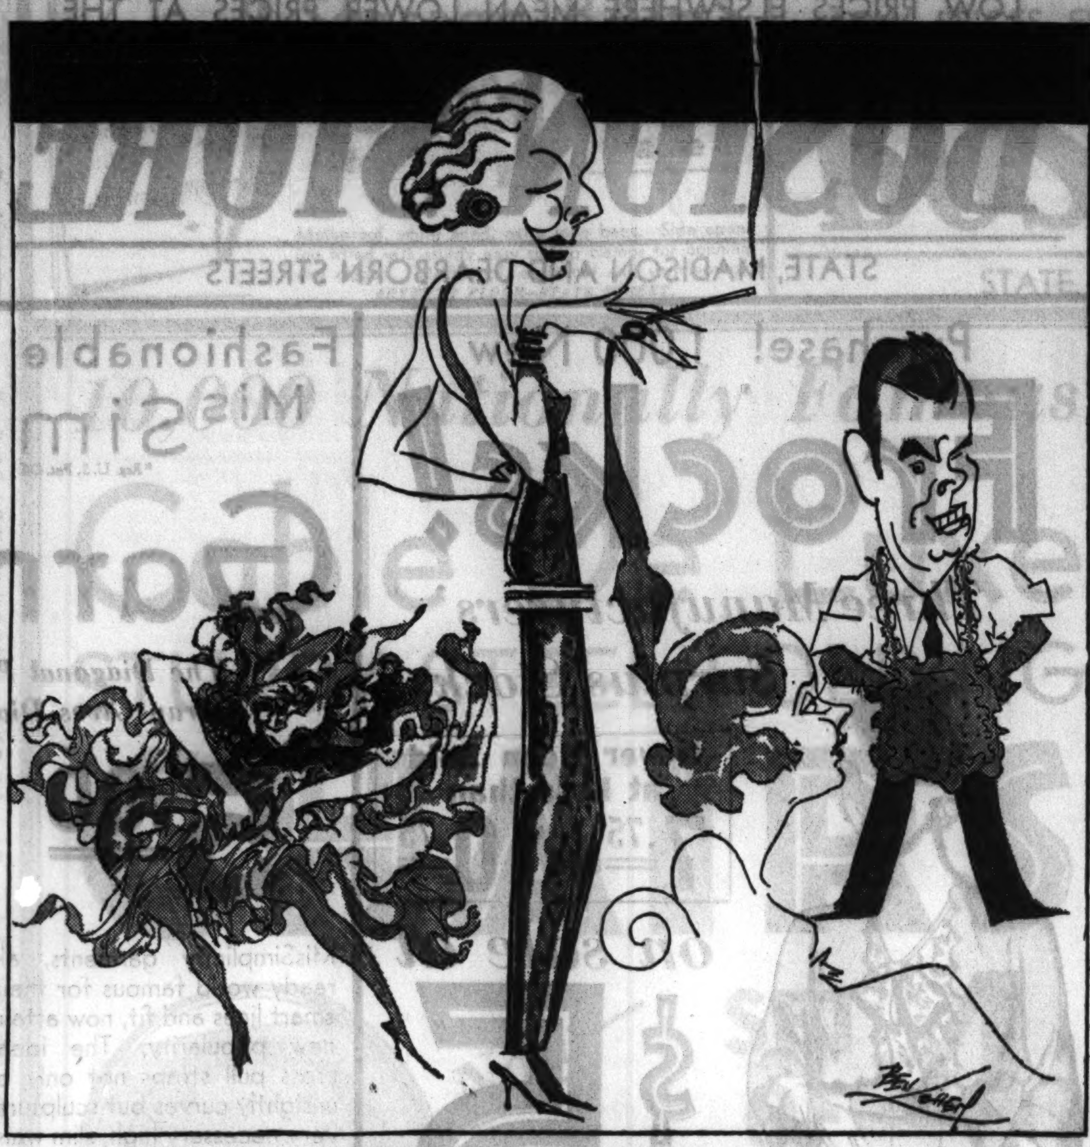
During this time when the professional theater was craning its neck after an unattainable something which was not worth having the amateur stage was gaining more and more interest. At present the little theater movement is not experiencing more than a normal amount of doldrums. An instance which might perhaps interest you is one which happened in a small Iowa town. The university little theater and a professional company chose the same night to produce, the opera house being the scene of the professional activities. The little theater played to an audience of 600, the opera house had but 101. That may prove nothing, and yet it shows a trend, I think.

More and more young people are emerging from the colleges and universities of the country with an appreciation and a knowledge of the theater. Nearly all the colleges provide an opportunity for those interested to act, stage, direct, or to write plays. These people will eventually go out into the smaller towns, and large ones to a lesser extent, and, being lost without that circle of activity, will create a circle of their own. Some of them will no doubt be ludicrous, ineffably bad; some of them will undoubtedly be excellent. Therefore, the intelligent, appreciative audience, to which the theater has an undeniable right but is either too indolent or too patronizing to make sure of, is creating its own theater, gradually becoming independent of the producers. The loss is a great one to the theater.

The crisis in the professional theater is here at hand. Unless it finds some way to recapture the audience which is turning to the amateur organizations in the smaller communities it will not survive the crisis. A theater fashioned and carried on for the benefit of as small a percentage of the population as the Broadway audience [illegible] survive.

SHIRLEY GRANT.

Faces and Figures in Musical Comedy



CHARACTERS IN "EVERYBODY'S WELCOME."

Jane Cowl in Vampire Role; Theater News

NEW YORK, April 2.—[Special.]—Jane Cowl has changed her mind about acting in a Spanish comedy, and has turned to a piece called "A Thousand Summers," written by a certain Merrill Rogers. It is said to give her a rôle similar to the vamp in "Fata Morgana," first acted by Emily Stevens, and in this season's revival by Ara Gerald—that is to say, a wanton woman of the world who seduces a provincial youth, much to his distraction.

Under the joint management of Arch Selwyn and Shepard Traube, Miss Cowl will offer this play as a spring attraction. The first performance will take place April 18 in Easton, Pa. Philadelphia will be visited a week later, and then, if all goes well, Broadway will be invited to give its verdict. Franchot Tone of "Green Grow the Lilacs" will be Miss Cowl's leading man.

Max Gordon, impresario of "The Band Wagon," is planning an intimate revue. He hopes that Clifton Webb and Gertrude Lawrence will accept contracts. Next September he plans to bring the German operetta called "Waltzes from Vienna" to Broadway. This piece deals with the composing Strausses, father and son, and requires the services of 100 players. Hassard Short, Mr. Gordon's stage director, is now on his way overseas to study the European production. When "Viennas from Vienna" had been launched for better or for worse, Mr. Gordon will stage a new operetta by Messrs. Hammerstein and Kern, and a Dietz-Schwartz piece called "The Three Cornered Hat."

William Harris Jr. has an idea that he might offer Edgar Wallace's last play to American audiences. Its title is "The Green Pack," and its London permière, with Sir Gerald Du Maurier as star, took place two days before the author's death. It is said to be an improvement on Mr. Wallace's other writings for the theater.

Joseph Santley is preparing to stage and act in a play that deals with radio entertainers, bearing the title of "Coast to Coast." A première in Boston is scheduled for April 18. The cast will include Frank Allworth, Daphne Warren Wilson, Lotta Bonner, Alfred Kappeler, and Phyllis Joyce.

The New York Times will present tomorrow the report of a scout who has been sent into the middle west to find out what the tribes west of the Hudson like for theater going fare. The Broadway boy writes from St. Louis, in accents of amazement:

"I saw 'The Band Wagon' here last evening and regret to state that the good St. Louisians on the whole did not know what it was all about. There was scarcely a laugh on the opening number where the old style revues, etc., are kidded. Why should they laugh when the 'Vanities,' for instance, sold out here recently? The very thing 'The Band Wagon' kids is what these people adore. I understand that Cincinnati audiences were about the same. 'Vanities' did not do so well in Chicago, but in these other middle western cities it sold out completely, and is exactly the sort of thing they want.

"This town is steamed up over the personal appearances of Frank Fay and Barbara Stanwyck—'Hollywood's Perfect Sweethearts'—and, so help me, they are billed as I've never seen people billed before—on street cars, in the back of taxicabs, everywhere."

Ambitious Girl.

Dorothy Day, who plays the switchboard operator in "Counselor-at-Law," now at the Selwyn theater, has literary ambitions. She has completed a novel called "A Chorus Girl's Book of Etiquette," which is now being considered for publication by a publishing firm in New York. Miss Day has never been a chorus girl, but she has had plenty of experience observing them, for she had an important rôle in "Fifty Million Frenchmen," a successful musical comedy of two seasons back.

Bringing 'Barretts'

KATHARINE CORNELL announces that she has arranged to act Rudolf Besier's "The Barretts of Wimpole Street" in the Harris theater in Chicago for a limited engagement beginning on Monday night, April 18. It is definite that she will play two weeks here, and if the response warrants her doing so, she will extend her engagement to a total of four weeks.

Miss Cornell left New York while the public still was trying to buy tickets to see this play, because she wanted to take the drama on tour and feared that if she waited until the Manhattan engagement had reached its normal end, the public through the country would have tired waiting for it, and perhaps the performance might have become dulled through long repetition.

Besier's play tells the romance of the poets, Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett, as it began, grew and culminated in Elizabeth's sitting room at 50 Wimpole street, London. The author has been faithful to literary history, and only in his interpretation of the strange character of Elizabeth's father does he use his imagination. He gives the stubborn old gentleman a Freudian twist.

Miss Cornell acts Elizabeth Barrett, Brian Aherne is the Robert Browning, Margalo Gillmore appears as Elizabeth's rebellious sister, Henrietta, and Charles Waldron has the rôle of the elder Barrett. Guthrie McClintic staged the production, and Jo Meilziner designed the setting and costumes.

For Billie Burke.

"The Mad Hopes," a comedy by Romney Brent, will be presented on the Pacific coast about May 15 by the firm of Belasco & Curran, in association with Bela Blau, Broadway producer. Miss Billie Burke will play the leading rôle in the play, which was tried out last summer under the title of "No Money to Guide Her."

"Angeline Moves In"—Opens Tuesday night at the Belmont. The announcements list this as the work of R. B. Lackey. The cast includes Sue MacManamy, Barry Townley, Sally Starr, Billy Quinn, Joan Clive, Leo Kennedy, and Hal Clarendon.

Its chief characters are a New England bridegroom and his Paris bride, who return to his home from a honeymoon abroad. Among the players will be Katherine Wilson, Louis Jean Heydt, Beverly Sitgreaves, Corbet D. Morris, Richard Hale, Regina Wallace, Clare Woodbury, Molly Pearson, and Frank Conlan.

She also will present the sleep walking scene from "Macbeth" as it might be portrayed by Haidee Wright, Ethel Barrymore, and Mae West.

Guerrero-Mendoza company — The week's bill of the Spanish company at the New Yorker theater will be: This afternoon, "La Sombra," from the Italian of Dario Niccodemi; tomorrow night, "El Genio Alegre," by the Quinteros; Tuesday night, "En Flandes Se He Puesto El Sol"; Wednesday night, "Los Mosquitos"; Thursday night, "La Mariposa Que Voló Sobre El Mar"; Friday night and Saturday matinée, "El Gran Galeoto," and Saturday night, "La Ráfaga."

"There's Always Juliet" — This play will move tomorrow night from the Empire to Henry Miller's.

Lunts Not Coming

To the dramatic editor:

Chicago, March 30.—THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE carried the information that "Reunion at Vienna," with the Lunts, was a coming attraction, and I have a letter from the Theater Guild on March 22 saying that ". . . we regret to advise you that the Lunts will not appear in Chicago this season, as 'Reunion in Vienna' will not be given out of New York again this season."

Is there nothing Chicago can do to make the Theater Guild know that we, too, would like to see the Lunts at least once a year, and that many of us believed we were subscribing to the Lunts when we subscribed to the Theater Guild? SARA B. PLACE.

New York Hits May Be Errors West of B'way

Prospects for "Of Thee I Sing"; Shows Planned for Convention Time.

ANNOUNCEMENTS that a special company of "Of Thee I Sing," the musical satire on American politics now popular in New York, will be organized for performances in Chicago during the month of June, when the national conventions will be held, must be regarded as premature, and probably completely misguided. THE TRIBUNE'S special theatrical correspondent on Broadway interviewed Sam H. Harris, producer of the show, on this point a few days ago, and Mr. Harris said "no," with emphasis.

The musical shows that are brewed in the latest and most fashionable extracts of vinegarish New York satire have not been received with relish by the play-going public of Chicago. Witness "Strike Up the Band," which curled and died here last season, after a great success in New York. Witness, as a play without music, "Once in a Lifetime," which was the talk of New York for a full season, but which was rejected in Chicago and in every other city that was visited during its brief tour.

The plans for "Of Thee I Sing" at present are to let it run its course in New York, then to send it to a few eastern cities, such as Boston and Philadelphia, and then put it out of commission. Of course, if some bold impresario offers to buy the trans-Allegheny or unsophisticated rights from Mr. Harris, that will be another story.

All of which illustrates the point that there is a widening gap between the theater-going tastes of New York and the rest of the country. This state of affairs has been going on for several years, and the fact is at last recognized by the Broadway managers.

Along the Broadway curbing gossip is running that at least six musical shows might be launched for engagements in Chicago while the conventions are in progress. But back of the gossip there is nothing tangible at the moment. Conventions have often proved to be a snare and a delusion to theater managers. It is probable, however, that George White's "Scandals" will be in town to stimulate the tired delegates. He shrouds his plan in mystery, but apparently he intends to give the revue in the most capacious playhouse he can find—which means either the Auditorium, the Majestic, or the Civic Opera house.

Helen Hayes in "The Good Fairy" is dated for a première at the Selwyn theater May 9. This arrangement would seem to give "Counselor-at-Law" five more weeks in Chicago. However, like everything else in theatrical affairs, the scheme is subject to change on short notice.

Florenz Ziegfeld has taken a firm stand against the New York sophisticates. The dramatic critics of that metropolis pronounced his latest show, "Hot-Cha," old fashioned; and the old maestro of the revues is thundering violently in rebuttal. He advertises his entertainment as "not sophisticated," but containing "hearty laughs for the masses." He adds the threatening prophecy: "Advanced sophistication will bring on the censor."

Alexander Woollcott, the New York dramatic critic who called "Strange Interlude" the "Abie's Irish Rose of the Intelligentsia," has just got around to speaking his mind freely on the subject of Eugene O'Neill's "Mourning Becomes Electra." He writes in the New Yorker magazine:

"O'Neill is honest, blunt, clumsy, humorless, and without enough perceptive knowledge of the human heart to handle the themes which his well-nursed ambitions lead him to attack. The author of the vivid sea pieces has come ashore and peopled his stage with characters he himself does not know much about." The third play of the trilogy he pronounces "sheer wallow."

The Group theater, which promises to become another Theater Guild, will go into summer retreat at an experimental playhouse on the Atlantic seaboard with the following plays to prepare for next season: "Donogoo," by Jules Romain, adapted by Gilbert Seldes; "Yellow Jack," by Sidney Howard; "Balloon," by Padraic Colum; "New Year's Eve," by Waldo Frank; and works, now being written, by Maxwell Anderson, Paul Green, and Edmund Wilson. C. C.

New in Chicago

"LOUDER, PLEASE," a comedy that had a recent engagement on Broadway, will have a première at Woods theater tonight, marking the return of this playhouse to the "legitimate" class after several years of a cinema policy. The play, written by Norman Krassna, deals with publicity methods of the Hollywood studios in a satirical manner, thus recalling "Once in a Lifetime." Unlike its forerunner, however, it is said to contain melodramatic as well as farcical situations.

Frank Thomas will appear in the leading rôle—a frenzied press agent of the film stars. This actor's career includes participation on "Lulu Belle," "Crime," and "The Dove." Enid Markey, Leo Curley, and Joan Winters are also prominent in the cast. Miss Markey may be recalled from "Sisters of the Chorus." Mr. Curley played the detective in "Subway Express." Miss Winters figured in the Chicago runs of "Apron Strings" and "The Jade God."

Armchair Playgoer

By Fanny Butcher.

OCCASIONALLY in a book which is not at all a volume about the stage, one finds amusing bits about stage folk. Last week there was published a volume called "Heritage of Years" [Minton Balch], which contains the reminiscences of Frances M. Wolcott, a very young and very delightful woman of 80, who knew many lands almost as well as she knew her native country, who took American charm abroad long before the annual tourist armies began besieging Europe, who knew the great of her own land as well as of the continent, and who has a charming casual way of putting down her memories.

FRANCES M. WOLCOTT

On one crossing of the Atlantic there sat at her table Henry E. Dixey, who was a furore in his day. "A kinder, more unselfish heart never beat than his," Mrs. Wolcott writes. "All that he could do to help amuse or aid my sick husband was done. He could laugh with one side of his face and cry with the other at the same time. He was distressed at the inartistic toupee that graced General Thom's head and could not be deterred from suggesting an able theatrical wig-maker. . . . Dixey carried a large leather portmanteau filled with the love letters of stage-struck women. Scented stationery with crest and monogram, or lined foolscap sheets—all honored the charm of the most graceful man on the American stage."

And of Ellen Terry she writes: "While lunching with her one day in London she told me the story of her marriage to Watts, of her love for the father of her children, and of the tragedy of receiving, on the day of the birth of her last child, the news of the marriage of her lover. A long illness followed. What a truthful simplicity of statement! A story written in the blood of her heart! . . . I loved her then and found her a faithful friend always. . . .

"I saw Sir Henry and Ellen Terry often together, and in their unaffected intimacy, his mantle of selfishness and arrogance made a dark foil to the ardent desire on her part to forward his fame rather than her own, and to please him. . . .

"Whatever Irving's manners, he was at all times supreme master of the stage. As Shylock, when he discovers the loss of his daughter and his ducats, he reminded me of a conversation I once had on the long-short journey from Boston to Philadelphia, with the great nerve specialist, Dr. Owen Wister. He advanced the theory that the Jewish people are the most hysterical of all races. Two forms of hysteria which he had seen rarely had been among the 'chosen people.'

"I have seen many Shylocks. All save Irving have fallen below the intensity demanded by the scene before his despoiled house. I have wondered whether Irving knew the facts on which Owen Wister dilated, and based his interpretation on that hypothesis."

Mrs. Wolcott's reminiscences are in no sense of the stage. She was always merely a delighted playgoer.

"Ballyhoo" Revue.

"Ballyhoo of 1932," a revue, will be presented on Broadway in May by Bobby Connolly, Lewis E. Gensler, Russell Patterson, and Norman B. Anthony. Mr. Anthony will write the sketches and Gensler the score. Patterson will design the settings and costumes and Connolly will stage the dances.

perience. A terrible fate was publicly predicted for "A Few Wild Oats."

Hero Is an Aviator.

"Happy Landing," however, has some theater value. It is a simple comedy which picks up the Lindbergh flight theme after all these months. Its hero is a young garage mechanic in Maine who patents a fancy carburetor, assembles a plane and hops off from Old Orchard Beach for Japan.

Flying solo something over 6,000 miles, he lands topside up and is world famous by the time he gets home. Then the advertising racketeers get hold of him and sell his soul. He was engaged to a telephone girl in Maine, but the bad influences around him, plus his expanding ego, drive her away.

Finally, the hero discovers what is happening to him. Like the lad who, earlier in the season in a play written by the Barkers of Chicago and called "The Man on Stilts," he attends a big reception in his honor, speaks his mind over a national hookup on the radio and flies away to Maine to recover his lost love.

A simple, unbelievable little piece of theater pretense, but honest enough to please a lot of playgoers if it can live until they find it.

Russell Hardie, who suffered effectively as the beaten boy in "The Criminal Code," is the flight hero of "Happy Landing," and Margaret Sullivan, who was happily cast in "A Modern Virgin," has the other lead. Catherine Dale Owen plays a blond temptress and Harry Davenport a comedy bit. John B. Hymer and William E. Barry are the authors.

A Wire from Ziegfeld.

Mr. Florenz Ziegfeld, held to his bed by an attack of bronchial pneumonia, is well enough to dictate telegrams by the yard. It is an old Ziegfeld custom when his mind is in a ferment of protest.

The chief point of interest in the Ziegfeld wire, which he dashes off with the recklessness of a congressman using the government's franking privilege, is, first, its length, and, second, its ingenuous cry for help.

In the present instance the veteran showman [he approaches his middle sixties with pride and a good show of vigor] is upset because his old Chicago friend, Percy Hammond, recently remarked in reference to the newest Ziegfeld entertainment, "Hotcha," that he [Ziegfeld] must sooner or later embrace that expression of sophistication the modern satirists are adopting or suffer a loss of popularity.

Musical comedies of the future, Mr. Hammond argues, in company with several of his less eloquent contemporaries, are certain to be patterned after the formula of "Strike Up the Bank" and "The Band Wagon," as are this season's "Face the Music" and "Of Thee I Sing." Therefore, it would seem to behoove the master of the follies to change his musical comedy formula.

Mr. Ziegfeld, in bed, writhed under the sting of that suggestion. His wife and daughter are in California. He feels deserted and friendless. He has not seen "Hotcha" since he was carried out of the dress rehearsal with a fever of 105 degrees pounding through his blood stream. But he is sure "Hotcha" must be what the people want. Cutting the personal preliminaries, his wire reads:

"'Hotcha' is a terrific hit. Forty-seven thousand first week, about forty-six thousand holy week and advance sale of nearly two hundred thousand."

Appeals to the Masses.

I quote the figures, not because they have any significance—they may not even be true—but because they do throw an interesting sidelight on the amount of money a favored entertainment can drag out of a depressed public. The more interesting point of the Ziegfeld argument follows:

"'Hotcha' appeals to the masses. I don't think it appealed so strongly to the sophisticated society racketeer Broadway audience that greeted my opening . . . no sophisticated show has ever made a dollar. They die outside of New York. The Amsterdam [meaning the New Amsterdam theater in New York] is in the red and they played 'Band Wagon,' I know. I have a third of the theater. 'Three Is a Crowd' died on the road. Chicago would have none of 'Band Wagon.' Brown and Henderson wrote 'Good News,' 'Flying High,' 'Follow Through,' 'Scandals.' They write for the masses, not the sophisticated few.

"They got one million dollars for four pictures, including 'Sunny Side Up!' If they had been sophisticated, if sophistication means driving your daughter from the house because she dares to be a virgin at 18, censors would have barred all these pictures and shows. Thank God, I can still pack them in and remain old-fashioned. . . . If the critics go so strong for sophistication and demand and encourage it, remember what I tell you —the theater will have censors in six months. Brown and Henderson songs have encircled the world and appeal to people with red blood who believe in mothers."

Tasteless and Vulgar.

That last, I think, is precious. Florenz always does get more humor into his telegrams than he does in his shows. What could be sweeter or more appropriate than a Ziegfeld Mothers' association?

This "Hotcha," as its producer will discover when he is able to leave his bed, is a tasteless and often vulgar book, surrounded by the usual handsome Josef Urban setting, spotted with eye-filling displays of feminine flesh and beauty. Censors will find quite a bit to cut out of "Hotcha," too.

It is, I think, as cheap a libretto as any the follies king has sponsored. But, being old-fashioned, you could hardly expect him to do anything about that so long as the masses continue to contribute their forty thousand a week. I will be curious to see what the road thinks of "Hotcha," too.

It is a period of renewed faith. There are smiling faces on Broadway, even though the theater season, following the Easter spurt, will probably draw rapidly to an early close.

Not all the smiles are inspired by the theater. The Evening Post provided a chuckle the other evening when, referring to the recent production of Don Marquis' biblical tragedy, "The Dark Hour," in Philadelphia, a light fingered linotyper, aided and abetted by a weary eyed proofreader, made it read: "Don Marquis' 'The Dark Horse,' a story of the crucifixion,'" greatly to the distress of editors and others.

Jews to Honor Briand.

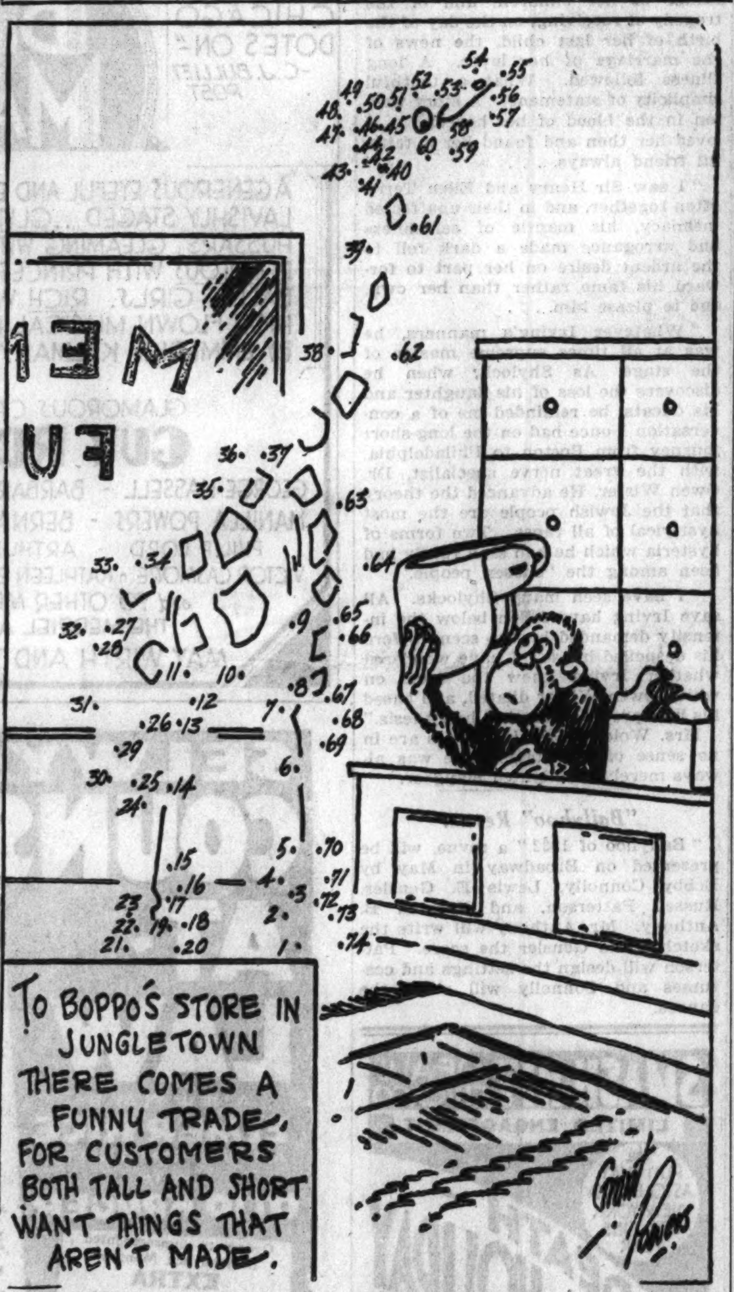
PARIS—(AP)—The National Jewish Fund of Paris has opened a subscription for reforesting an area in Palestine to be named after the late Aristide Briand.

Heroine of "Zombie"

PAULINE STARKE.

'TWAS not so long ago, when the talking cinema was the silent silver screen, that Pauline Starke wore the halo of a Hollywood star. This picture ought to prove that she qualified as a camera beauty. She has enlisted in the legitimate drama, and acts the heroine of "Zombie," the play about dark voodoo deeds in Haiti at the Adelphi theater.

Konnectums



Trace with a pencil from 1 to 2, 2 to 3, and so on and you will have drawn the picture of an animal which came to the store to buy something but seems to be out of luck.

O'Neill's Next

AFTER "Mourning Becomes Electra," what next? This question was recently submitted to Eugene O'Neill by a Theater Guild executive, and the dramatist answered:

"Soon after 'Electra' opened I started work on the preliminary outlines of five new plays. I soon decided two of them were not yet ripe enough in my mind for doing—so I eliminated them from consideration for the present and concentrated on the other three; and I have been working out detailed outlines of these ever since. I have not yet definitely decided which one of them will be my next, but expect that will be settled soon. I will then start on it right away.

"One of these plays is laid in America at the time of the revolution; another in America of the 1840's, and the third in America of the present day. I haven't settled on the right title for any one of them yet."

Publicity Plus.

Robert F. Sisk, who for the last six years has been the press representative of the Theater Guild, has been released from his contract by that organization. He will become head of the advertising and publicity departments of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum circuit and Radio Pictures. His successor with the Theater Guild has not been named. Before joining the Guild Mr. Sisk was on the Baltimore Sun.

Russell Crouse, author and former columnist on the New York Evening Post, has been named press representative of the Theater Guild to succeed Mr. Sisk.

Public Wants Higher Moral Tone in Films

Answers to Questionnaire Voice Desire for Better Things in Movies.

By Tom Pettey.

explain whether he is referring to the human or animal domain.

Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson, radio wizard, and Prof. Raymond Pearl, biologist, are happy only when the film pictures mystery and adventure. Prof. Pearl reconsiders long enough to suggest more screen dramas treating of social and sex problems and the exposure of crime.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot in Pennsylvania takes his pen in hand and advises wholesale production of dramas of political intrigue. Mrs. Pinchot leans toward social reform and spiritual struggle in her movie preferences.

Almost every one, according to the returns, had a good word for the pictures and a lot of them just checked everything. There were seven divisions on the questionnaire addressed to leaders in all strata of American life. They were comedy, drama, adventure, mystery, current social problems, and historical inspirational pictures.

Will H. Hays, president of the producers' organization, attempted to cover every city and town in the United States in his poll of preferences. The returns are just now beginning to flow into the headquarters here.

Mr. Hays recently pointed out that pictures of a dramatic and intellectual caliber that would not have been successful in popular entertainment a few years ago are now being received with enthusiasm. Mr. Hays did not name any of the highbrow pictures.

The purpose of the poll, its sponsors advise, is to "widen the scope of the screen in its service of universal entertainment by determining the entertainment preferences of the specific classes that make up the vast popular audience for motion pictures." There were a lot of other reasons advanced, but the first one will suffice.

When the last questionnaire is in and the preferences all checked and tabulated, the producers and exhibitors will have a fairly definite idea of the difference existing between audiences of Main street and Broadway. The chances are there will be no sharp difference.

James Cagney in Town.

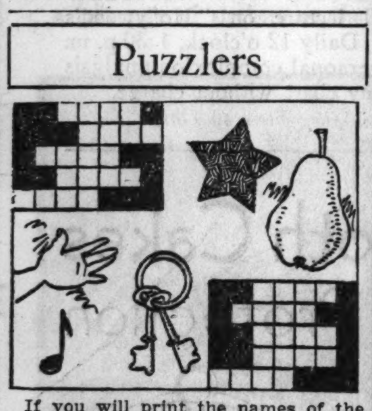
James Cagney, the red haired Hollywood flash, is back in town to look over "Blessed Event." Warner Brothers purchased the Broadway play for Jimmy last week. The leading rôle, that of a tabloid columnist who ruins lives with printed gossip, is going to be a difficult one for Mr. Cagney to portray. Mr. Cagney spent a lot of time around newspaper offices in various capacities before the movies called him, but there were no gossip columnists for him to study in those days.

Roy Del Ruth, the director, came east with Cagney. If they drop down around the Winter Garden they will find "The Crowd Roars," in which Jimmy plays the part of a racing auto driver, packing the house. It is not the best of the Cagney pictures, but it is pretty good entertainment.

Eddie Cantor has gone to Mexico in search of local color for his next picture, "The Kid from Spain." The picture will begin spudding in early May.

Sidney Howard has gone to Hollywood with the script of "The Brothers Karamazov" to talk things over with Ronald Colman, who is to play Dmitri in the picture version of the famous Russian novel.

Puzzlers



If you will print the names of the five objects in a certain order in the horizontal spaces of the upper form, you will have the name of a certain flower reading downward in one of the upright columns. Then, if you will print the same words in another order in the horizontal spaces of the lower form you will have the name of another flower reading downward in one of its upright columns. What are the flowers?

Home Town Folk at Capital to Watch Senators at Work

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special.]—Want a tip on how to get even with a senator? Come down here in person and wish him a happy Easter.

You and I are about the only constituents, from Minnesota to Massachusetts, who haven't appeared at the door of the senate, usually in the midst of a big debate, sent in our cards to our senator, met him effusively and hemmed and hawed until he had to take us upstairs and get us seats in the senators' special gallery.

Sometimes, if the senator is hard boiled, or not coming up for election very soon, or if the constituent is very obscure and timid the senator shunts the visitor off to the card gallery. He can do this, in absentia, by merely signing his name to a form card and sending it out by his secretary. But the senator's own gallery is different. To it nobody is admitted, unless the wife or daughter of a senator, save by the personal appearance of the senator who sponsors the visit.

Many Pilgrimages.

Sitting up in the press gallery during these crowded days when everybody is here on a pilgrimage, I glance down on the floor of the senate. Senator Capper of Kansas is busy signing some letters. The page brings in a card. Senator Capper seems to sigh, walks out to the door. In a few minutes I see him ushering two women, two men, into the gallery. Courtesy compels him to remain there long enough to point out the celebrities below—Borah, with the longish hair; J. Ham Lewis, with the green shirt and the gray spats; Mrs. Caraway, with the black shawl; Couzens, the richest man in the senate; Copeland, and his carnation.

I look down again. This time the card comes to Virginia's vitriolic

Friends of the German People Organize New Chicago Group

By Cousin Eve.

THE newest thing of this Chicago Easter season is a wholly new international society, Friends of Germany. Only it is not called that. We have Friends of China, the Alliance Française, the English Speaking Union, and the Spanish and Italian Gatherings, also the Japan-America and the New Oriental society, which intends to embrace the entire east in its friendly enterprise. It was high time that the Carl Schurz Memorial Foundation started something here.

This foundation, which was formed in New York in 1930, has for a purpose the promotion and maintenance of friendly understanding between the United States and Germany. Earlier in the winter Mrs. William L. Baum took the chairmanship in Chicago, and a Chicago center is now starting.

Perhaps I should say it began a fortnight ago with the Goethe centenary and a program of much fine music at the University of Chicago. The Carl Schurz Foundation hopes to gain a better comprehension of the German nation by introducing interesting people from Germany and Austria to representative groups of Chicago men and women.

Professor to Lecture Here.

The first of these distinguished visitors to be sponsored by the foundation is Dr. Kuehnemann, professor of philosophy at the University of Breslau. The eminent professor, it seems, is an authority on the life and work of Goethe and is slated to give several lectures here this month. Indeed, he is probably already in town.

Assisting Mrs. Baum on the advisory committee are the following: Jane Addams, Arthur Bissell, Mrs. Herbert Bradley, Dr. Horace Bridges, Rufus C. Dawes, Carter Harrison Fitzhugh, Mrs. Mitchell D. Follansbee, Mr. and Mrs. Ernst Freund, Alfred Granger, Charles Hamill, Prof. James Hatfield, Robert M. Hutchins, Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, Walter Lichtenstein, Robert M. Lovett, Everett Millard, Mrs. Murry Nelson, Dr. and Mrs. William Nitze, Charles L. Strobel, Dr. Frederick Stock, Dr. Ferdinand Schevill, Dr. O. L. Schmidt, Dr. and Mrs. Martin Schutze, Walter D. Scott, Dr. Paul Shorey, Mrs. Paul Steinbrecher, Silas H. Strawn, Mrs. Charles H. Swift, Melvin Traylor, Willoughby Walling, Thornton Wilder, and Dr. Quincy Wright. Honorary members of this advisory board are Dr. Hugo Simon, German consul general, and Judge Michael F. Girten, Austrian consul.

Friends of Opera Raise Fund.

It sounds very, very good, and one longs to be invited to the foundation's luncheons if all the Germanic visitors have the brains and charm of Von Kuehlmann, who was here last week. He, I understand, left town, going at once to Washington, where he was under the wing of Mrs. Nick Longworth, the former Alice Roosevelt, who has had very special times in Germany. Mrs. Longworth had arranged to have a dinner in her own house for forty leading lawmakers to meet and be addressed by the former German foreign minister.

The most stirring thing that I found in Chicago upon coming up from the south was the Friends of Opera drive for funds to keep our beautiful civic opera going. The five year guarantees had expired, and Samuel Insull personally had raised a quarter of a million dollars in guarantees for the coming year. This not being enough, it was put up to the Friends of Opera, one thousand strong, to raise $250 per member and thus achieve the necessary sum.

Mrs. Charles King Corsant took the chairmanship of this drive. This was a courageous and splendid act in itself, times being what they are. But Mrs. Corsant is a dauntless person,

Palm Beach Season Is Over, but Winter Visitors Linger There

PALM BEACH.—[Special.]—Closing of the Breakers hotel and the Everglades club this week brought an end to the season so far as much hotel and club entertainment is concerned at a time when some observers estimate there are as many people here as in January.

Younger members of society here to spend rather prolonged Easter vacations and older members stopping off on their way north from Havana, Miami, and Nassau account for the number of short time visitors being entertained. There are also reports that a good many householders whose funds are not so plentiful as they used to be are remaining here longer rather than run up their expense accounts by the usual spring visits to the resorts of Georgia, the Carolinas, and Virginia.

At any rate, quite a few of the old line Chicago winter residents have expressed the intention of lingering well into April and enjoying relaxation afforded by small entertainments after the strenuous winter months. Mr. and Mrs. George A. McKinlock expect to stay until the end of the month. Then they will go to New York. They may spend the summer abroad.

Mrs. Charles Curry Chase has set April 15 for her departure for Chicago. Later she will visit in New York and then go to Oshkosh for the summer. Mr. and Mrs. George Stevenson Fenton, who have been visiting at the Chase home, have left for Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Henry G. Barkhausen and their daughter, Katherine, are remaining until later in the month. After a stop in Chicago they will proceed to their summer home in northern Wisconsin.

Mrs. Harry Shearson expects to remain until late in April.

Tevanders Plan New Home.

Climaxing an active season here, Mr. an Mrs. O. N. Tevander have purchased a plot in the central part of town and are planning to build a villa of Mediterranean style. Originally members of the Breakers hotel colony, they spent this season in the house of Count R. Filipponi.

The date of the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Elisha Dyer Hubbard has not been announced. Maj. and Mrs. Hubbard and some members of their theatrical organization were honored during the week by a tea given by Mrs. Henry R. Rea and a dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Dobyne.

Robert F. Carr of Chicago has leased a villa until May 1.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Forrester gave a party as a farewell gesture and departed northward. Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Maxwell also were expected to leave for Chicago this week.

Chicago folk paying late season visits here include Mrs. Thomas Wolfe and Miss Jean Strabley, Mrs. E. R. Bacon and Miss Mary Alice Bacon,

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus G. Hill and their three daughters, Diana, Susan (in carriage), and Molly were among the Easter strollers. The three children were attired alike in violet tweed coats and hats.

Mrs. Edward DeWitt Shumway and her children, Grace and Eddy, were among the worshipers in the fashionable throng at the Presbyterian church in Lake Forest on Easter Sunday.

Marjorie Kane to Marry Young Eldridge T. Gerry of New York

By Nancy Randolph.

NEW YORK.—[Special.]—Yellow jonquils and wet snow are a mixture no one can admire, and as a result of the post-Easter weather society is putting off posthaste to White Sulphur and Hot Springs and deferring, for the moment, any thought of plans for the summer.

But weather or no weather, the old established custom of love and marriage, battered though it may be, insists upon having its way, and engagements continue to be announced in a never lessening stream. The most important betrothal of the week was that of Marjorie Y. Kane, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Kane of Locust Valley, L. I., and Elbridge T. Gerry. Marjorie, a debutante of '28, has had the honor of being pronounced the prettiest bud of her season, and it is only right and proper that her prize should be one of the best matrimonial catches among the younger eligibles.

The wedding is to take place in May, and there will be an influx of out of towners to New York, which will include many a notable who has given

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark.

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, Dec. 9, 1879.

Dear Julia:

Weren't you interested to read of the grand dinner in honor of Oliver Wendell Holmes in Boston this week? Dear old Autocrat! What a hold he has on the affections of America!

It made me a little sad to read his own verse in which he refers to himself as nearing the end of his pilgrimage, for I wish he might live many years more. You may have noticed what he said:

"But, O, my gentle sisters, O, my brothers,
These thick sown snowflakes hint of toil's release;
These feebler pulses bid me leave to others full of energy and character, and she has for her vice chairmen Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. Arthur Meeker, Mrs. Waller Borden, Mrs. Charles Swift, Mrs. Jacob Baur, and for her executive secretary Miss Alice Barkman.

The meetings are held weekly at the houses of the vice chairmen or the Casino, the active working members being Friends of Opera. The drive is going exceedingly well, but it cannot be pushed over the top unless everybody helps. Names of grand opera subscribers, or musical people, "prospects" they are called, are read at each meeting by Miss Barkman, and the members divide them up, each taking a list. At the meeting following reports of success are read.

The best meeting so far was in the Drake ballroom, when a farewell musical, with Leola Turner, Charles Marshall and Howard Preston singing, was given with a huge audience. Mrs. Meeker presided; then, after a few words of greeting from her, Herbert Witherspoon, director, spoke on the beatitudes of our opera, and Mrs. Corsant followed with a rousing call to arms. At this juncture Mrs. Baur, like a warhorse hearing the battle trumpets, staged a marvelous comeback—[she was formerly a great raiser of funds]—and going to the rostrum in her very best form and a pretty spring frock, in a few minutes had added $5,500 to the guarantee fund.

Better Than the "Met."

Nearly everybody thinks that Chicago Civic opera is better done than the Metropolitan. Being in New York a fortnight ago, I was taken to see a strangely beautiful opera called "Sadko," by Rimsky-Korsakoff, a seasonal novelty. It is all given under the sea, and there is a charming ballet of crabs, lobster, starfish and all that sort of thing—also a few clams and oysters, sort of a musical bouillabaisse, as it were.

I was sitting next to a nice man, the Hon. Jefferson Caffery, minister to Colombia, a friend of lots of the dear ones at home, and we saw at once that we do give better opera than the Metropolitan. They had a very big, unwieldy chorus milling around—like the corner of State and Madison—and it absolutely made one nervous.

There were no effects of beauty either in costume, or scenery, or lightings, and I did not find the orchestra so good. Edward Johnson, once our man, was singing, and he gave the Hindu Jewel song with a certain charm. And I must say the ballet was enchanting. Down on the ocean floor, crabs, lobsters, other crustaceans, jelly and star fish were all mistily moving about and the dancing was done by fishy sprites and denizens of the deep. The music, too, was lovely.

Old and drab as are the ingress and foyer of New York opera, the interior is still handsome, mahogany color picked out in gold. And the two rows of boxes, starting from the stage in a grand horseshoe sweep, demonstrate many fine feminine and masculine torsos of wealthy New Yorkers and their friends. It was great fun looking at them. I really like to see who is in the boxes. Also, I like occasionally to sit in them, which means a nice gay dinner followed by opera. It is all a part of the pleasure and fanfare of the whole.

A Weekly Luncheon.

A few nights after "Sadko" there was a Sunday night benefit at the Metropolitan for musicians out of jobs. Tickets were $15.00. Box seats were $25.00. It was a magnificent and heavily fashionable house, with everybody in the big company singing—all the stars: Jeritza, Rethberg, Bori, Gigli, Martinelli and, of course, all the little people. But, lacking direction, like other performances at the Metropolitan, it lasted too long, was too much of a good thing.

A weekly luncheon for the same cause, needy musicians, is given in the St. Regis ballroom, and arranged by Walter Damrosch and Mrs. Vincent Astor. The ballroom is delightful, dark blue vaulted walls painted in gold trellises and white cockatoos, gold and blue chairs, a high view over all Manhattan. At the fifteen luncheon tables were hostesses, each a famous musical lady: Hulda Laschanska, Mrs. Ephrem Zimbalist [Alma Gluck], Lucrezia Bori—such a darling she is, her pretty little Spanish face glowing, white teeth and black eyes flashing—wearing a simple brown outfit with white wool scarf. Such an ovation for her! I wish we had her in Chicago.

I was sitting with the two Damrosch girls. Their distinguished mother, who was Miss Blaine of Maine, was at the next table. My neighbor, Mrs. Samuel Barlow, wife of a well known composer of New York, is owner of the beautiful Château of Eze near Monte Carlo. Built like an eagle's eerie in the rocky cliff above the Grand Corniche, it is one of the show places of France. She was formerly Ernesta Bullitt, author of an indiscreet diary written from Germany during the war, which raised a hullaballoo. Very good reading, too.

It was very nice to know how they raise money in New York, the chairman of each table reported. They had raised $300,000 in one month. The charm and playfulness of Walter Damrosch as chairman was indescribable, small glinting eyes and round, ruddy cheeks like a boy. One child, a little Hoffman, had raised alone $4,000.

Another neighbor, Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris, was giving a dinner for twenty-four Saturday night before their sailing, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Gade. To this were coming also several ambassadors en vacances, Mr. and Mrs. Gouverneur Morris, the John E. Mays [now of New York], and Miss Mildred McCormick, whom I had just seen in her high up, blithe and cheerful Park avenue apartment. The very day I had tea with her, surrounded by many of the handsome furnishings that adorned the old Hall McCormick house at Rush and Erie streets, she had bought a new apartment in East 79th street. This was a tempting real estate bargain and not to be refused, as it is directly across from her sister's family, Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Williams.

The Block-Aid System.

Another thing that was starting in New York, causing an immense excitement, was the block-aid system. Mrs. August Belmont, the former Eleanor Robson, a charming and nice actress, was one of its proponents. Also, Mrs. C. C. Rumsey. That is, 400 fashionable women were each the directors of a New York City block for the succor of anybody in the block who should need help, that help to be supplied by a small levy on all the other dwellers in the block. At least that was the way the scheme was unfolded to me by two ladies who were more beautiful and chic than clever.

MISS BERNICE ALMA JENTOFF.
[Du Bois Photo.]

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony E. Jentoff of River Forest announce the engagement of their daughter, Bernice Alma, to Thomas Russell Jones, also of River Forest.

That would leave the rich residents of New York untroubled in their spacious blocks—unless, of course, they helped to maintain a general fund to fall back upon. But nothing was said of this.

Show Place Shuttered.

When I was in Palm Beach, Vincent Bendix's house on the ocean was shuttered in the height of the season, like many others. I wondered. Recently Mr. Bendix went to Palm Beach, taking his Avocat, Orville Taylor, and Caleb Bragg of New York, an amusing man who knows "everybody." In a jerk of a lamb's tail the Spanish house, swimming pool, secret passage to the sea, and all, was sold. Tout casse, tout lasse. Did Caleb Bragg advise this move?

Many Palm Beachers have been staying this year at the Boca Raton club, a vast colossal terrestial paradise. Addison Mizner originally sank ten million dollars in a Spanish hostelry called the Cloisters. A divine place on the sea, it was very big and the name was ambiguous. In spite of its gorgeous court, its two golf links, its tennis courts, its splendorous architecture, with towers and minarets and all the quaintness of a walled city, it failed. Then Clarence Geist of Philadelphia took it over, spending another ten millions on it—and Eddie Moore says that lots of his money is planted there, too. Now it is the Boca Raton club.

It seems that Mr. Geist expected me to drop in on him for luncheon and we were tearing up for a polo game. Not knowing this delightful plan, we lost out on seeing the place with a competent guide.

Mr. and Mrs. William J. Chalmers stopped at Boca Raton instead of Palm Beach this year and adored it. Seems there are seven fishing boats out in front to be had, and great marble tables where fishes caught are artfully displayed—illustrated fish yarns, so to speak.

And with two golf links almost any one can get enough golf. The John T. Piries were also there, and I hear that Robert F. Carr is going down when his Palm Beach caravanseral closes up.

Lie Detector at Work.

Speaking of catching fish makes me think of the lie detector and that this amiable device was the entertainment provided by the Friday club for its last morning luncheon meeting, its president, Mrs. William Hale, presiding. All the members were terribly amused by it and the lot fell to Mrs. James Weber Linn to immolate herself as the object upon which the lie detector should do its stuff.

Mrs. Linn was harnessed up and made to select mentally a card from among several. Then she was shown these cards again. Finally the operator picked the three of diamonds as the card. Mrs. Linn denied this.

The cards were manipulated. Again they were passed before Mrs. Linn's blue innocent eyes. Again she denied the three of diamonds. "But there is definite proof this must be the card," said the lie detector's father, the renowned Col. Goddard of ballistic fame. Then a long strip of paper marked with funny little spots was exhibited. Every time the three of diamonds was shown a diversion from normal was seen.

Mrs. Linn admitted her crime. She had picked the three of diamonds. For a distinctly elegant high brow literary club, I loved this meeting; shows the times we are living in. Peggy Hambleton is a newly elected member of the Friday club. Poor darling, they thought she had scarlet fever last week. These children's diseases! And Mrs. Hamp Winston with measles!

Frenchman Will Lecture.

The Antiquarian society of the Art institute is showering charming invitations. Another one set for the morning of April 18 at eleven in the Goodman small theater. At this that eminent Frenchman, Comte Serge Fleury, will give an illustrated lecture on Vaux-le-Vicomte, which is undoubtedly a rare and very ravishing château full of this and that of interest and concern to lovers of the antique. I hear much about Comte Fleury that is flattering and grand, even that he is to be the next ambassador from France to Washington, which I hardly believe. But he has great and influential connections.

Mrs. Charles Munroe, newly arrived in Chicago from China, had a tea Sunday afternoon at 1234 Lake Shore drive, one of the several family residences. Perhaps thirty friends and young married Logans came trooping in to welcome the Munroes back from this round the world giro. Mrs. Munroe, whose magnificent red hair, wild rose color, and black eyes are bright as ever, had a two year old granddaughter toddling round—red curls, black eyes, red cheeks and all, an understudy.

The house was running over with splendorous oriental shopping: lamés, jades, brocades, amber, carvings, enamels, dogs. Yes, two tiny royal Pekingese—one black with a white ruff, that sat on his missie's hand. It was strange that with all the coming and going in China the travelers had not a word to say of the war, or whatever they called that matter going on at Shanghai. Charles Munroe, who had gone on to the luxurious apartment, Fifth avenue, New York, has since fallen ill and his wife has hurried away to join him.

Tea for Mr. and Mrs. Knight.

The Ambassador East was the scene of an informal tea Monday when Miss Emily Larned was at home for the artist, Charles Knight and Mrs. Knight of New York. Mr. Knight, for many years a painter working under the direction of Prof. Henry Fairfield Osborn for the New York Museum of Natural History, specializes in brontosaurs and dinosaurs. And I might add icthosaurs. For the last two months he has been adorning the walls of the rooms in the Field museum wherein are set up the skeletons of these prehistoric beasties mentioned above.

I have not yet seen the life size pictures of these sweet creatures which seemed to have roamed in Wyoming, of all places, but it is another good reason for going over there. Mrs. Bowman Lingle poured tea, and also Mrs. Hubbard Carpenter. Among the guests were Mrs. Wentworth, Baroness Wenner, Mrs. William H. Niblack, Mrs. Oliver Dennett Grover, Mrs. David Cook Jr.

An Easter Concert.

Easter day was charming. Late in the day many people foregathered at the Drake to hear the Business Men's orchestra, a large group of musicians assembled years ago by George Lytton. And probably he was there playing a cello, but I couldn't find him. It was a fashionable affair. Loads of people I know were there: The William O. Goodmans, Secor Cunninghams, Robert F. Halls, Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Drake, Mrs. John B. Drake, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Eldredge, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Otis, Mrs. Charles Counselman. They played, these business men, excellent music—Brahms, Tschaikowsky, "Pomp and Circumstance," by Edward Elgar. Clarence Evans is the leader, and a girl told me next day at a luncheon that when her eyes were closed she could imagine Dr. Stock was leading. I go even further. I could imagine Arturo Toscanini was conducting. Enchanting strains floated out on the lake front park.

And next Sunday, what a feast for the musically minded! The International Society of Contemporary Music will intrigue us once more. Arthur Bissell is Chicago chairman and Rudolph Ganz, conducting thirty pieces from the symphony, is directing. The concert is at 4 p. m. at the Goodman theater.

There will be three morceaux given for the first time in America. The first, a concerto by Albert Roussel, then a Hindemith [a trifle queer, I fear]. A concertino lyrico, by Miaskowski. Then Sowerby's "Rhapsody" and "Chinese Flute," by Ernst Toch. Mary Krakowski, an unknown but lovely Pole, will sing, and the last, a divertissement by Ibert, is a depression number.

There is not sufficient coin in the treasury to provide a dancer. But it sounds like a very nice party, just the same, even if not as elaborately staged as the Contemporary Music's last year's debut.

Paris Follows a Quaint Old Easter Custom

By May Birkhead.

PARIS.—[Special.]—Paris, like all other big cities, has lost many of its quaint customs during the last quarter of a century, but there is one picturesque ceremony connected with Easter which still endures and which draws thousands of French people of distinguished families, though it is little known to foreign visitors. On Thursday before Easter one of the greatest throngs in any of the churches attends the Madeleine, and the ceremony in question is held here by the people of the flower market.

Thursday afternoon the flower vendors who for years have had their colorful booths along the side of the Madeleine make a small cross of fresh white, pink, and yellow roses, which is the flower symbol of the Virgin. They place it in the church on the floor, just beneath the painting whose subject is "The Last Supper."

Visitors Buy Flowers.

It is a custom for the worshipers entering the church to buy roses from the flower sellers who station their market at the top of the broad steps leading to the church entrance. After buying these fresh cut roses each visitor adds the flowers to the small cross under the painting, always keeping the form of the cross in perfect order and proportion as to length and width. The cross in a few hours grows into a huge affair. The painting itself has large rose trees on each side and is surrounded by hundreds of candles.

Thousands of worshipers carry their roses to make the cross and thousands more form long lines from the church entrance out into the street, waiting to get a glimpse of the extraordinarily beautiful and touching scene.

A Picturesque Custom.

The cross remains intact throughout the night and becomes more impressive Good Friday until noon, when it is removed and the white and pink roses give way to black and purple for the supreme day of mourning in Christendom. The pastor of the Church of the Madeleine, Abbé Flynn, considers this a picturesque custom. Father Flynn is particularly known to Americans because he always arranges American Thanksgiving day services at the Madeleine. He has visited the United States on a lecture tour.

Mrs. Honore Palmer has returned to her Paris apartment from America. She has been seen at the horse show and at the races. Viscomte de Sibour and his wife, the former Violette Selfridge, were here for holy week, having completed a flight from the heart of equatorial Africa. They have now left for London with a relative.

Fashionables at Sulphur Springs

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va. — [Special.] — Many notable people are here for the post-Easter holiday. Among them are Mr. and Mrs. Larz Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Gale, Mrs. John M. and Mrs. Otto G. Stoffregon, while from Milwaukee came Mrs. Michael Cudahy and her young son. The Hon. Somerset Maxwell and the Hon. Mrs. Maxwell are here on their first American visit.

The Everglades club season came to a happy finish Thursday night with one of those dinner dances that are its most popular attractions.

Plenty of midwesterners took advantage of the club's few remaining days and nights to give final teas, luncheons, and dinners. Mr. and Mrs. Barkhausen, H. H. Windsor Jr., Mr. and Mrs. C. Fred Herendeen, Mr. and Mrs. W. David Owen, Mrs. Joseph Long, and Mrs. O. N. Tevander were among those entertaining during the final week. Mrs. Tevander also gave a tea there for some of the younger set, among them Miss Lorraine Eddy, Miss Eleanor Thompson, Miss Althea Tevander, Bud Gorham, George Fuller, Drew Johnston, and Jahn Dasso Jr., also Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Maxwell and Mrs. Preston Rowles.

McKinlocks Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. McKinlock gave a luncheon on the garden terrace at their home. Mrs. McKinlock also presided over the annual meeting of the Palm Beach Garden club, which reelected her president.

Mrs. Leon Hartman was hostess during the week at luncheon at the Beach club; Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Pulitzer entertained a long list of guests at a dinner, and Mrs. Nathan B. Spingold gave a tea in honor of her house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Netcher [Roszika Dolly].

But easily the most interesting event of the week was the tea at which Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Stotesbury had 100. It was the event at which the Stotesburys announced the marriage of their granddaughter, Miss Louise Brooks, one of the season's popular debutantes, to William Ross Howard III. of Baltimore.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur C. Barclay of 114 N. Parkside avenue announce the marriage of their daughter, Kathryn Mary, to Duane Forsman Hall, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Hall of Berkeley, Cal. YOUTHLASTIC "STRETCHES BOTH WAYS"

Will Your Corset Do This?

Can you lean over, sit down, turn every which way, and find it has not moved on your body?

Does it feel so comfortable that you actually like to wear it?

Is it so thin and flexible that it feels like a "second skin" and does not show a ridge or even a crease under your dress?

Can you wash it twice a week and dry it overnight on a radiator if you like?

Will it keep its shape and not bag or get set, so it always feels like new?

Does it take inches off your hips, slenderize your waist?

"LE GANT"* of YOUTH is a revolutionary corset. It is made of "Youthlastic"* which is a new, patented, almost indestructible fabric woven of Lastex threads to stretch up and down, as well as around. Try one on—at your favorite shop—you won't want to take it off. Step-in (illustrated above) $10. There are models at $5 to $15.

Ceremony in May Will Draw Many Notables Back to Old New York.

the metropolis the go-by for quite a number of years.

Attended Miss Chapin's.

Both Marjorie and Elbridge, named for his grandfather, the late Elbridge T. Gerry, were educated in the best of the modern halls of male and female learning. Marjorie attended Miss Chapin's in town and later Miss Walker's in Simsbury, Conn. Young Gerry prepared at St. Paul's for Harvard, where he was a member of the Spee, and got his degree in June of '31.

A son of Robert Livingston Gerry, young Elbridge is even more notably a grandson of Mrs. E. H. Harriman, who lives in almost feudal state in the great mansion on a hill, Arden house, at Harriman, N. Y., not too far from Tuxedo Park, and in the midst of the country where trotting horses are worshiped.

Young Gerry's connections include the Goelets, Gallatins, Millses, Livingstons, Lewises, and his immediate relatives embrace the Peter Goelet Gerrys, his uncle and aunt, with other avuncular notables such as Mr. and Mrs. W. Averell Harriman, Mr. and Mrs. E. Roland N. Harriman, Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey and Angelica Schuyler Gerry.

The Gerrys, you may remember, during the lifetime of the commodore, after whom young Gerry is named. lived in the huge house on the corner of 5th avenue and 61st street, where the Hotel Pierre now stands. It had, I recall, the most delightful balcony on which privileged ones could stand and observe the parades that once upon a time were almost weekly occurrences in summer, but are now few and far between.

Plan Charity Carnival.

With Easter past, the only event of any importance in the future is the annual charity carnival, to take place this year on May 3 at Madison Square Garden. When that is in the limbo of the past somnolence will descend upon town and the social calendar will be as empty as Mother Hubbard's cupboard, not that the social cabinet has been any too well stocked, as it is.

However, since the participants in the carnival number anywhere up to two or three thousand people, every one has a chance to take part—all the social notables, all those who like to think they are socially important and almost any one else who feels like going to the expense of time and money. The result is that the season winds up with every one happy, and who could ask for more?

This year the pageant will depict "adventure," and is to, as they tell me quite seriously, "portray the dauntless spirit which impelled explorers and adventurers of legend, history and fiction to seek new lands or make bold gambles with fortune." Which is very thrilling, and please pardon the split infinitive.

Anyhow, the work is under way now. Committees are springing into existence, so many committees that the mind reels to consider them. Lila Agnew Stewart will go around in circles and from her frenzy, amazingly. will ensue order and beauty. How she does it I don't know, but year after year she emerges with her sanity intact.

Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson, erstwhile Joan Whitney, is chairman of the committee on the sale of boxes, with Mrs. T. Raymond St. John heading the committee on the sale of tickets. Mrs. Arthur B. Claflin and Mrs. Edward F. Hutton are again honorary chairmen of the carnival, and Mrs Eugene W. Ong is the executive head.

Among the patronesses are Mrs. Robert Franklin Adams, Mrs. De Forest Alexander, Mrs. A. J. Drexel Biddle Jr., Mrs. Lyttleton Fox, Mrs. L. Gordon Hammersley, Mrs. Goodhue Livingston, Mrs. James Russell Lowell. Mrs. Hunter S. Marston, Mrs. Dunlevy Milbank, Mrs. Jeremiah Milbank, Mrs. Gurnee Munn, Mrs. Orson Munn, Mrs. Rufus Patterson, Mrs. Herbert Shipman, Mrs. James H. Snowden, and Mrs. Charles Shipman Payson.

O, yes. we almost forgot. There is one more event, which begins on the eighth of this month, with a special benefit for the Henry Street settlement. The circus comes to Madison Square Garden—and are we all going? Elephants and peanuts and pink lemonade? Rather.

Teardrops in Wales' Eyes

King Unveils No War Memorials; Honor Intrusted to Other Members of Family

Hunt Coats Pink with Blue

By Ann Whittingham.

The Prince of Wales' eyes were moist . . .
[Acme Photo.]

LONDON.—[Special.]—The annual party given recently by the king and queen was notable for the number of members of the house of commons and their wives who received the honor of an invitation. Many of the wives of the new members have never before been presented to Queen Mary. The earl of Cromer in his capacity of lord chamberlain announced the several hundred guests. First each was taken by the hand by the king, then by the queen, and last by the prince of Wales. Her majesty wore a black velvet gown, a sable stole around her shoulders and her jewels were magnificent pearls. Neither the queen nor her ladies in waiting wore hats.

All shades of politics were present. The marchioness of Salisbury on the one hand and Mr. and Mrs. Clynes not far away. Most of the new women M. P.'s were present and many clerics of all beliefs—the Anglican bishop of London with the Catholic Cardinal Bourne, the dean of Westminster and Dean Inge with Dr. Hertz, the chief rabbi. Literature was represented by Sir James Barrie, Sir Authur Pinero, and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Priestley.

Party for Hunting Folk.

Besides Lady Astor's political party, which was as pleasant and informal as one could desire, a recent outstanding party was that of Mr. James C. Clark, the New Jersey millionaire. It was select and magnificent and was given at the Craven Lodge club at Melton Mowbray and included 200 of the best known hunting folk in England and America.

It followed a meet of the Belvoir hunt and was attended by the three princes, the prince of Wales, and "Babe" as he affectionately calls his youngest brother, Prince George, and the duke of Gloucester. They all wore the pink coats of the hunt with light blue facing.

Black is always the popular color for gowns at a hunt ball because it shows off well the hunting pink of the men, which as a color is hard to dress up to. Lady Furness, the twin sister of Mrs. Reggie Vanderbilt, the the American countess of Carnarvon were among the wearers of black. Another American, the countess of Ancaster, was there with her two daughters, Lady Catherine and Lady Priscilla Willoughby. At supper there was an oyster and champagne bar, and a ham and egg breakfast when the milk was being delivered.

Memorial to Peers and Sons.

In the Royal gallery of the house of lords the prince of Wales unveiled a memorial to the 243 peers and sons of peers who lost their lives in the great war. When he pulled the cord and undraped the memorial he gazed at it with eyes that were obviously moist, and when he spoke his voice faltered. Many of the men whose sacrifice the prince was commemorating were his intimate friends, comrades during the bleak years of the war, and some of them were with him at the university.

The tradition was established soon after the war that the king should never unveil a war memorial. At the outset it was realized the calls for this tragic service would be many and the difficulties of drawing the line would be great. So it was decided to intrust the unveiling of the chief memorials to the prince of Wales, and the unveiling of all the others to the remaining members of the royal family.

A Noteworthy Engagement.

One of the most noteworthy engagements this spring is that of the earl of Warwick and Miss Margaret Whigham. Their engagement leaked out when they were with a party in Egypt and the formal announcement followed their return home and was made at the same time as the celebrations of the young earl's coming of age. He intends to take his seat in the house of lords almost immediately.

The young couple are now at Warwick castle, the great gray pile of stone which was saved by the order of Oliver Cromwell from the fate visited on Kenilworth castle, a few miles distant. Cromwell's death mask hangs in the hall of Warwick castle and Frances, countess of Warwick, of Socialist fame, grandmother of the present earl, is his direct descendant.

The young earl is known to his friends as "Fulke," a family name first borne by his famous ancestor Sir Fulke-Grevilla, one of Queen Elizabeth's favorite courtiers and her chancellor of the exchequer. Queen Elizabeth was one of the first crowned heads to visit Warwick castle, which she did on her way to be entertained by the luckless earl of Leicester at Kenilworth.

The young and beautiful Miss Whigham will fit most gracefully into the rôle of the countess of Warwick.

Home Folks Go to Washington to See Senators

Glass. He gazes at it. Talks to himself, but he is bowing gallantly when next I spy him in the gallery.

Kenneth [ten per slash] McKellar of Tennessee makes four trips in half an hour, bringing in twelve guests. Shipstead, Keyes, Fess, and Glenn—they all make the same journey.

At one moment in the session a neighboring news man nudges my elbow as he whispers, "Look over in that gallery. There's enough senators over there to make a quorum."

I suppose it's fair, though. If he wants the folks back home to give him a six year seat on the floor of the senate he ought to be willing to get the folks back home a thirty minute seat in the gallery of the senate.

Rarely is a hero a hero to his valet, they say. But a congressman is a statesman to his secretary. At least, that's what they say for publication. Last night, however, the Little Congress, composed of secretaries and attachés of senators and representatives, held their annual dance. They do say that a lot of golden crowns of glory emerged a bit tarnished after an exchange of confidences about the boss.

Senator Borah is up every morning at 6 to take his horseback ride through Rock Creek park. Senator Wesley [five and ten] Jones, chairman of the appropriations committee, is up at 6 to play his morning round of golf with Jim Preston, chief of the senate library. Senator Barbour, former amateur heavyweight boxer, is up early to do his daily dozen.

But when it comes to dancing, that's an entirely different story. And so the wives, members of the Congressional club, have organized a weekly dancing class—"so good for our husbands, you know"—have engaged an instructor to teach the statesmen a lot of fancy steps, including the side. So far, not many students.

Conscientiously a guide was piloting a group of tourists through the capitol one day this week. "Now, this statue," he bellowed, "was executed by——" Just then a newspaper man walked by, called out loud and clear, "Hey, buddy, Rudy Vallee's over there." The group broke, ran, yelled, "Where?" after the retreating reporter who pointed toward Vice President Curtis' office where the crooner was standing. And the guide is still cussing.

Pilgrimage to Shrine Commemorates Discovery of Florida

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla.—[Special.]—Of general interest to the many thousands of visitors here is the second annual pilgrimage to the ancient shrine of Nuestra Señora de la Leche, to take place today. This event marks the 419th anniversary of the discovery of Florida, Juan Ponce de Leon, famed navigator and discoverer, having landed at a site where the city of St. Augustine was later established April 3, 1513.

The Rev. Father P. J. McGill of the Cathedral parish, and chancellor of the diocese, has charge of the arrangements, and the pilgrimage is to be under the patronage of His Excellency the Rt. Rev. Patrick Barry, D. D., bishop of St. Augustine.

Preparations have been made to take care of a large crowd this year. Benches have been placed under the oak trees that grow in profusion here and loud speakers erected.

St. Augustine has a background of a march of events extending over four hundred years. Here the first rude chapel and altar were erected and the first mass celebrated on Sept. 8, 1565, the Feast of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin.

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Kenan Jr. returned from a brief visit in Palm Beach and are at the Ponce de Leon.

For Flower Enthusiasts.

Exquisite beauty and art in arrangement were expressed at the Annual Spring Flower show given under the auspices of the Federated Garden Circles of St. Augustine. Northern visitors were most enthusiastic, and attended in large numbers during the afternoon and evening.

The show was acclaimed by many the loveliest of any ever staged in this city, and much credit is due Mrs. Beverly D. Causey, general chairman of the exhibit.

The 23d annual dance revue by children was held in the gold ballroom of the Ponce de Leon. The program included classic dances, interpretive dances, Spanish and tap, done by the pupils in fancy costume. A New York orchestra played and refreshments were served. The guests included parents and friends who are visiting in the city.

Two Benefits on Current Club Calendar

Fashion Show and Food Sale Means Chosen to Raise Funds for Destitute Mothers and Children.

By Roberta Nangle.

MEMBERS of two important philanthropic organizations are hoping to swell their funds for needy mothers and children at benefit affairs to be staged within the next eight days. On Tuesday of this week the Kenwood Social Service club will hold its annual fashion show at the Shoreland hotel, and a week from tomorrow the Council of Jewish Women will conduct a sale of food products on the ninth floor of the Fine Arts building.

The Kenwood group's fashion show with its own members acting as mannequins will be presented twice on Tuesday, in the afternoon with a bridge tea and in the evening at a supper dance. This club raises $10,000 annually to maintain the Providence station of the Infant Welfare society. The job of obtaining the yearly quota is managed entirely by the seventy-five members of the club. They give only two benefits a year, a theater party in the fall, and the fashion show in the spring. An additional source of income is the Infant Welfare Thrift shop at 1461 East 55th street, a rummage shop run jointly by the Kenwood club and the Hyde Park center of the Infant Welfare society.

Volunteer Saleswomen.

Members do volunteer work as saleswomen at the shop and assist doctors and nurses at the Providence station. This year the volunteers are endeavoring to take over as much of the station's clerical work as possible to release the nurses for the many extra home calls they are called upon to make.

Like all other branches of the Infant Welfare society, the Kenwood group is meeting increased demands for help. In 1931 the station conferences numbered 4,499, and 4,694 home visits were made by the station staff and volunteer workers. Pre-natal, infant, and pre-school cases are handled in accordance with the admirable program which the Infant Welfare society carries on through its series of stations throughout the congested districts of the city.

Mrs. John A. Logan is chairman of the committee in charge of the fashion show, and Mrs. William S. Hubbard is co-chairman. Mrs. Dorothy Tillinghast is president of the society.

Seek Funds for Camps.

The Council of Jewish Women, which has been active for forty years in many branches of the social and philanthropic service, is seeking funds in order that its comprehensive program need not be curtailed during this period when the need for charity is so great.

A few months hence the Council will open its summer camp for mothers and children at Wauconda, Ill. Every two weeks a new group of families suffering from the effects of privation comes to the camp for a holiday in a comfortable, healthy environment, with good food and outdoor recreation.

Mothers are relieved entirely of the care of their children. The infants are watched over by a trained nurse and dietitian and the older children are placed under the supervision of playground directors. Mrs. Martin Barbe, who was camp chairman for thirty years, has been succeeded in the office by Mrs. Samuel Alschuler.

The summer camp is just one of many activities of the council. Its members also endeavor to adjust immigration problems threatening the welfare of the alien family. Families are reunited whenever possible; naturalization difficulties are overcome, and educational opportunities are extended to help the aliens toward self-support in the new land.

The sale on the 11th will be an all day affair with luncheon and tea served. Food products of all kinds will be sold and there will be one booth of novelties and gifts. Mrs. Abraham Weiss is chairman of the day. Mrs. Gerson B. Levi is president of the Council.

Club Ethics

By Maude Swalm Evans.

THE president seemed unusually happy all during the morning meeting of the board of directors. Toward noon she consulted her watch frequently, and when the time seemed right she stood up and addressed the members.

"Ladies, I have a surprise for you—a joyous one. Perhaps some of you know that the children of two of our long time and highly esteemed members are to be married in the next room at noon today."

"I heard about it this morning," the house chairman whispered to the revisions chairman.

"Both mothers have served on our board," continued the president. "While the original plan was to have only relatives present, both mothers requested me to extend a last minute invitation to the board to join them for the ceremony and for the wedding breakfast immediately afterward. We have just ten minutes to get ready. The meeting stands adjourned."

Exclamations and conversations were animated as the board members left the room.

"This is a real club romance," the welfare chairman remarked to the social chairman as they powdered their noses before the looking glass in the rest room. "When these young people were small this club maintained a play room on club days so the mothers could attend the meetings in comfort."

"That was long before my time," interposed the social chairman. "I don't believe there would be enough club babies now to supply a nursery."

"Mostly club grand babies, it would be, I guess," replied the welfare chairman. "Anyway, I've seen Hugh Martin and Janice Bird playing together many a time in the nursery. Later, they both attended our club dancing classes and our children's parties, and when our juniors were organized Janice joined and she's been a leading spirit in it."

"It's all very beautiful. I'm thrilled through and through," the social chairman enthused. "I never thought of our club fostering romances. See, the president just entered. Let's go."

Question.

"Should the nominating committee report all names presented regardless of whether or not the candidates accepted?—B. F."

Reply.

Only those who are selected to run for office—usually one for each place—and have accepted the nomination are reported to the club by the nominating committee.

Oh, Yes! Don't be misled by the unfounded rumor that we feed sheep flowers to get the beautiful colors in our blankets.

● Miss Arden's important new treatment is attacking undesirable accumulations of fat tissue with extraordinary success. A course of treatments will permanently eliminate as much as twenty pounds if need be. Or your weight will be re-distributed, for the beauty of this treatment is, it can be concentrated on your "fatty spots" without affecting the rest of your figure.
● But the Ardena Bath is far more than a reducing treatment. It seems to reach down to the very roots of your nerves and free them of tenseness and fatigue. A body massage afterwards maintains your feeling of well-being. And when you step on the scales you find you are appreciably lighter.
● The Ardena Bath Treatments are so much in demand that appointments should be made at least two days in advance if possible. And you should arrange first for an interview with Miss Arden's Director of Exercise, since all of Miss Arden's scientific treatments are specially prescribed for each individual. Three New Art Exhibitions Lend Color to Early Spring

Water Color Show at Institute; Others at Arts Club and the Chicago Galleries.

By Eleanor Jewett.

THERE were several openings of importance in the galleries last week. On Friday the Arts club opened three exhibitions, one of work by a mysterious quartet, "The Blue Four," and the others, work by Edward Biberman and Roger De La Fresnaye. On Wednesday the Chicago Galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue, opened a brilliant exhibition by eight painters and at the Art institute on Thursday the Twelfth International Water Color show had its formal opening.

The water color show is a glittering affair this year, with the emphasis on larger pictures. The general effect is that of vigorous, conservative painting; a great deal of good craftsmanship is in evidence. The colors are bright, the subjects interesting, wholesome, and on occasions, fascinating.

The "white" room, which is always a little charmingly odd, carries on its character and is hung with amusing modernist minded pictures. They are not disagreeable because they are sugared with a silvery atmosphere caused, one imagines, partly by the coloring of the gallery walls and partly by the profuse use of high keyed colors in which gray and white predominate.

Fantastic Pictures.

One room has been devoted to the water colors of a single artist, Boris Anisfeld, for some years now an instructor in the Art institute school. His coloring is intriguing; his themes fantastic. A Russian flavor permeates his various fanciful conceptions. Water color lends itself to illustration and these water colors are chiefly illustrative in character. They would fit easily into the cadences of a romantic, fantastic poem. As far as serious, sober painting is concerned these are not that. They are an interlude to the real pictures that flank their niche.

Another man who has been given a larger space for display than the average contributor is Louis C. Tiffany. Nine of his water colors hang on one wall. They are carefully and exquisitely painted. The "Alhambra" is lovely; the "Tin Peddler" is an amusing portrait of a group of Negroes. The delicate work of his brush, however, is flattened and belittled by a glimpse caught of a virile sea picture on a further wall, the magnificent "Off Tortugas," by John Wharf. Here is a superb example of the vigorous life and the sweep of motion that can be reached in the water color medium.

South Sea Island Scenes.

Robert Lee Eskridge shows scenes from his South Sea islands. The tall palms are well handled, but there is perhaps more picture in the painting that shows the life of the islanders. The various groups of busy natives coming here and there out of the protection of the trees and curious shrubs are fascinating. They are alive and of real importance, no longer just a decorative detail building up patterns to complete a complicated design.

The "Crowd on Quai Marseilles," by Beatrice L. Cummings, is another picture which is too good to miss. John Wenger has a nice color sense flung wisely over "Coney Island." If he romances a bit we can forgive him. Rutherford Boyd, always a man we watch with never satiated interest, has one of the big moments in the exhibit with his excellent "Market on the Bridge—Ronda." Anthony Thieme has an interesting incident in his sketch from Eastport, Me. Katherine Wright has a delightful, homelike episode in her "Pantry Shelves."

There is much more in this exhibit than this brief account tells. The most serious drawback is the absolute absence of miniatures although it distinctly reads on the invitation card "exhibition of water colors, drawings, miniatures, and pastels." The Philadelphia annual show has such delightful and exquisite miniatures each spring for its share, it seems too bad Chicago should suffer the loss. The report spread is that miniatures [being usually portraits] are considered by the institute as too commercial. If one were to carry that contention to a logical conclusion, portraits in every medium should be barred from the museum shows.

That the art of miniature is usually in the form of portraits does not lessen its attraction to the public. A well painted miniature is a feat in craftsmanship only to be likened to the delicate precision of Persian art. Possibly next year the Art institute will be kinder in its stand toward this gemlike little sister to the water color and oil.

The awards in the water color show as announced are: The Watson F. Blair purchase prize of $600 to "Yacht Race," by Maurice Prendergast; the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan medal and $500 for purchase to "The Cove," by William Zorach; the Watson F. Blair purchase prize of $400 to "From Brittany," by Heinrich Campendock; the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan prize of $250 to "Monumental," by George William Eggers; the Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Logan prize of $150 to "Place du Tertre," by Lucien Genin, and the William H. Tuthill purchase prize of $100 to "Confirmation," by Georges Schreiber.

The exhibition will have a long run, not closing until May 30.

At the Chicago Galleries.

The Chicago galleries, 220 North Michigan avenue, has an extremely interesting and delightful exhibit in the show which opened there last Wednesday. The amateur, student and professional will find something of importance in the intricate and exquisite wood engravings by Betty Lark-Horovitz. Her designs are as fantastic as they are charming. Her work is delicate but brilliantly sure. Most of her exhibit consists of little pieces, each one worth looking at closely. Two large drawings, nude figures, the one a man and the other a woman gorgeously foreshortened, show her talent at ease in a wider gesture.

When it comes to the paintings, honors are pretty well divided in the larger gallery. Holger W. Jensen has a memorable canvas in his "The Green Pool," a Texas painting, a yellow cliff rising in the background, burroes in the foreground delicately delighting themselves in the feel of water as the stream, before it falls into the pool which gives the picture its title, breaks in a shallow sheet over the sandy soil. It is a fascinating painting both because of its context and its color.

Adam Emory Albright offers a group of charming studies of children painted in tempora, which gives a more tender atmosphere to his picture than does the more familiar oil. Chief among these attractive child pictures are the little boy dragging a stream with a net, the little girl mothering two smaller infants by the fire, and the two lads by the old stump, testing, one is sure, the temper of the minnows in the slow flowing stream by the interposition of worm-laden hooks between ripple and ripple.

Painter of Decided Talent.

Florence White Williams is a painter with decided talent. Her work is fresh, vigorous, enthusiastic and original. She has the gift of telling a straight story that is a godsend in these times of round-about fables built up on the fallacy of the importance of looking at the world up-side-down. She sees straight and paints straight; for both of which we are grateful.

Miss Williams has a particularly beautiful and far-reaching landscape, a captivating affair of folded hills, water, trees, houses, and shadows in "Connecticut River Valley." You could lose yourself in that countryside and never regret a moment of your loss. She has another splendid canvas in "Tide-Mill." This tide-mill is an institution in the village of East Booth Bay, Maine; it is one of the very few tide-mills still in operation. The technique of the mill does not matter; what matters is the power with which the artist has painted it and the live color that makes of it an irresistible find.

A lovely arrangement, "Flowering Almond," by Miss Williams is an attractive bridge to Core Bliss Taylor's several delightful paintings. Mrs. Taylor shows a portrait of her daughter, simply painted but charming. Her garden scenes are full of beauty; "My Atelier in Paris," an interior with chair and window is exquisite.

Varied Landscapes.

When one uses the word "exquisite" the eye wanders to the painting of Alex Fournier. Mr. Fournier is represented by a number of landscapes, each of which merits the adjective. His "The Glory of Spring" is an impossibly lovely moment in May when blossom laden trees line the road, weighted with a cargo of pink and white that scents the fields for miles around. As lovely a picture is the more sober one, "Between Showers," in which a brook rambles over stones in the shelter of trees, trying on their new April dress of the tenderest green. A gray sky that breaks into blue at the slightest provocation spills a silvery magic which is caught up by air and water. Still another delightful picture is "The Brook in Autumn," delicate in coloring and fascinating in its glory of sun breaking through a grove of white birch.

Charles W. Dahlgren shows several well painted landscapes, a number of them the result of a trip to New Mexico. He, too, has fallen under the spell of the yellow aspen and the Indian in blanket finery. One of his finest paintings in this show is his still life of vegetables and flowers. It is splendidly handled. Near it hangs the virile and blunt, but picturesque and strong flower arrangement of Macena Barton. To tell the truth, Macena Barton is the rock of modernist adventuring against which the various waves of the exhibit try themselves, often with success, sometimes with failure. She is almost a touchstone by which the academic painting present may find itself dross or gold. Some of the pictures her presence does not harm, some it smothers, kills outright, or belittles.

Miss Barton is one of the hardest working artists any city has ever known. Whatever success she attains she will have earned. Beyond all cavil her talent is growing with each succeeding year. She has a decided genius. Her mannerisms may be forgiven her in the light of her sincerity and craft. She shows in this exhibit two self-portraits. The good taste in exhibiting one may be questioned, though it is a delicate piece of drawing; two other portraits, full length, are admirably handled; a white Spitz dog is a superb canvas and a basket of spilling peaches is excellently done, the peaches in color and texture ranking with the best in that sort of painting one could find anywhere. It is beyond doubt that Macena Barton has talent; even genius is not too big a word to employ in characterizing her ability.

The exhibit will continue to April 19.

News of Art and Artists.

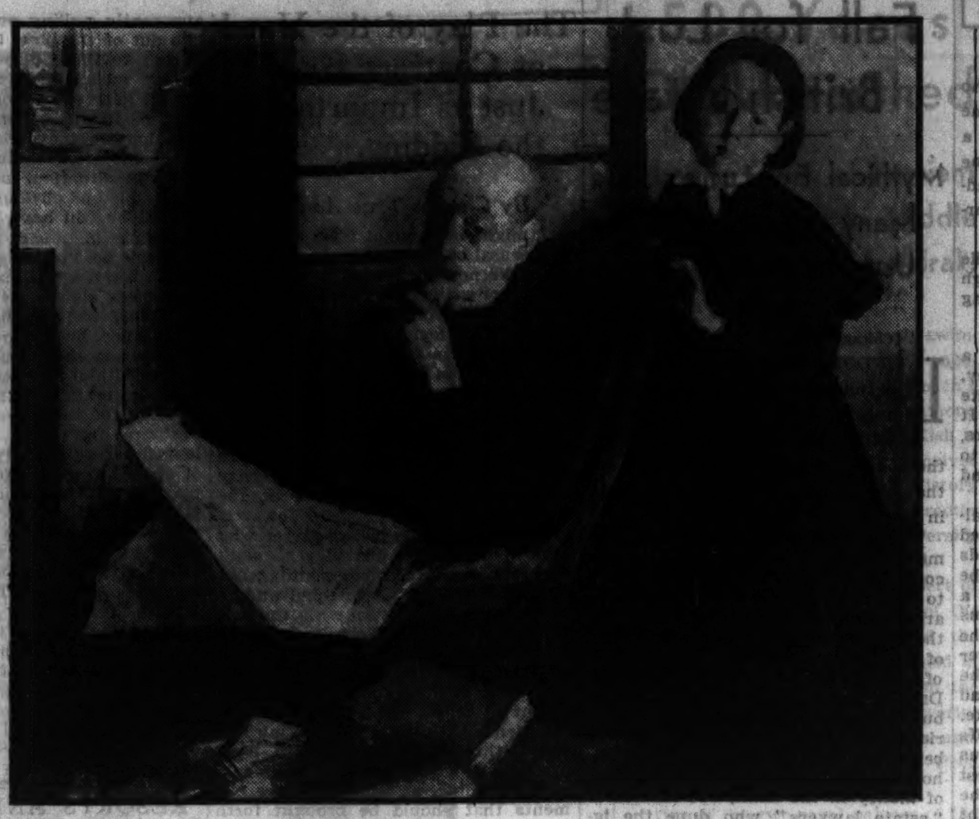
The Arts club show opened too late for this column; it will be mentioned at length next Sunday.

The most important opening of the week upon which we are entering is the loan exhibition of paintings and pastels from the private collection of Mrs. L. L. Coburn under the auspices of the Antiquarian society of the Art institute. The paintings will be hung in an upstairs gallery of the institute. Tea will be served at the formal opening Wednesday. Mrs. Potter Palmer is president of the Antiquarians and Mrs. J. Medill Patterson is vice president.

The Knoedler galleries, 622 South Michigan avenue, announce the opening tomorrow of an exhibition of paintings by Abby White Howells.

The Cordon club announces an exhibit of paintings by Anna Lee Stacey opening April 8 and continuing to May 8.

The Swedish-American Art association will hold an exhibit of paintings and sculpture, starting Wednesday, April 6, at the Illinois Woman's Athletic club.



"UNCLE AND NIECE," by Edgar Degas. The Antiquarian society of the Art institute is sponsoring a superb exhibition of modern French paintings from the private collection of Mrs. L. L. Coburn, starting Wednesday, April 6, at the Art institute. The Degas canvas is one of the most important and most delightful the exhibit will yield, and yet so rich in brilliance is this collection that no picture will prove dull or unimportant.

Roto Depicts Work by Son of Great Artist

By James O'Donnell Bennett.

THIS morning's color page of THE TRIBUNE'S rotogravure section is a birthday tribute to a painter whose portraits represent the enthronement of charm.

Fifty-one years ago this week Bernard Boutet de Monvel was born in Paris, son of the great Maurice Boutet de Monvel, whose name is memorably linked with the artistic glories of Chicago because in our Art institute (gallery G. 31) hangs his majestic painting, packed with drama, with history and with beauty—"Joan of Arc at the Court of Chinon."

BERNARD BOUTET DE MONVEL.

This picture, measuring 12x22½ feet, was presented to their fellow citizens of Chicago in 1911 by members of the family of the late Edward L. Brewster as a memorial to him. It is the final study for one of the series of murals with which Maurice Boutet de Monvel was to have adorned the memorial church in Dom-rémy, Joan of Arc's birthplace. Our treasure is the only one of those final studies which the artist's health permitted him to reproduce on the walls of the church. It represents the crucial moment when Joan, kneeling before Charles VII., declares him to be the king.

The Drama of Identification.

"I am not the king," Charles had said to the peasant girl, wishing to put to the test her claims to heavenly inspiration.

"You are he, gentle prince, and no other," Joan replied—"the King of Heaven sends word to you by me that you shall be anointed and crowned."

Of this picture and its companion pieces illustrating the life of Joan of Arc, "The Studio" said in 1922 that they "would alone have sufficed to make Maurice Boutet de Monvel famous."

And Dr. Harshe, director of the Art institute, pointed out an important aspect of its technique as he stood before the painting.

"In addition to its loveliness of color and line," he said, "this work presents a technical expedient that may almost be called original, so seldom had it been employed until Maurice Boutet de Monvel revived it after four centuries. That expedient is the raising of the pattern in gesso—a ground of prepared plaster—on the canvas and then gilding it or laying silver leaf on it to enrich its surface. This had not been done, save sporadically, since the Spanish primitives of the fifteenth century."

One Picture Leads to Another.

If you will take your stand before the "St. George and the Dragon," which hangs on the south wall of the great gallery 35 of the institute—the gallery containing El Greco's mighty "Assumption of the Virgin"—you will see an example of the early use of gesso. The name of the painter of the "St. George" has vanished in the mists of time, his picture being identified only as of the Catalan school of the fifteenth century, but it is amazing how his work retains its splendor after four centuries.

"There are," said Dr. Harshe, reverting to the Joan, "rich stores of archæology in this scene of the identification in the grand logis of the castle at Chinon, a portion of the structure still standing. Maurice Boutet de Monvel went to all the available sources of information on the architecture, furniture, and costume of France in the third decade of the fifteenth century and the result is not only a beautiful piece of painting but an authentic historical document."

Maurice's son—the Bernard Boutet de Monvel of this morning's color page—has made his fame in a field very different to that in which the father won enduring triumphs. For Bernard is a suave portrait painter to the world of fashion, bringing great delicacy and much distinction to his work—so much distinction, indeed, that it has been said of him that he can make even a fashion plate a work of art.

Dignifying Industrial Art.

To a fashion plate he can give a statuesque Greek purity, and some of his Paris admirers insist that it is due to him, and to the group comprising Benito Benigni, Henri Mercier and other specialists in fashion drawing, that there is no longer a barrier between pure art and industrial art. But has too much fashion, too much of fleeting charm, crept into Bernard Boutet de Monvel's portraits? Has his abundant skill been rendered a shade trifling by his work in the once despised field of industrial art? Are, in short, his portraits less good because his fashion drawings are extraordinarily fine? Those are nice questions.

"Yes, yes," say austere critics of painting when they contemplate the younger Boutet de Monvel's portraits, "they are very charming things, but . . ."

Then they shake their heads and their tone becomes plaintive.

"Essentially society productions," they continue, "and belonging to a pallid school of fashionable portraitists whose work has a great deal of charm but whose significance is not large."

So saying, a critic who judges by the standards which Dr. Harshe employs will lead you to such a portrait as Gustave Courbet's "Mère Grégoire." It hangs on the west wall of gallery 40 of the institute, and is pronounced by Dr. Harshe to be not only one of the glories of the museum but also the greatest Courbet in this country.

Bidding you hold alongside the Courbet your reproductions in color of portraits by Bernard Boutet de Monvel, the austere critics gaze with awe upon the "Mère Grégoire" and say, "This is flesh and life," adding, with a glance at the reproductions in your hand, "and those are pretty, porcelain-like affairs. They are paper-thin, but charm saves them. In the fine tradition of Quentin de Latour, a wonderful collection of whose pastels you may see today in the old French city of St. Quentin, they perform for our queens of society the service Latour performed for Marie Antoinette and the ladies of her court. They are sweet and vivacious and they impart the sitters' charm. Bernard Boutet de Monvel is an accomplished draughtsman and has a fine sense of design, but it is a draughtsman's rather than a painter's design. Refinement, yes; and subtlety from the standpoint of design, but not from the standpoint of characterization."

Such is the verdict of the austere.

A Wonderful Family.

Study of the work and the history of the Boutet de Monvels leads you far afield in the annals of French culture. For more than a century and a half the family has glittered with talent. Everything it has touched it has adorned, and it has touched painting, acting, play writing, opera, biography—and fashion plates. In the eighteenth century it produced Jacques Monvel, excellent composer and greatest comedian of the revolutionary period. Jacques was the father of Mlle. Mars, who for nearly forty years was the foremost comedienne of the French stage and whose style was so subtle and resourceful that she created a sensation when she played a part apparently so thankless as that of a deaf and dumb girl. One of the most accomplished military engineers in our revolution was a member of this family. In the nineteenth century the high light of the resplendent line was Maurice of the Joan of Arc murals, and now, in the twentieth, we have Bernard of the grace and charm in portraiture, and his brother Roger, who is a writer of distinction.

When Chicago Was Young

The tasks once welcome; evening asks for peace.
Time claims his tribute; silence now is golden;
Let me not vex the too long suffering lyre;
Though to your love untiring still beholden,
The curfew tells me: 'Cover up the fire.'"

Mark Twain's speech at this dinner was so whimsical and apt. How I wish I could have heard him give it! Thinking you may have missed seeing the account of it, I want to copy a little of it for you. He said: "The first great man who ever wrote me a letter was Oliver Wendell Holmes. He was also the first great literary man I ever stole anything from . . . and that is how I came to write to him and he to me.

"When my first book was new, a friend of mine said: 'The dedication is very neat.' I said yes, I thought it was. My friend went on: 'I always admired it, even before I saw it in "Innocents Abroad."' I naturally said: 'What do you mean? Where did you ever see it before?' He replied: 'I saw it first, some years ago, as Dr. Holmes' dedication to his "Songs in Many Keys."'

"Of course, my first impulse was to prepare his remains for burial, but on reflection, I said I would reprieve him for a moment or two and give him a chance to prove his assertion, if he could. We stepped into a book store and he did prove it. I had really stolen that dedication almost word for word. I could not imagine how this curious thing had happened. However, I thought the thing out and solved the mystery. Two years before I had been laid up a couple of weeks in the Sandwich islands and had read and reread Dr. Holmes' poems until my mental reservoir was filled up to the brim with them. The dedication lay on top, and so, by-and-by, I unconsciously stole it.

"Well, of course, I wrote to Dr. Holmes and told him I hadn't meant to steal, and he wrote right back and said in the kindest way that it was all right and no harm done, adding that he believed that we all unconsciously worked over ideas gathered in reading or hearing, imagining they were original with ourselves. He stated a truth—and did it in such a pleasant way, and salved my sore spot so gently and healingly that I was rather glad I had committed the crime, for the sake of that letter. I afterwards called on him and told him to make perfectly free with any ideas of mine that struck him as being good protoplasm for poetry. He could see by that that there wasn't anything mean about me, so we got along, right from the start."

I can just imagine how Dr. Holmes enjoyed this speech, with its familiarity, which no one else could adopt without offense, but which seems good fun when Mr. Clemens does it. I notice in the account of the banquet that one speaker mentions Dr. Holmes' fine children, worthy of their parents. I am glad to know this, for Dr. Holmes has always been an idol of mine and I am glad to know that every circumstance of his life is so ideal. Very often the sons of a great and wise man are not at all like their father.

A letter from a friend in Paris tells of seeing the ex-Empress Eugenie during her brief visit there. It was Eugenie's first sight of that city since she quitted it in 1870, flying to England for refuge. My friend happened to be in the railway station and saw the ex-empress pass, dressed in deep mourning and heavily veiled.

She writes: "Not a word was uttered, not a cry raised as the poor lady, leaning heavily on the arm of the Duc de Bassano, walked along the line of people to the carriage waiting for her. Heads were bared," the tale went on, "as she passed and all seemed to feel the deepest sympathy for her, recalling the days, less than ten years ago, when she was in the zenith of her beauty and influence. One couldn't help contrasting that with her present condition, a childless widow and an exile. They say her sorrows have greatly altered her and that grief has left its marks on her face. She was only in Paris for a night, being on her way to visit the countess of Montijo."

Do you suppose the young fellow in Portland, Me., who claims to be Charlie Ross is really the child stolen from his home so long ago? Identification will be hard now. I notice he claims he was taken to Brazil by Jesse James and others in a private schooner. Do you suppose that mystery will ever be cleared up?

Alexander Macleod and Martha Junior have gone to Bournique's to a Saturday night assembly. Sandy doesn't dance well, but Mr. Bournique is so patient and long suffering, Sandy says if any one can pound the steps into him Mr. Bournique will do it. Sandy, of course, has little time for social functions, what with his medical studies, but he wants to be able to attend the Christmas dances with some degree of satisfaction, so he practices faithfully. It is amusing to see this tall Scot, who hates tripping the light fantastic toe, trying so hard to master the steps all because of Martha. The "German" continues to be the great feature of these assemblies. I think there never was a dance so uniformly popular.

We attended a very elegant reception at the A. A. Carpenter's handsome Dearborn avenue home last night.

Bedtime. So I must say good night.

Much love to a dear old friend,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Footnotes.

Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, who has just retired from the Supreme court bench of the United States, is a son of Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes, one of America's most beloved and admired writers in the days that "Martha" pictures.

The mystery of the "lost Charlie Ross" was never cleared up, though his father spent a fortune seeking him.

"My little home town! It is a charming spot in the Bureau valley, and was used years ago as a favorite camping ground by the Indians. It was early settled by New Englanders, who found its topography similar to the countryside they had left behind them.

"The little village nestles in a valley surrounded on all sides by wooded bluffs. Of the half-dozen main roads leading out from it only one can be followed which does not lead up a steep hill. From each hill one obtains a wonderful panoramic view of the surrounding country and the stranger driving into the town marvels at the beauty of these winding roads and lovely hills, in a so-called prairie state.

"On top of one of the wooded bluffs is the city of the dead, more populous than the village below, for almost every one who wanders out into the bustling world wishes to be brought back to this quiet, lovely spot for the long rest. You may never have heard the name of this little town. The Indians christened it 'Tiskilwa,' which in their poetic language means 'Gem of the Valley.' MARY D. LEE."

Edward G. Oldefest of 232 East Erie street offers: "A youngster of the neighborhood lunched at our house and being fond of boiled potatoes, said, 'Please pass the spoiled buds.'"

"C. H.," Chicago, sends a similar one in which a bashful guest at the dinner table requested the young lady he secretly adored to "Pass the pig's fleas," growing red as a lobster as he realized that he had said a terrible thing when he meant to ask her to pass the figs, please.

Miss Sylvia Ragon of 40 East Huron street sends one of her own Spoonerisms: "As a college freshman, I was helping in the dean's office. A student came in to see him and being requested to tell the student to wait awhile, as the dean was busy, I told the caller that the bean was dizzy."

Aquatic Sports Draw Crowds to Bermuda in April

APRIL is a happy month for sportsmen in Bermuda, for it is then that the water sports are at their height.

With its remarkable coast line of coves, inlets, sandy beaches, and rocky stretches, the ocean in every mood is seen in Bermuda. In April the visitor sees the sheltered arms of the sea dotted with craft of every conceivable type, from dinghies and rowboats filled with youngsters wending their way through blue waters of a tranquil cove, to the palatial yachts of American millionaires. Aquaplanes, skimming over the water, provide a new and unusual thrill to Americans accustomed to the pastime of dodging motor cars when at home.

Yankees Still Fall for Lost British Estate

Mythical Fortunes Lure Many Dupes, with the Usual Resultant Wails.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—The biggest piece of international bait ever dangled before suckers at home or abroad still finds poor fish to swallow the hook, the line, and the sinker. It's that old morsel—the ancestral estate in England.

Wails go up periodically as demands, appeals, threats, and claims come by letter from the United States to officials in London, putting forward arguments based on the front page of the family Bible and the wheedlings of slick confidence men. Thousands of Jenningses, Blakes, Hydes, and Drakes, not only in the United States but in Canada, Australia, South Africa, and points both east and west believe they have a right to a castle, horses, dogs, vast acres, and piles of money in the bank, but the clever "estate lawyers" who dupe the ignorant into buying shares in such ventures have found most of their victims in America.

Another Warning Issued.

Another warning has just been issued by the American consulate general here. It is a typed, single spaced document seven pages long explaining why attempts to recover such estates are mistakes.

"Large unclaimed estates believed by many to exist in England are in practically every instance entirely mythical," says the consul general's memorandum, which is headed "A Warning," "and reports of vast sums 'awaiting claimants in the Bank of England' or dormant in the courts of chancery are altogether without foundation.

"The collection of money which, it is claimed, is for the purpose of taking legal proceedings to secure for heirs alleged estates of fabulous value in Great Britain has become almost as established a business as that of selling spurious securities to the uninformed. The consulate general in London receives a number of letters each week, sometimes five or six in one day, with regard to nonexistent estates or estates that have been settled for so many years that no British court will reconsider decisions made, in some cases, more than a century ago."

Some Cases in Court.

The statement points out that promoters of these fake schemes for reclaiming supposed estates have sold many "units" for $100 each, and where prospective victims were unable to find that much cash, fractions of units. "Occasionally," it says, "a case is brought before the courts, but the costs are comparatively small and entirely out of proportion to the sums collected as advance fees."

Adams on Contract

The Play of the Hand at Contract Bridge Just as Important as the Bidding.

By Charles True Adams.

IT might be thought from a careful perusal of the vast mass of bridge books now on the market that no author writing on this game knows how to go beyond the bidding of his hand. This logical but unjust conclusion springs from the lack of any information in regard to play in all but very few of the books.

There is a very real and good reason for this seeming discrepancy. Bidding can be taught with a large measure of success from the printed page while play must be learned at the bridge table. It is possible, however, to aid and help the bridge player who wishes to improve his play through suggestions and through pointing out situations to be kept in mind and to be watched for. Also with the use of illustrative hands, similar to those shown in my daily articles, it is possible to point out various types of play in a manner that has [to some extent at least] the effect of actual experience with the cards. In my last twenty-three Sunday articles I have pretty well covered all the elements of the bidding, at least all those elements that should be brought forth and impressed on the mind of the beginner, or somewhat inexperienced player. In order then to arrive at a proper balance I shall, in my next few articles, try to give some general suggestions on the play of the hand to fit the need of both the beginner and average bridge player.

In the first place remember that contract differs from auction in the play in one vital particular. In auction the game was the main objective, regardless of the bid, unless perchance the bid was greater than game. The one thought was game and a declarer would justifiably take a chance between the possibility of a game and being set rather than playing safely for an intermediate declaration. This is entirely abolished at contract. Since you cannot score more than the declaration, your main object is to make that declaration, and it is only after you are definitely sure of making your declaration that you should even begin to consider the possibility of extra tricks. Your thoughts, then, as the dummy goes down and you gaze into the two hands are, first: Can I make my declaration? Secondly [and a long, long way secondly], can I make any extra tricks?

Your first and most important problem as declarer is to learn to estimate the trick taking value of the two hands before touching a card in the dummy. If the number of tricks needed for your declaration are obviously there, then look around for an opportunity to make some additional tricks. If you are shy of your declaration upon first glance, see if you can't see some way of making up a trick or two that is not obvious at first glance. The simple and obvious way of making extra tricks is by finessing and by setting up long suits in no-trump, and by these two methods and also by discarding and ruffing losing cards when playing at a trump declaration. There are, of course, end plays and other advanced methods of apparently pulling an extra trick or two out of the blue, but those should be left to those players who have a strong, sound basic technique covering all general and usual problems.

While it will be impossible for the beginner or inexperienced player to judge the trick taking value of any intricate situation, he can begin on the simple and obvious types of hands. And, if he will have patience enough before playing a card from the dummy to do his best to gauge the possibility of the combined 26 cards he will find that he is right on the easy ones to start and will gradually, almost unconsciously, build upon this knowledge until far more difficult situations are easily within his reach. Do not be afraid of taking all the time you need to solve the hand before playing that first card from your dummy. A prolonged period of study before the play of the first card followed by a rapid play for the remainder of the hand is a sign of a good bridge player, whereas a quick play of the first few cards and constant indecision thereafter is the sure mark of the weak player. Another thing—no matter how you feel—how frightened you may be—how much you are sure you have dubbed the hand—always strive for a confident, self-assured appearance. There is a great deal of psychology in bridge, in the play as well as in the bidding, and sighs and groans of distress invariably add many undeserved tricks to the opponents' pile.

Life of French Deputy Beset with Troubles

Gets His Drinks Free, but Is Forced by Poverty to Be Own Secretary.

By Alex Small.

PARIS.—[Special.]—A member of the French chamber of deputies receives a salary of 60,000 francs a year, or 5,000 a month, which, it will be agreed, is no princely sum. It would, however, enable the average deputy, who comes from the lower middle classes, to live in at least as good style as that to which he has been accustomed, provided he could keep expenses down to the level he knew as a private individual.

Obviously, he cannot do that. Unless he has other resources, he finds that he has a hard time of it, in spite of various perquisites like free railway fare, free drinks at the bar of the chamber, and an unlimited franking privilege. Deputies who have nothing but their salaries find, for instance, that they cannot pay a secretary, who generally would be but the most modest kind of typist, and that in spite of the outrageously low wages paid that sort of labor in this country.

Act as Own Secretaries.

Yet the deputy needs some sort of secretarial aid if he is going to make any attempt to keep his political fences patched up. Some deputies claim that they can, and do, attend personally to all their correspondence. If so, it must be a good day's work, especially since few of them use machines; most write out all their letters in longhand. During a parliamentary session it is hard to see how they find time to go to sittings, not mention going through the other indispensable gestures of living.

The number of letters received and answered by deputies varies considerably with individuals, but some recently published figures enable us to strike an average. During sessions, there go out of the Palais-Bourbon between 13,000 and 14,000 letters a day; during vacations, the number falls to about 10,000. The total for the year does not ordinarily, then, fall far short of 4,000,000. Each deputy is sending out on an average more than 2,500 letters a year.

Average 18 Letters Daily.

The count, you notice, is only of letters which go through the parliamentary postoffice. It is estimated that this can represent not more than half, probably a little less, of the deputies' total correspondence. If we count 300 working days in the year, it would appear then that the average French deputy answers not less than 18 letters a day.

Most of these letters carry only 50 centimes of postage. Even so, at the chamber stamps to a value of more than 1,500,000 francs are handed out each year. There are supplementary expenses. One item is that of a special kind of forwarding envelope, large and strong enough to carry bulky papers. Of these, 150,000 are used each year at a cost to the government of 36,000 francs.

The deputy has to be careful of his personal contacts also. When a big elector, or even a little elector, comes up to Paris from Villeneuve-sur-Lot, he will go around to see his deputy, who naturally has to do some handshaking.

Time, Hospitality Demands.

Each day during the session the ushers of the chamber transmit an average of 2,000 visitors' slips, each of which often represents more than one person. It is safe to say that each deputy has daily from five to ten visits, either of individuals, of parties, or of delegations. All make demands on his time, and a good number on his hospitality.

The correspondence of a French deputy, it might be supposed, is much like that of an American congressman, or of any member of a democratic assembly anywhere. On this we can only speculate, but there is reason for thinking that as between the American and the French representative of popular sovereignty a marked difference exists in the tone of the letters to be answered.

The French deputy is probably solicited for far more direct, concrete, personal favors than the American representative. In compensation he probably gets a considerably smaller number of letters from causes, societies, and leagues which want the government to make mankind happy immediately in their special way. French Oomers can usually be disregarded or can be put off with the minimum of politeness.

Quest for Decorations.

It would be interesting to know what percentage of the favors demanded of a French deputy is for decorations; it might well be fully half. Not all by any means are for the red ribbon of the Legion of Honor, which can be aspired to only by the big vegetables. But almost any one can lay claim to the academic palms or to the Order of Agricultural Merit. There are other ribbons, too, enough to make every one happy.

After that there is the incessant solicitation for pensions, for tobacco shops, for jobs on the roads. People write to deputies to fix things up for a son who is doing his military service or who has to pass examinations in one of the state schools. They ask him to give a helping hand, financially and socially, to young people who have come to Paris to tempt fortune. It is all in the day's work of a democracy.

A Study in Black

A native black bear "up a tree" at Mount Baker lodge, in northern Washington, offers a picturesque silhouette for the amateur attempts of the tourist-photographer.

Isle of Gotland Wrapped in Haze of Legends and Glory

IN the middle of the Baltic, wrapped in a haze of legends and past greatness, lies Gotland, the island of the old Goths, and Sweden's most remarkable territory from a historic point of view and now one of the favorite tourist spots of Europe.

Centuries before the Viking raids, the Goths, a northern people of high culture, made trading voyages to distant parts. They went eastward and proceeded on the Russian rivers down to the Black and Caspian seas, to the near orient, Greece and Rome. Tens of thousands of Arabian silver coins, masses of Roman emperors' gold coins, vessels and oriental objects from these times and places, and even from China, have been found in the soil of Gotland.

Once a Leader.

The city of Visby rose on the west coast of the island, on an eminence, in terraces from the sea. Later it advanced to a position of commercial importance owing to its intermediate situation in what was then the chief trading route between the near orient and northern Europe. In time the town joined the Hanseatic league, and for a long time occupied a leading position in the trade and politics of northern Europe. Its wealth increased immensely during the eleventh and twelfth centuries, attracting traders from all parts of Europe.

The churches, whose ruins now excite the interest of visitors, were built during that period, as was the immense city wall, which today is the only one of its kind in that part of Europe.

At the end of the thirteenth century the greatness of Visby reached its highest point. New trading routes opened up by the crusaders, the Tartar invasion of Russia, the rise of Lübeck and attacks by enemies contributed, however, to bring about a retrogression.

In the year 1361 the Danish king, Valdemar Atterdag, came with a strong fleet to the shore of Gotland and defeated the Goths in a sanguinary battle.

According to a legend, the king, while disguised, succeeded in gaining the favor of the daughter of one of the burgomasters and in this way got an opportunity to bring his men through one of the city gates. As a punishment the girl was afterward immured alive in one of the towers of the city wall. That tower is to this day called the "Maiden's Tower."

Valdemar exacted a tribute from Visby and sailed away from Gotland with his ships loaded with rich treasure. At Karlsö islands, near Gotland, his ship went down and he himself was barely saved. There is a tale told by the people that during calm and clear weather one can still see the glow from the stolen gems through the water.

The ruins are the most prominent feature of the town. The total length of the city wall is about 10,000 feet, and it has thirty-seven towers varying in height from fifty to sixty feet.

Church Ruins Preserved.

During the middle ages the rich burghers of Visby built no fewer than seventeen churches. Eleven of these have been preserved as ruins, some of them picturesquely beautiful or impressive, and nearly all fine specimens of architecture. St. Catherine's is widely known and admired for its beautiful columns and arches. The mightiest ruin is that of St. Nicholas, the church of the Dominicans. The Holy Ghost church, of octagon form and two-storied, is entirely original in its conception, and of special interest are also the twin churches of St. Hans and St. Per as well as the "sister churches" of St. Drotten and St. Lawrence.

Visby is reached by overnight steamer from Stockholm, and some of the liners on the North Cape cruises in the Baltic make a stop at "The City of Ruins and Roses."

Bathing Pool 1,500 Years Old Unearthed

Found in Ruins of Ancient City of Kish, in Middle of the Desert of Irak.

THE discovery of a great swimming pool with a practically modern circulatory water system in a 1,500 year old royal palace among the ruins of the ancient city of Kish is described in a report recently received at Field Museum of Natural History from Prof. Stephen Langdon, director of the Field museum-Oxford university joint expedition to Mesopotamia.

Kish, in the middle of the desert of Irak, is believed to be the seat of the world's earliest civilization, and the museum expedition is now engaged in its tenth season of excavation on the site. Some of the earlier discoveries date as far back as 5,500 years ago. Following are excerpts from Prof. Langdon's latest report:

"One of the two royal palaces of the Sassanian kings, dating from the early Persian period [about 400 A. D.], has proved to be the palace of Braham Gor, who is mentioned by Omar Khayam.

Pool 45 by 36 Feet.

"The outstanding feature of the building is the great swimming pool in the courtyard. This is a really wonderful structure completely lined with brick. It is about 45 feet long and 36 feet wide, and it had a most elaborate hydraulically operated system of water supply. Water was forced in at one end by the ingenious use of a difference in ground levels, and at the other end was the outflow drain. By careful adjustment the water level was kept at the required height with a gentle flow of water constantly passing through the pool. The great drains are made of tiles and joined together with cement—in the modern manner—and the whole arrangement denotes a high degree of engineering skill.

"In the palace itself we have found a magnificent collection of enameled ware—cups and vases finished in a fascinating blue glaze. Some of them are made in the form of animals, and they are excellent examples of the craft of the potters of the period. There are also a lot of terra cotta heads of men and women—probably inhabitants of the city—and they will give us some idea of what these people looked like. Among the jewelry found are rings of rock crystal and carnelian, all set with silver, earrings of solid gold, and necklaces of precious stones. The expedition has now determined that the Sassanians had a great city at Kish and the ruins which extend over half a mile to the east are all buildings of theirs.

Engineering Difficulties.

"Interesting and important as these discoveries are, they are comparatively small jobs in relation to the main work of the expedition, which is the excavation of the great temple site of the earlier inhabitants of Kish, the Sumerians, and others. Two to three hundred men have been working there each season for ten years, and the work involves great engineering difficulties. The whole of the west side of Nebuchadnezzar's temple has now been exposed, and also the north side of the Sumerian temple underneath it, which was built about 3000 B. C. It is this lower temple which has the two great stage towers. These gigantic structures are built of solid brick and one of them was more than 200 feet high. They are one of the mysteries of Kish. They may be tombs like the pyramids of Egypt, which they greatly resemble, but as yet we do not know."

American Railroads Offer Lowest Rates in History

H. W. SIDDALL.

THE American traveler, offered the lowest railroad rates to his country's resorts and playgrounds in history and given the finest and fastest transportation to these playgrounds in years, will have a bargain year in 1932 and, from present indications in passenger offices the country over, is going to take advantage of it, says H. W. Siddall, chairman of the Trans-Continental Passenger association.

"Coast to coast rates good from the Atlantic to the Pacific are only one of the attractive new travel plans offered by the railroads of the United States this year," Mr. Siddall explains. "Rates for short trips, or long, escorted tours or individual trips, or in coaches or sleeping cars, will make it almost impossible for the vacationist to stay at home this summer.

The Best in Travel.

"The railroads feel, with considerable justification, that the traveler is gradually realizing that railroad travel is best—any way he looks at it. The expense is low; time is saved going and coming from playgrounds; a complete rest is possible on the trip. While other means of transportation look cheaper when rates alone are considered and while many people in the past have figured that driving their own car saves money, train travel is shown, upon analysis, to be cheaper after all. Driving a car for a 12 to 14 hour day is work and not play.

"There never was a finer array of trains to tempt the travelers than the railroads have running today. Marked improvements have been made in the last few years and are being made every day. It's not unusual to pick up a newspaper and learn that some railroad has introduced some new facility to add to the comfort of its passengers. In fact, trains today have become so completely equipped that one feels as if he has taken his apartment along when he travels on a transcontinental trip.

A Year of Big Events.

"This year is brimming with sports events, major business and political conventions, and other activities that should draw thousands to all parts of the country. And the national parks are still the finest to be found in the world.

"Vacation days are coming. America has fast and famous trains. Playgrounds are calling. The railroads have responded with extremely low fares and we feel sure the public will take full advantage of the travel bargains."

Colonial Gardens to Be Opened to Public April 25

RICHMOND, Va.—The Garden club of Virginia has issued an official list of ninety-eight historic colonial gardens, all privately owned, that will be thrown open to the public for the period beginning April 25 and ending April 30. The announcement was made through the Virginia state chamber of commerce by Mrs. Thomas S. Wheelwright, chairman of "visiting garden week in Virginia."

The gardens include many spots of public interest, such as old Chatham, on the hills overlooking the Rappahannock at Fredericksburg, the famous estates on the James river plantation belt, and the homes of Presidents Thomas Jefferson, James Monroe, James Madison, Tyler, and Harrison.

Such places as Gunston hall, home of George Mason, author of the Virginia bill of rights; the home of Mary, the mother of George Washington; of John Marshall, chief justice of the United States; the Adam Thoroughgood house, oldest brick house in the colonies, and the ancestral estates of more than fifty of the first families of Virginia, are on the list.
